A Foolish Performance.

The press of Minnesota does not do justice either to itself or to the commonwealth and its citizens because it seeks to make it appear that something in the line of reaction has taken place as the result of the election of John Lind to the governorship.

Palaver for England.

At the dinner of the chamber of commerce in New York, last Tuesday evening, President Alex. E. Orr got a fog to his patriotism as to proffer a toast to Queen Victoria previous to the announcement of that which is always given first, to the president of the United States.

The Situation in Cuba.

The people of the United States who sit in their homes with their feet on skins and furs of wild animals captured in sport in the Northwest game fields can hardly appreciate the conditions of the native Cuba when he has reached a point at which it may be said he has in his own hands the power to create for himself a government for and of his own people.

was probably as startling to the Cuban as it was to the Spaniard himself. Now we have a point where a proper rule in Cuba must be exercised. Fresh propositions are presented to our people in this connection.

It is not to be doubted that our military forces in Cuba have observed the same degree of respect to a fallen foe as was evinced by our naval commanders at the time Cervera's fleet went to the bottom of the Caribbean sea.

The State Press.

John Lind is being jollied by everybody—his own people, his friends, his enemies, his admirers, his detractors, his supporters, his opponents.

None Younger.

The Buffalo Express says that "Gen. Merritt will probably never return to the Philippines, but will give way to a younger officer."

Temple of Serpents.

The small town of Wards, in the kingdom of Dahomey, is celebrated for its temple of serpents, a long building in which the priests keep upward of 1,000 serpents of all sizes, which they sacrifice to their gods brought to them as offerings by the natives.

The Way of the Lion.

Any old time the British lion is reported to be snarling at the jungle with his tail at half-mast, and a voice that is as hollow as an empty barrel. He might have gone farther and done a more foolish thing than to exalt the queen of England above the chief magistrate of the United States.

Not a Stake Race.

A person "crossed in love" has no business to remain cross during a lifetime. Love cannot be ordered nor driven under racing rules.—New Orleans Picayune.

He is No Groundhog.

There is ground for apprehension that Senator Julius Caesar Burrows, of Michigan, has run the length of his great name.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Looks Black for Him.

A local negro thief got away with a fistful of gold pence. He is written in it.—Philadelphia North American.

The Lanes of Dream.

A song on her lips in the morning, a kiss on her lips at night, a love that is full of wonder, the world is full of light.

Almost Everybody is Sorry that Wyatt Earp isn't going to get into the Corbett-Sharkey fight far enough to have his name knocked off his visor.

A New York woman has a brand-new story. She disappears for a day or two, and on being charged with returning to her husband, with glowing, said she was merely acting as a chaperone

Dramatic and Musical.

IN THE METROPOLITAN. In the bill presented at the Metropolitan yesterday there was included all that there is of value to the taste of today.

It is not to be doubted that our military forces in Cuba have observed the same degree of respect to a fallen foe as was evinced by our naval commanders at the time Cervera's fleet went to the bottom of the Caribbean sea.

Gov. Black, of New York, didn't write his Thanksgiving proclamation until Nov. 17. He doubtless had great difficulty in finding anything to be thankful for.

Speaker Reed ought also perhaps to be permitted to issue a Thanksgiving proclamation. He has more to be thankful for, for instance, than young Mr. Bailey.

It now looks out why Delgman did not kiss the girls of Iowa by wholesale with more freedom. He has recently become engaged to an Iowa girl, and she was looking.

We must have one gloomy moment on Thanksgiving, when we think that ten days later the Fifty-sixth congress will be in session appropriating money which Uncle Sam hasn't got.

That headline "Spain to Yield Soon" is getting tiresome. There were hints growing around that, in the event of congress going Republican, Spain would shake herself out of her boots in about thirty-four seconds.

The State Press.

John Lind is being jollied by everybody—his own people, his friends, his enemies, his admirers, his detractors, his supporters, his opponents.

The state still wags on and will continue to do so, in spite of the dreadful predictions of the prophets. From the going up of the dike to the fall of the house of cards.

Even Belle Archer, with her catchy ways and the little things that count in the house, she had made a success out of it.

A SAD WEEK.

The year had gloomily begun For Willie Weems, a poor man's SUN. He was beset with bill and dun, And he had very little.

BADGERS GO INTO STATE

As Becomes Their Triumphant Errand, the Launching of the Battleship Wisconsin in Pacific Waters—Former Congressman Stephenson is Host to a Number of Prominent Badger State People.

