EXCITING CAREER OF THE ONLY TEXAN WHO VOTED FOR LINCOLN

HAS BATTLED WITH INDIANS

And Has Many Scalps to Show How Well He Defended His Home-Became a Soldier in the Union Army-A Terrible Trudge of Many Days Across the Hot Sands

Out in the hills of Western Texas, not far from the famed city of Caldwell, a man and his wife live quietly, waiting the end after over eightly years of as stormy life as comes to those on the frontier. They are hardy mountaineers and their lives have been filled to repletion with deeds which are called heroic. John Joy is the name of the husband. His wife is not less sturdy and heroic

John Joy cast the only vote for Abraham Lincoln cast in Texas, so it is said. stood by with his pistol in his hand and saw that the vote dropped into the proper box. He has battled with Indians and has many scalps to show how well he defended his home. In the early days of the civil war he was busy guarding his home. Later on he and several companions travelled nearly 1,000 miles on foot that they might join the federal army. Mrs. Joy kept the home ranch, figh ing the Indians herself, killing one chief during a raid on the little settlement. Now. in their old age they are living peacefully in western Texas, still of the same political belief that they held forty years ago. Joy's father was a Virginian and a soldier of the revolution. The family were always poor mountaineers. In the early days they emigrated to Arkansas, where they lived until 1850. Here the old soldier of the revolution died, while his fighting Mexicans. In 1850 John Joy started, with a long train of Arkansas fornia, taking the southern route. They got lost on the plains and finally con-Texas and remain until the next spring. They settled on the Guadaloupes, and be great abundance of game they located lands and improved small farms. BROUGHT UP UNDER ARMS.

The young men of this colony grew up in a school of arms. Whenever a full ros were almost sure to make a raid on the settlement. There was hardly a not killed an Indian, and many of the women were proud of the fact that they had made an Apache watrior bite the dust. Every young girl in the settlement knew how to handle a gun or a pistol. John Joy was then in the prime of life and his ability to endure fatigue, coupled with his remarkable courage and coolness Early in that famous campaign which elevated Abraham Linco'n to the presidency of the United States Mr. Joy de-clared that he was opposed to negro slavery, and often publicly proclaimed that he intended to vote for Mr. Lincoln for president. On the day of the election, accompanied by some ten or more of his Indian fighters, he rode to the nearest voting place, which was nearly 100 mles away and in a section where the aboli-tion candidate was regarded a little less than a fiend incarnate.

asked for a Lincoln ticket. S..upposing that he was playing a practical joke, everybody laughed uproariously but when the crowd found that he was in earnest he was quickly surrounded by armed men, whose faces wore a threatening look.

One of the judges said to Mr. Joy: "If you want to vote for old Abe you will have to get out of Texas. You can't put in any vote of that kind here."
"Well, shall try my best," said Mr.
Joy, and, drawing a piece of paper and a pencil from his pocket, he wrote

'I. John Jo. a citizen of Texas--a Mexican war veteran—defender of the fron-tier and the son of a soldier of the revolution, cast my vote for Abraham Lincoln for president of the United States."

Handing the paper to one of the judges, he stood his ground for a moment with his hand on his pistol and then coolly turned away and mounted his horse. It required a great deal of courage to do

GOES TO THE ARMY. Every effort was made to induce Joy to join the southern army, but he re-fused to be governed by other than the union sentiment that was strong within him. Finally his life was threatened and upon more than one occasion he narrowly

After carrying his life in his hands for more than two years his brave wife said to him one day: "John, between the Apaches and your other enemies I am afraid you wil! lose your life. I expect you had better go and join the union army. I and the boys and girls will be able to stand off the Indians."

This was exactly what he wanted to lo, but he hesitated to leave his family on the frontier, and then the question as to how the federal lines were to be reached presented itself. After consulting with his neighbors he selected nine of the hardiest and bravest men in the community and they gathered several hundred head of their cattle and started hundred the plains right through the heart on the frontier, and then the question a across the plains right through the heart of the Indian country in the direction of the Rio Grande. They were hardly out of the Rio Grande. They were hardly out of sight of the Guadaloupe mountains before the Indians began to appear on the hills, and after that scarcely a day passed without an exchange of shots between the cattlemen and the Apaches. It was a terrible march. Water was scarce and the hot sands were blazing, but after enduring incredible hardships scarce and the hot sands were blazing, but after enduring incredible hardships and fighting many battles they reached the frontier of old Mexico without the loss of a man. Here they were fortunate enough to sell their cattle, and, packing their gold, blankets and provisions on an old burro, they started down the Rio Grande in the direction of Matamoras, where they understood that the blockading fleet constantly kept a war vessel. opportunity to enlist in the Union army was more than 1,000 miles, and the trouble between the French and Mexicans was on, while armed bandits and guerrillas infested the chaparrals and mountain passes at every step. They were warned over and over by friedly Mexicans not to undertake the hazardous journey, and told that if they were not murdered by bandits they would sufely perish of thirst on the great parched plains.

After discussing the matter for a whole night John Joy sald, just at daylight: "Boys, the word 'impossible' ain't in my spellin' book. Let's go on. I started out to join the Union army, and I am going to do it."

These brave men trudged across the hot sands of Mexico day after day, with their teeth elenched and a set purpose in their hearts, hoping that they would reach the army in time to strike one blow for the Union. Sometimes they marched with the Mexicans, at other times with the French. One day they were fired upon by guerrillas and on the next day they had to fight bandits.

