CANNOT FIND LUTTER

THE SUPPOSED ASSAULT OF MRS. JENNIE FITKIN STILL AT LARGE

SOME LIGHT ON THEIR LIVES

James Maloney, the Proprietor of the Great Northern Hotel in St. Paul, identifies the woman as one who lived at his hotel a month when the missing German was stopping there.

LOBBING IN MINNEAPOLIS OFFICE, 20 WASHINGTON AV. SOUTH. Advertising - Subscriptions - Tel. 2790 2-4.

Developments yesterday in connection with the shooting of Mrs. Jennie Fitkin lead the police to believe that the woman and A. F. Lutter, whom the police suspect of doing the shooting, lived together in St. Paul last summer.

A couple, of whom Lutter was one, boarded at the Great Northern hotel, on Fourth street, near Washaba, for nearly a month, where they were supposed to be man and wife. The man always referred to her as his wife.

Lutter appeared first at the hotel alone May 15 last, when he secured a room and informed Proprietor James Maloney that his wife would join him within a few days.

Lutter, according to Mr. Maloney, and seemed impatient to meet her supposed husband.

The woman was shown up stairs to the hotel parlor, while a bellboy went to Lutter's room to notify him that his wife had come. When the couple met in the parlor each was affectionately effusive, embracing each other and exchanging tender endearments.

While the couple was at the hotel no suspicion was aroused by their conduct, and every one believed them legally married. Lutter was kindly attentive, while the woman seemed unhappy out of his presence. Lutter, it is said, was mild-mannered and indulgent toward the woman, but at times the supposed wife exhibited quite a fiery temper, and several "scenes" took place. Trouble generally arose when Lutter had been out, or when he declined for some reason or other to accompany the woman wherever she might want to go.

Nevertheless the couple spent much of their time away from the hotel visiting the lakes and other places of entertainment. They frequently went to Lake Como evenings, two or three times a week.

Finally Lutter left the hotel and the woman went with him. At her own request she was given employment about the place in payment for her board. She worked as a chambermaid and performed her duties to the entire satisfaction of her employer, but did not remain long after Lutter went away, leaving the hotel July 15, going to Mora.

Proprietor James Maloney, of the Great Northern hotel, states that the woman who was shot in Minneapolis was the same one that had passed as Mrs. Lutter at his hotel last summer, came to Minneapolis yesterday to either confirm or disprove his suspicions. He saw the woman at the hospital through a door, without her seeing him, and says positively that she is the same person.

The police have as yet been unable to find Lutter, and, in connection with the report that an unknown man jumped off the Smith avenue bridge, in St. Paul, at 10 o'clock Tuesday night, they have been advanced that Lutter may have been the suicide. Joseph Groh, living at 353 Ohio street, St. Paul, is quite positive that a man whom he saw standing on the bridge jumped into the river. Mr. Groh

FRANK DAILEY KILLED. His Remains Found on the Track at First Avenue North. Frank Dalley, a resident of Minneapolis for the past thirty years and manager of the Northwestern Bottling company, 277 Hennepin avenue, was found dead about 7 o'clock last evening on the St. Louis railroad tracks at the foot of First avenue north, just below the union depot. His body lay close beside the track, and both legs, which had rested across the rails, were completely severed from the body, the left leg just below the knee and the right leg at the ankle. Coroner Nelson viewed the body and had it removed to the morgue. The only other bruise found on the body was a flesh wound on the left side of the head near the eye, probably made by a car track.

How Dalley met his death is not known. It is surmised that he fell from the stone abutment at the foot of First avenue and was stunned by his fall. Several long freight trains had passed over the track before the body was found by a mail clerk named Bowen, who notified the authorities. Although life was extinct, the body was not yet cold.

