NEW YORK, May 27.—Little Marion Clark, who was stolen on Sunday from her parents by a mysterious nurse who had been hired without references, is the child of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Clark, of 139 East Sixty-fifth street. The nurse, who called herself Carrie Jones, was engaged on May 18. She had advertised for a position, and Mr. Clark answered her on Sunday morning. Carrie Jones took little Marion for an airing in Central park. Leaving the perambulator in the care of the matron, the nurse carried the child away in her arms to see the animals, as she explained. Two hours afterward a woman of Carrie Jones' description got off a car at Sixty-second street and hired a boy to take a note to Mrs. Clark. This communication warned the mother not to alarm the police on the theory that if this was done the child would never again be seen alive. The note intimated that money would not be unwelcome to the persons who had the baby. Mr. Clark is a book agent, is not wealthy, and the abduction is one of the most mysterious known. Marion is twenty months old.
