

GLOBE IN MINNEAPOLIS.

Subscribers and Dealers should leave their orders at the Minneapolis Book Exchange, 20 Washington Avenue South.

FATAL BRAIN CLOT

A SUDDEN SUMMONS FOR MRS. NANCY M. HARDY, OF MINNEAPOLIS.

IN THE ACT OF RETIRING

Death Believed to Have Occurred Friday Night, While the Body Was Not Discovered Until Sunday—Gus Swanson's Fall May Prove Fatal—Church Commission Spends a Quiet Sunday.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 30.—Mrs. Nancy M. Hardy was found dead in her room on the third floor of 323 North Third street this morning. She had died while in the act of retiring, her corpse being stretched on top of the bed.

When the body was discovered on Friday night, it was found in a position which would indicate that she had been in the act of retiring. A large blood clot was found on the brain. A blood vessel had been ruptured and death was instantaneous.

It is evident that Mrs. Hardy had died shortly after 10 o'clock Friday night. Her dead body lay undiscovered all day Saturday. Friday night she had spent in Miss Grabbill's room, and she seemed very jolly and happy.

She left for her own apartments about 10 o'clock and must have died in a short time. Her room was locked every day, and it was supposed that she had gone out as usual Saturday. Nothing was thought to be wrong until today.

Mrs. Hardy was a widow, sixty-two years of age. She was a seamstress and has lived in Minneapolis thirty-five years. She was well known to the families of some of the best known and most prominent people in the city, and her circle of acquaintances was very large.

Mrs. Hardy's nephew, residing at Robbinsdale, took charge of the remains and will have tonight for South End, Ind., her old home. Brief funeral services will be held at the vestry of Westminster church at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon. Rev. Dr. Hunter will officiate.

Death Due to a Fall. MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 30.—Gus Swanson, an ironworker, 30 years old, living at 214 Thirtieth avenue south, was found early this morning by the police near Ninth and Cedar streets unconscious and with a bad wound in the head. He was removed to the hospital and died several hours later.

The body was taken to the morgue, where a post mortem was held. It was found that a fracture of the skull had caused death. Governor Dennis had not decided last evening whether or not to hold an inquest. It is believed his death was the result of an accidental fall.

Their Sunday Quiet. MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 30.—The committee of the Eastern League, from the Methodist book committee, which is in the city with a view to possibly locating the International Methodist conference, held in the city with 1,000 in Minneapolis, spent the Sabbath very quietly.

In the morning they went in a body to the Westminster church, and later visited several other churches. They will leave for Chicago this evening, which city they have also visited the general conference.

Church Dedicated. MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 30.—The ceremonies were held at 10 o'clock this morning for the dedication of the new church of St. Paul, M. E. church, to the service of God under the pastorate of Bishop R. W. Arnett, in the presence of a large congregation of people.

Anxious to Die. MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 30.—Albert Ryan made an unsuccessful attempt to hang himself at the central police station today. Jailer John McKenna was on duty when Ryan was taken to the cell, and he was found hanging from the ceiling of the cell.

MINNEAPOLIS BREVITIES. MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 30.—Walter Smith, formerly of the firm of Pillsbury, Walter Smith & Co., was arrested Saturday night on a charge of larceny of a watch.

There was a large attendance of members at the meeting of Mankato Lodge No. 2, B. P. O. E. R. S., at the residence of the lodge, which was held at the residence of Frank Rice, of St. Paul. Mr. Rice was accompanied by John E. King and C. S. Barton, of St. Paul.

Hardwick's First Election. LIVERNE, Minn., Oct. 30.—The village of Hardwick held its first election. The following officers were chosen: John B. Iverson, president; H. T. Halvorson, James P. Kennedy and John Overland, trustees; George A. Ross, recorder; M. Larson, treasurer; William Ross and F. W. Case, justices of the peace; C. J. Moe and Thomas Kennedy Jr., constables.

Michael Martin is recovering from injuries received in a vicious runaway. He was thrown from his buggy and lay in the road unconscious for several hours before he was found.