Dalley was about fifty-seven years of age and was born at Rochester, N. Y. He served through the Civil war with a New York regiment, spending three and one-half years in the army. He was fifty years ago he came to Minneapolis. He engaged in the wholesale jewelry business with Robert Reed in the Dolly Varden block, leaving the firm about ten years ago and engaging in the saloon business. Three years ago this summer his partner, Cullen, died in the bathrooms at the Guaranty loan building at 725 and 727 Eighth avenue south, and is survived by a wife and three daughters, the oldest of whom is married. The funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

CHARTER MOVEMENT. Committee to Take the Matter to Court About Ready. J. C. Elliot, who was chairman of the meeting held Monday night at the board of trade, has authorized the committee to appoint a committee of ten, whose duty it shall be to apply to the district court judges for the appointment of a new charter commission, said last evening that he expected to be able to announce the make-up of the committee today. He promises that it will be a representative one, and that none of the well defined classes of the city will be excluded. The resolution authorizing the appointment of the committee included the chairman as a member, but if there is no objection he will ask to be excused. He feels that the ten men whom he will name will be well qualified to do the business without his assistance.

The extension now gives connections in this direction with Fairbairn, Northfield, Castle Rock, Lakeville, Rosemount, and Waukegan. Joseph L. McGregor, a bridge square saloonkeeper, was arranged in the police court yesterday charged with using abusive language to Patrick Flannery while the latter was trying to get his wife away from the saloon. McGregor was released on his own recognizance to appear Nov. 25.

Representatives of the White Pass & Yukon railroad met at the city hall yesterday afternoon to discuss the telegraph operators and railroad men for their road, and expect to secure a complete operating force in the near future. The Minneapolis Cycle Trade association met Tuesday night and officers' reports showed the organization to be in excellent condition. A general social will be held, to be followed by a business meeting.

There will be a demonstration tonight at the Salvation Army hall, 231 First avenue south. Mrs. William Halpin, chief of the committee, will preside. Conduct the services, assisted by the entire divisional staff. Corps No. 2 will be present, with two new flags, national and army colors.

ADMIRAL DEWEY SHARPLY RESENTS PUBLIC MISINTERPRETATION OF HIS ACTS

DOMESTIC PRIVACY INVADDED. Believed He Had the Right to Do as He Pleas'd With Property Presented Him - Bitterly Laments Having Accepted the Gift 'With a String to It' - Disappointed in the Fickleness of American People.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Admiral Dewey expresses the keenest regret, indignation, sorrow and resentment at the manner in which the late gift that he had made to his home to his wife has been received by the American people. He said he never had been so annoyed, and could not understand how the American public could so misinterpret and ill-treat him.

The language of the interview is decidedly warm, and no room is left for guessing at the admiral's state of mind. He is mad and not clear through, and does not care who knows it.

He says that if he had known what was coming, he should have declined the gift in the first place, and that if it were not for his country, he could wish that he had never fought the battle of Manila bay. The admiral's language is too direct and forceful, however, to be paraphrased. Here are the exact quotations which give the gist of the whole interview.

"When I made over the house to my wife, I thought I was doing the most gracious act of an American gentleman could do. I thought the people had given me the house to dispose of as I chose. It seems I was mistaken. I would never have sold it, nor disposed of it in any manner outside of my own family, but I did believe I had a right to give it to my wife, and I chose to do so.

"It pains me very deeply to feel that I am compelled to lay open the secrets of my domestic life, but in view of the insults which I have received at the hands of the writers of letters which have been sent me, I feel justified in somewhat overstepping the bounds of propriety and saying that Mrs. Dewey understood better than I did the feeling of the people and at first declined to permit the house to be transferred to her. She did consent only after an arrangement had been effected whereby not only the house, which was the gift to me from the American people, but her entire personal fortune, was to go ultimately to my son George. Thus he had absolutely nothing to lose by my conveying the house to my wife, and the contrary, was a great gain for her.

"The relations between my son and myself have always been the most kindly, and Mrs. Dewey and my son the most pleasant. She thinks a great deal of him, and he of her, and he was to be her heir as well as mine. This arrangement is not in the least affected by the clamor which has arisen within the last two days.

