LABOR'S FIELD

Carpenters' union held a well-attended meeting at Assembly hall last evening, at which officers for the ensuing term were elected. Those chosen were: Gustave Elmquist; Barney Albacken, vice president; recording secretary, C. B. Vaxd; financial secretary, Nels Johnson; treasurer, H. A. Lindstrom. Other officers, including representative to the Trades and Labor assembly and a board of trustees, will be elected at the next meeting. Five new members, N. F. Martin, S. N. Lindquist, C. Hagen, S. Hauser and Enoch Olson, were initiated. The receipts were $55.90, while the expenditures amounted to $21.

The union received a report of the death of A. R. Carlson, who became a member Nov. 26 last. Carlson died in Wisconsin of fever. A committee to prepare resolutions of condolence was appointed. Carlson had not been a member of the union long enough to be eligible to the death benefit. Two weeks' sick benefit was ordered paid to G. F. Carlson.

HOW THOMAS TERESI ATTEMPTED SUICIDE AT THE CITY HOSPITAL SENT TO ROCHESTER FOR CURE

It Developed That He Fancied Enemies Were Pursuing Him, and While Fleeing From Them, He Ran in Front of a Trolley Car and Was Badly Bruised—Belongs in Brooklyn.

Thomas Teresi, an Italian who came to this city two weeks ago to visit his father-in-law and was run down by a street car, at Fourth and Jackson streets, while on his way from the depot, was yesterday committed to the city hospital at Rochester. Teresi's relative is Frederick de Giovanni, living in the Washburn building.

From the testimony before Judge Bazille it appears that Teresi fancies himself the victim of a vendetta, and thinks he is constantly pursued by a relentless band that would take his life. The trip to this city was undertaken in Brooklyn, N. Y., is said to have been undertaken with the idea of escaping his foes. On alighting from the train Teresi imagined he was being followed and ran up the street, obvious to everything but a place of safety. While running from his imaginary enemies he darted in front of a car and was knocked down. He was severely hurt, though escaping without broken bones.

The injured man was taken to the city hospital, where he gradually recovered from the effects of the accident, but his hallucination that enemies still pursued him could not be banished. He hid about the ward where he was confined and appeared in a state of continual fright. Finally, in desperation, he tried to kill himself while eating dinner one day last week by stabbing himself in the breast with a fork. The wound was not of a dangerous nature, however, and as soon as he recovered Teresi was taken to the probate court on information of insanity.

UNCLE SAM'S ACHIEVEMENTS ARE DISCUSSED BY THE LOYAL LEGION CAPT. JENNINGS' MEMORIES

Of the Blockade Runners Are Supplemented by a Thrilling Speech by Archbishop Ireland on the Esteem in Which the United States is Held Abroad by Reason of Its Naval Prowess.

The memory of war times and days and nights on the battlefields was revived at a meeting of the Minnesota commandery of the Loyal Legion, held at the Ryan hotel last evening, when over 100 members and invited guests assembled around the banquet table.

James Compton, senior vice commander, was toastmaster, and on either side were the guests of honor, including Archbishop Ireland and Moses E. Clapp. The other occupying positions of honor were Maj. F. M. H. Kendrick, U. S. A.; Rev. Thomas J. Gibbons, Gen. Rodney Smith, U. S. A.; Capt. P. G. Woodward, Tracy Lyon, R. G. Rhodes, James H. Tucker, Casper G. Dickson, Acting Assistant Surgeon D. C. Jones, U. S. A.; C. H. Kellogg, E. J. Kemper, Maj. George E. Pond, U. S. A.; C. E. Cline, chaplain of Oregon commandery.

A similar committee, composed of Gen. J. P. Sanborn, Col. L. B. Baxter and Lieut. Edwin Duran, presented a memorial for the late Maj. Elisha W. Cross. It was similarly adopted.

A paper, written by the late Capt. William Jennings, was read by Maj. James O. Pierce, upon "History of the Blockade of the North Atlantic Squadron," following President Lincoln's proclamation, March 21, 1861, declaring a blockade of all the ports from Alexandria, Va., to the Rio Grande river.