Farmer Found Hanging. ALBERT LEA, Minn., Oct. 30.—(Special.)—About 6 o'clock this morning Christian Lund was found hanging from a tree in a field near his home. As he did not return as usual, search was made and his lifeless body was found hanging in the tree. The cause of the hanging is not known, but it is believed that Lund was of sound mind and was not insane.

Found a Counterfeit Den. LE ROY, Minn., Oct. 30.—A party of boys, while exploring a cave in the river bank in Frankford county, found the plates and other tools for making counterfeit money. A quantity of the counterfeit money was found, and the boys were arrested and taken to the county jail.

Springfield, Minn., Oct. 30.—At the last meeting of the L. C. ladies passed a resolution to the effect that they will remove their hats at all public gatherings.

New Railroad at Atkin. ATKIN, Minn., Oct. 30.—The new north and south railroad, long eagerly looked for by Atkin county people, is nearer realization,

IT ENDS AGREEMENTS

CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW DISCUSSES THE RECENT JOINT TRAFFIC DECISION

WHAT THE ROADS DESIRE

It is a Pooling Agreement Under the Control of the Interstate Commerce Commission—President of the New York Central for the Regulation of Rates—The Effect of the Decision.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Chauncey M. Depew, having made a study of the supreme court's decision in the Joint Traffic association case, expressed himself as follows: "The decision necessitates the dissolution of the Joint Traffic association, and the effect of the decision is that there shall be no association among the roads which shall have any understanding or agreement in regard to rates either for the maintenance of rates or for the prevention of competition."

The object of the Joint Traffic association was first, to assist the interstate commerce act; second, to prevent secret rate cutting, and, third, to prevent the favoritism to great shippers and great cities which are gradually wiping out intermediate towns and the small business men.

The object of the people who framed the interstate commerce act, is that in supposing that in preventing the railroad from agreeing upon the rates, they were getting lower rates, and for the purpose of preventing discrimination. The legislation is based upon the idea that there is but one rate for a week line, and that it is possible for a week line to have a large shipment at the hands of a receiver and have no obligation to ship other lines, and that the rate to go into bankruptcy by allowing this rate, and so they let the weaker line have this rate or the stronger line have this rate, and regular and reasonable rates.

The effect of this is very self-evident. The roads are now being forced to make their rates as low as the market will bear, and the product is much cheaper than the people who are situated upon other lines or who are to market from other lines, than the terminus of the bankrupt line, that they drive them out of business.

The objection to a pooling law has always been that the railroad will combine to raise prices. It is apparently useless for the railroad man to say what he knows to be fact, that the demands of the different markets, the conditions of the railroads and the conditions of the different centers at which freight is gathered, make it impossible for the railroad to have uniform rates. Railroads are not only willing but anxious that this danger be obviated by giving the government control of the railroads, and by pooling rates. The railroads ask for no pooling law, except on these conditions:

First—that the pooling shall not be made until it has been approved by the interstate commerce commission. Second—that if the rates prove oppressive or unjust in the traffic which is subject to the pooling, the interstate commerce commission shall have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

IT ENDS AGREEMENTS

CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW DISCUSSES THE RECENT JOINT TRAFFIC DECISION

WHAT THE ROADS DESIRE

It is a Pooling Agreement Under the Control of the Interstate Commerce Commission—President of the New York Central for the Regulation of Rates—The Effect of the Decision.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Chauncey M. Depew, having made a study of the supreme court's decision in the Joint Traffic association case, expressed himself as follows: "The decision necessitates the dissolution of the Joint Traffic association, and the effect of the decision is that there shall be no association among the roads which shall have any understanding or agreement in regard to rates either for the maintenance of rates or for the prevention of competition."

The object of the Joint Traffic association was first, to assist the interstate commerce act; second, to prevent secret rate cutting, and, third, to prevent the favoritism to great shippers and great cities which are gradually wiping out intermediate towns and the small business men.