STICK TO THEIR TASK

While hunger was gnawing at their vitals and their throats were parched for water they could look to the left and almost see the plains of Texas, and they fully realized that it was only necessary to turn aside and cross the Rio Grande and proclaim themselves true Southern men to end all their terrible sufferings, but not a man lost courage. After marching for more than fifty days, one evening they came in sight of the sea and a few hours afterward they saw a small vessel From the masthead of the ship floated

From the masthead of the ship floated the Stars and Stripes.

Throwing their hats itno the air, they shouted until their parched throats were sore. Without much trouble they managed to reach one of the vessels of the fleet that lying off the mouth of the Rio Grande, where they told their story and received a warm welcome. A few days afterward they were sent to New Orleans, where they all enlisted in the Union army.

The story of their sufferings became known to Gen. Merritt, and he was so much touched by their fidelity and courage that he showed them many courtesies and when the war ended and this general set out to take possession of San Antonio he took the Texans with him and discharged them with 150 miles of their

During the absence of her husband Mrs. Joy had a battle with the Indians at her house and killed a chief with her own hands Mrs. Joy is still living, as well as her husband. Their little farm is in the much the same political faith, and old John Joy is their hero and king.

FILLING A PRESCRIPTION.

How a Youthful Pharmacist Master. ed a Difficult Situation.

Washington Post. My faith in the efficacy of medicines has had a fearful shock—a stunning blow—from which it will be long in recovering. In one of the apartment houses here in town there is a drug store. Its proprietor is a young man, recently graduated from whatever it is druggists are graduated from, and he keeps the shop with the assistance of a very young man—a brash young man.
One evening not long ago an irascrible man came in with a prescription. He wanted it put up at once, and he was one of those men who want whatever they do want very much, indeed. The assistant was alone in the shop, and when he began to explain that delay would be unavoidable, the quick-temperwith his remarkable courage and cooliness under fire, soon made him leader even among a set of the most valorous of Indian fighters. He has in his possession nearly a hundred scalps as medest trophles of his prowess on the warpath.

Early in that famous campaign which store on the next corner was closed be-cause of somebody's death. Back ran the assistant. He simply couldn't lose the customer now. He looked at the prescription. Only two words on it were intelligible to him: "Aqua pura" he made them out. Quickly he held a bottle under a cold water faucet, filled it, added a few drops of two or three harm-less drugs, pasted a label on, and a moment later presented the bottle to the waiting customer. Ninety cents was, what he charged for it. To himself he Dismounting from his horse, he walked to the window of the little building where the citizens were holding the election and asked for a Lincoln ticket. Support the meantime agua pure could not the m meantime aqua pura could not do any harm. He hadn't run the risk of poisoning anybody, and possibly the second prescription would be presented later—the thought of another 30 cents cheered him up considerably. Three days later the irscrible man came in again.

"Say," he said to the proprietor, "that medicine you put up for my wife the other day was great stuff-acted like a other day was great stuff—acted like a other day was great stuff—acted like a charm. She wants another bottle of it to keep on hand."

Then the assistant said a few words the proprietor and showed

Then the assistant said a few words in private to the proprietor and showed him the prescription. He had not judged it wise to refer to the matter before. The customer carried home a bottle—a bottle of the $1.25 size. The proprietor himself filled it, and—well, I shan't tell what it was. Come to think of it, I believe the proprietor left exit to the proprietor left exit. eve the proprietor left out that part of

THE RALEIGH PEARL

Found in an Anteprandial Clam by a Philadelphia Councilman.

Philadelphia Times. Councilman J. R. C. McAllister, of the Councilman J. R. C. McAllister, of the First ward, chairman of the Dewey day celebration, in a most singular manner has become the lucky possessor of a magnificent pearl of such value that the exact amount has as yet only been guessed at by leading jewelers of this city.

by leading jewelers of this city.

Last Wednesday evening, while the officers of the cruiser Raleigh were being dined at the Hotel Walton, Mr. McAllister, in virtue of his office, presided at the board. The first course was clams, of which the councilman is passionately fond. Deftly impaling one of the toothseme bivalves upon a fork he lost little time in transferring it to his mouth. His teeth closed heavily upon his favorite delicacy, and the equanimity of the table was the next moment startled by a smothered ejaculation. All eyes were upon the city father as, ciapping his hand to his lips, he removed a hard, shining object, which, imbedded in the body of the clam, had nearly cost him a tooth or two.

The lusterofthe substance he had the

The lusterofthe substance he had bitten The lusterottne substance he had bitten upon aroused the curiosity of the distinguished company. It was recognized at once as a jewel and was passed rapidly from hand to hand. Councilman John Lang, of the Twenty-fourth ward, also a committeeman, who is a recognized expert on precious stones, at once pronounced it to be a pearl, and one of great price. Subsequent developments have proved it to be so.

A happy insipration seized Capt. Coghlan when the verdict was passed by Mr.

Lang.

"Allow me to christen your find," he said to Mr. McAllister. "Horeafter let it be known as the Raleigh pearl," and the Raleigh pearl it has become, which is the primary reason why patriotic McAl-lister solemnly affirms that he will never consent to part with it.

In shape the pearl is oval, one-eighth of an inch in diameter. At first it was of a peculiar light brown color, but since it has been treated to sun baths and other arts of the trade this has given way to a most daysline, with constitutions. arts of the trade this has given way to a most dazzling whiteness of a peculiarly pellucid tone. Experts have estimated its value at $5,000. Lieutenant Command-er Phelps, of the Raleigh, who is an ar-dent enthysics at the commandent enthusiast on the subject of precious stones, and quite a collector of the same,, admits that the "Raleigh pearl" is the finest which ever came under his observa-tion. Mr. McAllister has contracted to have the pearl encircled by sixteen small liamonds and mounted as a scarf pin.