"I would never have believed it possible that the American people who lately abused me, and who suddenly on upon me and fill the columns of the newspapers with the worst sort of abuse, when I landed in New York I was told that I was a hero, the idol of the nation. I was told nothing but good for me, and that anything I could ask was mine. I asked no idiosyncrasy, no applause; I had merely done my duty, and was ready to do it again; but I ask that it be done for me, and to be left alone to conduct my personal and domestic affairs as I saw fit, and that one simple privilege has been denied me.

"Where I was a hero two months ago, I am now regarded as a villain, and certain people can't say things too villainous or too scurrilous about me, and no one defends me. I am so much of a hero that I can't get a good word for myself. I do not intend to arrange the entire American people for the acts of a few, but I am hurt; I am cut to the quick. I never have felt so bad in all my life, and I do not intend to let anything happen to me because I have done what I considered to be the most gracious thing I could do for my home to my wife. I do not intend to let anything happen to me because I have done what I considered to be the most gracious thing I could do for my home to my wife.

WHEATON HAS GONE NORTH. Gen. Young Will Meantime Keep a Close Watch Upon Ports at Which the Filipino Chief Might Embark for Some More Congenial Shores - Sensational Charges Against Discharged American Soldiers.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The next move of importance in the Philippines is to be made by Gen. Wheaton, who will go up the coast by the transport to Vigan, at the mouth of the Abra river. This will land his forces far to the north of where Aguinaldo is supposed to be, the intention being to cut off his retreat to the north.

From the military information bureau it is learned that east of the route Aguinaldo is taking are mountains inhabited by natives who are not friendly to Aguinaldo, and will be likely to attack him if he tries to cross their territory. The country along the coast is quite well settled. There are several little rivers making harbors from which it is feared Aguinaldo may escape by boat. Gen. Young, it is believed, is watching these small ports with a part of his force.

Returned Soldier Tells of Treachery in the Philippines. LYNN, Mass., Nov. 22.—Edward S. Chester, of this city, formerly a private in Company M, Seventeenth United States Infantry, who has just returned from the Philippines, where he was two months on the firing line, said that the American soldiers who were discharged from the army, officer many of the Filipino commands. The rebel commanders offer large inducements in the way of salary and position to any who will forsake the American army. Chester says these Americans are a reckless class, and in a great part of their energy is due the treachery of the rebellion. He said these American soldiers led the Filipinos in several of the fiercest engagements, and play an important part in keeping alive the spirit of rebellion among the fragments of Aguinaldo's command.

He is a man of great wealth and influence among the Chinese, who look to him rather than to the consul general, and is antagonizing the latter on the ground that he has no authority over any authority over the Chinese except the consul general. "When I made over the house to my wife, I thought I was doing the most gracious act of an American gentleman could do. I thought the people had given me the house to dispose of as I chose. It seems I was mistaken. I would never have sold it, nor disposed of it in any manner outside of my own family, but I did believe I had a right to give it to my wife, and I chose to do so.

"It pains me very deeply to feel that I am compelled to lay open the secrets of my domestic life, but in view of the insults which I have received at the hands of the writers of letters which have been sent me, I feel justified in somewhat overstepping the bounds of propriety and saying that Mrs. Dewey understood better than I did the feeling of the people and at first declined to permit the house to be transferred to her. She did consent only after an arrangement had been effected whereby not only the house, which was the gift to me from the American people, but her entire personal fortune, was to go ultimately to my son George. Thus he had absolutely nothing to lose by my conveying the house to my wife, and the contrary, was a great gain for her.

"The relations between my son and myself have always been the most kindly, and Mrs. Dewey and my son the most pleasant. She thinks a great deal of him, and he of her, and he was to be her heir as well as mine. This arrangement is not in the least affected by the clamor which has arisen within the last two days.

"I would never have believed it possible that the American people who lately abused me, and who suddenly on upon me and fill the columns of the newspapers with the worst sort of abuse, when I landed in New York I was told that I was a hero, the idol of the nation. I was told nothing but good for me, and that anything I could ask was mine. I asked no idiosyncrasy, no applause; I had merely done my duty, and was ready to do it again; but I ask that it be done for me, and to be left alone to conduct my personal and domestic affairs as I saw fit, and that one simple privilege has been denied me.