The object of the people who framed the interstate commerce act, is that in supposing that in preventing the railroad from agreeing upon the rates, they were getting lower rates, and for the purpose of preventing discrimination. The legislation is based upon the idea that there is but one rate for a week line, and that it is possible for a week line to have a large shipment at the hands of a receiver and have no obligation to ship other lines, and that the rate to go into bankruptcy by allowing this rate, and so they let the weaker line have this rate or the stronger line have this rate, and regular and reasonable rates.

The effect of this is very self-evident. The roads are now being forced to make their rates as low as the market will bear, and the product is much cheaper than the people who are situated upon other lines or who are to market from other lines, than the terminus of the bankrupt line, that they drive them out of business.

The objection to a pooling law has always been that the railroad will combine to raise prices. It is apparently useless for the railroad man to say what he knows to be fact, that the demands of the different markets, the conditions of the railroads and the conditions of the different centers at which freight is gathered, make it impossible for the railroad to have uniform rates. Railroads are not only willing but anxious that this danger be obviated by giving the government control of the railroads, and by pooling rates. The railroads ask for no pooling law, except on these conditions:

First—that the pooling shall not be made until it has been approved by the interstate commerce commission. Second—that if the rates prove oppressive or unjust in the traffic which is subject to the pooling, the interstate commerce commission shall have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

The objection is raised that the government cannot control the railroads. It is true, then all governments are failures when responsibilities devolve upon them. The railroads are not only willing but anxious that the interstate commerce commission be strengthened; if in its present form it is not entirely satisfactory, the government should have the right to step in and right the wrong, if there is any wrong.

A Little Want Tells the Story Everywhere.

CLIPPING WANTS AT REDUCED RATES:

Table listing various types of ads and their rates: Agents and Agencies (20 words or less 20c), Board Offered (20 words or less 10c), Business Chances (20 words or less 10c), Business Personal (20 words or less 20c), etc.

PAYMENT STRICTLY IN ADVANCE.

SITUATIONS WANTED ADVS.

Try The Globe's Popular Wants and Be Convinced.

Agents and Agencies.

AGENTS—Our Perfect Steak Baster is a success, is in demand, sells rapidly, big profits. Perfect Mfg. Co., Port Washington, Ind.

AGENTS—Wonderful discovery; "sugarine," small package equals 100 pounds sugar; as tasteless money-saver; write for sample. Krueger Mfg. Co., Chicago.

SHOE TRADE—Wanted, good bottom finisher or one who will fill in time in second last. Address C. S. Globe.

Help Wanted—Males.

HOUSEMAN—Wanted, experienced and steady houseman at Hotel Metropolitan.

MEN TO REPRESENT US in our advertising department; $20 to $75 monthly; enclose recent and four-cent stamps for particulars and contract. Fisher Chemical Co., St. Paul, Minn.

PAPERHANGER—Wanted, paperhanger at 67 West Seventh st., come early, ready for work; small job.

STENOGRAPHER—Wanted, competent male stenographer for railroad office; salary $50 monthly; send resume to address E. W. Stuart, King Henry, Jackson county, Minn.

TAILOR—Wanted, tailor, at 10 West 26th St.

TAILOR AND PRESSER to press pants and suits in cutting. Address K 98, Globe.

WANTED—Men to send for our free illustrated catalogue, showing how to learn barber trade in eight weeks; now is the best season to begin; learn a trade and be independent; splendid opportunity; positions guaranteed; tools donated; constant practice; express instructions. Motor Barber College, 232 Washington av., St. Minneapolis.

YOUNG MAN OR YOUNG LADY wanted at St. Paul Business College to work for tuition. 22 East Sixth St., St. Paul, Minn.

WANTED—Married couple for farm work; one child not objected to. Address E. W. Stuart, King Henry, Jackson county, Minn.

WANTED—A strong boy, about 17. Apply to Keeling Sign Co., Seventh and Cedar.

$100.00 PER MONTH and expenses; must have some experience in liquor business. Send self-addressed envelope to Liquor Dealers' Supply Co., Kansas City, Mo.

Help Wanted—Females.

