OVER THE HIGH FENCE

A. J. LA MOUNTAIN AND JACOB WINZRED STILL AIRING THEIR TROUBLES

IN THE DISTRICT COURT NOW

The Case Had a Run in the Municipal Court, While the Neighbors Continued to Glare at Each Other Around the Corners of the Seven Feet of Boards—Judge Bunn to Settle It.

Judge Bunn yesterday took under advisement the case of A. J. La Mountain vs. Jacob Winzred, an action that involves a seven-foot fence, and all the concomitants of a first-class suit to date neighborhood quarrel.

According to the plaintiff who lives on St. Anthony avenue, near Arundel, the defendant, who lives next door caused in July last a high board fence to be erected between the lots that entirely shut off his light.

On the other hand Winzred declares that it was necessary for him to have the fence put up because he had been much annoyed by the La Mountain family, who caused innumerable heart burnings "by calling the defendant and his family names and making insulting remarks to them and attempting to pick quarrels with defendant, his family and his tenants."

On the stand yesterday Winzred and his lawyer testified with much warmth of the alleged iniquitous practices of their objectionable neighbors, who they said made faces across the fence, allowed their children to run around the fence, and threw dirt and water and things over the dividing line.

The matter came up in municipal court some time ago when La Mountain caused Winzred to be charged with violating an ordinance in the erection of his fence.

It was discovered however, that the ordinance only related to fencing on the frontage and not to erections on dividing lines.

STAYS HAS CHANGED. Judge Otis yesterday filed a decision in district court denying motions of the defendants in the cases of Patrick Kelly vs. Patrick Kelly, et al. and Patrick Kelly vs. Gebhard Wilrich.

John McCarthy and John Graham were sent out yesterday for ten days each on the charge of drunkenness.

John O'Connor, charged with the larceny of an overcoat from Alfred Larson, attempted to prove his alibi in police court yesterday and his case was continued until today.

James J. colored man who runs a bootblack stand at 413 Robert street, was arrested yesterday on a complaint sworn to by Charles W. Bunn, colored bootblack, who operates an adjoining stand.

George Lorenz and Raymond Hostens, two boys living at 117 1/2 Washington street, were arrested yesterday on a charge of assault and battery.

The apparently interminable court house elevator matter came up yesterday afternoon at the meeting of the joint city hall and court house committee with a request from the contractors for the elevator to be postponed.

The contractors asked for $3,132, as the balance due under the contract. Secretary Drummond called the attention of the committee to the fact that the bill was not presented in proper form and not sworn to.

The corporation attorney's office submitted an opinion to the effect that the commission has full power to act in the matter of the payment of the penalty for non-fulfillment of the contract.

BOYCOTT BILL DIES

IF THE SENATE FOLLOWS THE RECOMMENDATION OF THE COMMITTEE

HEARING HELD LAST NIGHT

Friends and Opponents of the Measure Are Heard—Organized Labor's Representatives Point Out the Injustice They Claim Such a Law Would Work on the Laboring People if Enacted.

The senate chamber was crowded with the friends of labor last night to hear the discussion over house file 421, introduced by Representative O'Neill, of Big Stone, and known as the anti-boycott bill, and to oppose, as far as possible, the measure by the senate.

The ball of oratory was set rolling by Louis Nash, of St. Paul, who opposed the bill in a vigorous speech. He said the measure resulted from the abuse of the boycott, rather than from its use.

Continuing, Mr. Nash referred to the early closing movement and to the efforts of the Retail Clerks' association, which had finally achieved success by reason of the fact that the merchants and association of the union to which they were attached had the rights of their employees had to be respected.

Representative Miller, of Duluth, made a plea in favor of the passage of the bill. He said the boycott, which had been instrumental in driving a large number of industries from the city and had damaged the community to the extent of over $600,000, also said "the labor unions had a paid lobby to defeat the passage of the bill."

J. J. Gleason, of the St. Paul Typographical union, repelled the imputation that men had been paid by the union to lobby against the bill. In his judgment should the bill become a law, its influence should be far-reaching for evil results.

George C. Collins, president of the State Federation of Labor, said the labor men of the state had only two ways of protecting themselves against injustice, one of which was by a strike, and the other by the boycott.