The special train bearing the Wisconsin battleship party to San Francisco arrived in this city at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. Very early in the day the passengers were astir at that hour, but they rose about an hour later, and after breakfast, many of them started for a tour of the city.

Miss Elizabeth Stephenson, the young lady who is to break a bottle of champagne over the bow of the battleship as it glides into the water, was one of the earliest to abandon the train and start on a sight-seeing tour of St. Paul.

Senator John L. Mitchell and ex-Senator Sawyer are in the party, which includes Lieut. Gov. Baensch, and members of the governor's staff.

The most interesting object on the train is the bottle of champagne with which the Wisconsin is to be christened. It is an ordinary bottle of extra dry, but it is decorated with tri-colored and gilt inscriptions, and a network of gold wire surrounds it.

The train is certainly the handsomest ever started for the coast. It is made up of six cars, and from an observation car to dinner it is an unbroken succession of elegance and comfort.

At every other stop which the train will make the citizens will accord the party a reception and will permit them as far as limited time will permit they will arrive in San Francisco Friday.

UPRISING AT MATANZAS.

Spanish Soldiers Revolt, Shouting "Death to Blanco." HAVANA, Nov. 20.—Another uprising of Spanish troops has taken place at Matanzas. The news received there was that the Havana had been paid by Blanco around the indignation of the soldiers, whose wages are a year in arrears.

They revolted in their barracks, shouting "Death to Blanco" and "Death to the traitors." Gen. Molina, the Spanish military commander at Matanzas, telegraphed Gen. Blanco, demanding money.

At every other stop which the train will make the citizens will accord the party a reception and will permit them as far as limited time will permit they will arrive in San Francisco Friday.

KEELY'S SECRET.

Open Question as to Whether or Not It Died With Him. PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 20.—It is still an open question whether or not any secret which he may have possessed died with the inventor. When the news reached the members of the company which was interested in his inventions it caused general consternation.

Charles B. Collier, who until the day of Mr. Keely's death had been his legal adviser for many years, said to-day that he was not prepared to say anything regarding the matter.

There is one man in Philadelphia, however, whose views respecting Keely and his inventions possess special interest. This is the inventor's association with Keely at the time he discovered what he was pleased to call a "new force."

This man is Bennett C. Wilson, who was not only Keely's employer at the time that the famous discovery was announced, but was also his first financial backer, a distinction that cost him $20,000 to attain.

When Mr. Wilson was asked whether he believed that Keely's discovery was all that the inventor claimed it to be, he said:

"In one respect it is all that Keely believed it to be. He did really discover a new and wonderful natural force. But that is all. He was absolutely incapable of developing it in a manner that would give it practical utility."

"I believe, however, that if he had confined his ideas to some man like Edison, who had the capacity of developing them in a practical manner, they would be the better for the action and men would not today be lamenting the loss of a valuable secret that would have been a certain fortune."

These views are shared by Clarence B. Moore, 1821 Locust street, who several years ago had recourse to litigation in order to bring the inventor, William Moore, a relative, from continuing to advance sums to Mr. Keely to aid him in his experiments.

"ALICE THE SAILOR."

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—One of the last passengers to land from the second cabin of the American liner Paris was a rosy-cheeked young woman clad in a navy-blue gown, who had her hair crowned with short tresses and there was an anxious look in the big brown eyes as she eagerly scanned the faces of those on the pier.

There was a young girl, otherwise Alice Amelia McKinley, but best known as "Alice the Sailor," an American girl who has been roaming about the world in her boy's dress five years, and the most of the time doing a man's work on English transports and colliers.

On landing she had expected to be met by an officer of the Young Women's Christian union, but no official appeared, and as the girl sailor had little money she was sent to the hotel office, where the immigrants there went to Ellis island, and a network of gold wire surrounds it.

The train is certainly the handsomest ever started for the coast. It is made up of six cars, and from an observation car to dinner it is an unbroken succession of elegance and comfort.

At every other stop which the train will make the citizens will accord the party a reception and will permit them as far as limited time will permit they will arrive in San Francisco Friday.

PARTY WILL RETURN IT.

Creditors May Get $50,000 Contribution to Conservative Funds. LONDON, Nov. 20.—Hooley's disclosures with regard to his relations with the Carlton club have caused much excitement among the Conservative circles.

Hooley's statements are already doing considerable harm to the Conservative cause. A. J. Balfour, the Conservative leader in the house of commons and first lord of the treasury, is said to have urged that the money be restored to the donor.