CANVASER—Wanted, a good lady canvasser, one, for light, pleasant work. 9, Globe.

GRADUATE of shorthand school can find opportunity to get office experience (no salary) by addressing W. G. Globe.

HOUSEWORK—Wanted, a competent girl for housework; good wages. 482 Holly av., near Arundel.

HOUSEWORK—Wanted, good girl for general housework, immediately. 515 St. Peter st.

HOUSEWORK—Wanted, a young girl to work for board and attend school, in family of two. 1100 Hennepin.

HOUSEWORK—Wanted, a good girl for general housework, 139 Colfax av.

HOUSEWORK—Competent girl wanted for general housework; two in family. 698 Marshall av.

HOUSEWORK—Wanted, young girl to assist in family of three. Call mornings. 363 Eleventh st.

HOUSEWORK—Wanted, girl for general housework; must be a good cook. 516 Ash st.

HOUSEWORK—Wanted, young girl to assist in general housework; small family. 313 East Tenth st.

HOUSEWORK—Good girl wanted at once for general housework at 185 McNeal, corner Leach st.

HOUSEKEEPER—Wanted, a middle-aged woman or widow to act as housekeeper; at once. Address M. Boyer, 247 Edmund st.

HOUSEWORK—Wanted, good girl for general housework. Apply at once, 708 Marshall av.

HOUSEWORK—Wanted, girl for general housework. 181 Third st.

HOUSEWORK—Wanted, good girl for general housework; call Sunday, 796 Selby.

HOUSEWORK—Wanted, a girl for general housework. 899 Eleventh st., near Victoria.

HOUSEWORK—Wanted, a girl to assist with housework; no washing. 389 Eleventh st.

HOUSEWORK—Girl wanted for light housework; family of two. 222 Kitchan gr at the New England Coffee House, 329 Jackson st.

LADIES to embroider; good paying, easy work sent to your home. Address W. C. Embroidery Works, 25 Duane st., New York City.

LADIES everywhere to mail circulars, samples and copy letters to home. Reply with stamped envelope. Peermore Co., South Bend, Ind.

OPERATORS—Operators wanted at once to operate all kinds of machinery, experienced hands can obtain steady employment. Apply Gutterman Bros., Fifth and Sixth sts.

PROFITABLE HOME WORK—We want a few men or women in every town to make novelties for us at their homes, day or evening, for 25 cents. Write for particulars according to time devoted to work; easily learned; no canvassing; steady employment; no traveling. Write for particulars to W. C. Embroidery Works, 25 Duane st., New York City.

WANTED—Competent girl to do first work in family of four; wages, $18. Inquire at once at 855 Dayton av.

Hotels.

WORKINGMEN'S HOME—All new, remodeled, furnished; large reading and sitting room; a good, cheap home for the winter. Corner Eighth and Robert.

HOTEL IMPERIAL—New, remodeled, furnished steam-heated rooms, with all conveniences; cheap for the winter. 18 East Eighth, near Wabasha.

COMPLETE manufacturing jeweler's outfit for sale; cheap; must be sold. P. M. Cameron, 163 Eleventh st., St. Paul.

FOR SALE—Regardless of cost and at whatever it will bring, a number of fine leather upholstered and solid hardwood household furniture, patent rockers, couches, book case, rugs, tables and pictures, at room 904 Pioneer Press building, sale to take place at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 1. Everything to be positively sold at that time regardless of price.

FOR SALE, at half price, fine carved oak bedstead, with bed, side and chest, will exchange or sell ordinary cook stove. Address O 83, Globe.

FOR SALE, at 247 Wabasha st.

COMPLETE manufacturing jeweler's outfit for sale; cheap; must be sold. P. M. Cameron, 163 Eleventh st., St. Paul.

FOR SALE—Regardless of cost and at whatever it will bring, a number of fine leather upholstered and solid hardwood household furniture, patent rockers, couches, book case, rugs, tables and pictures, at room 904 Pioneer Press building, sale to take place at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 1. Everything to be positively sold at that time regardless of price.