A Volley at the Grave of the Old Soldier Who Was Shot Last Week—"Boys in Blue" With Silver Locks Mourn the Death of a Fallen Comrade—Services Conducted by Rev. W. C. Pope.

Looking from a window in the county jail Fred F. Gulon, who murdered James Miller in Justice of the Peace Smith's office, 89 South Robert street, last Tuesday, saw his victim's funeral pass down Fifth street yesterday afternoon on the way to his last resting place at Oakland cemetery.

The funeral took place from the chapel of the Nagel Undertaking company, 322 Wabasha street, at 2 o'clock. Long before this hour the chapel was crowded. While several hundred people loitered about the doors, some were Miller's friends and comrades, others attracted by morbid curiosity.

As the casket was lowered into the grave, a volley, and taps sounded over the old soldier resting in eternal sleep.

HANGING FROM TREE

UNKNOWN MAN FOUND IN THE WOODS NEAR THE HIGH BRIDGE

NO CLUE TO HIS IDENTITY

He Left a Note Saying That He Was Unable to Earn a Living—It is Supposed That He Had Been Hanging Since Saturday—Body Is at the Morgue—Decayed Was Apparently a Laborer.

Swaying in the wind from the limb of a small oak tree, in a clump of thick woods on the West side, near the end of the high bridge, a couple of hunters yesterday morning found the body of an unknown man. The spectacle was a ghastly one.

No new to the dead man's identity, except that offered by the note which was found in the man's pocket, could be found.

The body was discovered shortly after 11 o'clock yesterday morning by Frank Wynacht, living on the West side, and a man from the Washington street.

REVEREND GEORGE E. SOBER HERE

MORALS WERE THERE AS IN ST. PAUL

GAMBLING AND WINE ROOMS

They Are Specified as Two of the Evils Which Mark the Resemblance in the Conditions of the Two Cities—Conditions Which Calvin Wanted to and Tried to Remove in Geneva.

Rev. George E. Sober, of Plymouth church, spoke last evening upon the life and works of John Calvin. He held the character of his sketch before the audience, not as a model man, but as a reformer. He said in part:

"The extremist and fanatic is among the necessary evils of human life that must be endured with as much patience as possible. He is an excellent watchdog of the faults and failings of others, but is seldom aware of his own. He sometimes does an important work by growling and barking and biting back into the pasture those who have jumped over the conventional fences.

"The morals of Geneva were low. The politicians were trying to win the favor of the worst elements by pandering to vice in the houses, wine rooms and worse places flouting themselves in the eyes of the men and women, and even children, day and night, as with us in St. Paul. Public sentiment grew in opposition to this open policy and Calvin led to take some radical action.

PATCHING HIS BANKS

GOVERNMENT ENGINEERS MAKE OLD MISSISSIPPI ASSIST IN HIS OWN REJUVENATION

WILLOWS CATCH THE SAND

That is Washed From the Upper River and Tributaries, Concentrating the Current, and the Channel is Being Narrowed and Deepened at the Same Time by the Dredge Boat.

James D. Du Shane, of the United States engineering corps, returned yesterday from a trip down the Mississippi river, where he has been superintending the making of improvements in the district under his charge, from St. Paul to Winona, a distance of 120 miles.

"Our principal work at present," he said yesterday, "is constructing dams and other shore protective works below Lake Pepin, at West Newton, Chisney Rock and other points above Winona. The work is being carried on under the continuous appropriation system, and there are about 100 men employed by the contractors, besides the day labor work, which employs a great many more.

"In 1878, when the present work of improvements was begun, there were many bad places all along the river, and especially further down. Since then the policy of the government has been to repair the bad places and then afterwards fill in between the points first tickled.

"In addition to strengthening the embankments, we are following a policy of narrowing the channel, which, of necessity, increases the depth of water. As the water sweeps through the narrow channels it throws the sand and waste to the sides, where the willows soon knit the whole together, adding to the permanency of the work. In this way we make the river do a large share of the work of its own reformation.

"But Calvin was greatest of all as a theologian. Next to Augustine he has had the greatest influence of any other man on the history of the world. His great stress was laid upon the divine sovereignty. To him God was all-powerful. God was the one supreme intelligence and will and conscience of the universe. A great and important truth, one which, exaggerated a little, makes of every man a mere creature of fate. Calvin did not appreciate the fact that man, as a child of God, is also a free agent, that a little of the infinite intelligence and conscience and will of the Almighty has taken up its abode in every child of God.

"The city was divided into districts. Over each district a councilman was appointed and the call of one was a preacher and the other a layman.

"At least once a year every family of the city received a call from these officers. Each family was given some comfort and encouragement and admonition as the case warranted. Rich and poor were alike subjected to a most careful and personal visitation.

"Calvin's scheme of government was meddlesome. The conscience of the church, which was the conscience of Calvin, became the arbiter of personal conduct. The jurisdiction of the church was exercised over the home, the ancient care of every citizen. It is difficult to find excuse for his concurrence in the murder of Servetus because he held views that were different from his own in some important matters, but for the learned the meaning and blessing of tolerance.

A feature of this course of sermons has been the large attendance of men.