Included 5,549 miles of coast line, including the bays; the coast line mileage was increased to nearly 5,000 miles, and including the coast lines of the islands the total line to be guarded was 11,953 miles. This included 185 harbors. When the blockade was first declared resources at the disposal of the navy department were very much restricted. It was not only the task of the department to buy ships, but officers and men to man them were lacking.

It was necessary to purchase almost anything that would float. Exorbitant prices were charged by the market, who indicated their patriotism by robbing the government in this way. During the blockade 145 prizes were captured, aggregating in value, $8,000,000. The South was supplied with English built boats, but their losses on the sea was one of the most serious drawbacks to their operations.

The paper related some interesting incidents of the exploits of the United States ships in chasing blockade runners. Capt. Jennings was in command of the vessel that captured Lady Sterling, the second fastest prize during the war. He gave a graphic account of the night chase after the blockade runner, and how he won by using ten barrels of resin as a belaying pin for the rigging of the Confederates to fire the ship, and result of the subsequent disposition of the prize at the navy yard.

An invitation was read from the Sons of the American Revolution, inviting the commandery to attend the Washington memorial exercises at Christ church Sunday.

Moses E. Clapp spoke in a happy vein, and closed by an eloquent dissertation upon the result of the Civil war.

Rev. T. J. Gibbons expressed a cordial appreciation of the address, and was indulged in a few patriotic remarks. Chaplain Cline thought that the mothers who remained at home during the war were the true heroes of the day.

Archbishop Ireland was invited to speak, and responded with some highly patriotic words. He said: "It is the duty of all to sustain the honor of the country. The duty that is always the sweeter when the nation is worthy of it. This country is deserving of the love and affection of every one. It is the noblest of God's creations among the nations. It stands for the greatest and noblest ideas. The people across the sea watch us with interest, even if they do not fear. Our enterprise and industry has reached out across the seas. In the court of Brussels I found bread made in the United States, and in the manufacturing cities of England articles made in this country sold lower than they could be made there. People marvel at it, as they marvel at the progress of our country. Our working men are the pride of America, and they would call a palace. They do not consider that all these things are the product of the mind. The nineteenth century has great promise for America, and no other country in the world, and its future is assured if all Americans give loyal support to its institutions."

robbery. Officer Cline had, of course, heard of the "alderman from the Third," but had not the pleasure of a personal acquaintance with him. Kennedy thought some one, possibly an attorney retained by the men under arrest, was endeavoring to take some advantage of him. In response to the question, Ald. Kenny says Cline declared: "It's none of your business." Ald. Kenny retorted that it was a politician's business to treat people courteously, at least, and then Officer Cline wanted to know who Mr. Kenny was. He got the same answer right back. By this time the talk had grown loud, and a crowd began gathering. Officer Cline finally ordered Ald. Kenny to "move on." The alderman said he would not. Officer Cline said if he did not go he would be arrested. Ald. Kenny stood his ground, but Officer Cline was not to be bluff, and started to make his threat good. He grabbed Ald. Kenny by the arm with one hand, and grasping the alderman's collar in the other, hustled Mr. Kenny double quick across the street. He might have landed him in the patrol wagon but for a friend telling the officer he had captured him. Officer Cline says he did not know who Ald. Kenny was, and denies any discourtesy. He says it is orders not to talk about cases to people on the streets, and thinking Mr. Kenny might be a lawyer working for the alleged highwaymen's interest, he refused to discuss the case. Ald. Kenny says he might have been somewhat hasty in his talk and action, and after the affair was over said he had no complaint to make against the officer. Officer Cline and Ald. Kenny walked away from the street together, where a few moments before they had done a hop, step and jump time.

GOT THE MONEY.

Eccentric Iowan Holds Up a Bank Cashier. DES MOINES, Io., Dec. 12.—At Sac City, Io., this afternoon W. D. Sansom, an eccentric young farmer, tried before the First National bank and, holding a revolver in the face of the assistant cashier, demanded and received the pile of bank money from the cashier's window, amounting to nearly $600, ran across the street, passed through several stores, and made his way to the country. Sheriff Eddy and others followed him closely, and in less than an hour he was found in a barn, east of town. The money was recovered. The bank recently foreclosed a mortgage on Sansom's farm, and it is thought he took that way to get even.

NEW YORKER SURPRISED.

ASTONISHED AT THE APPEARANCE OF THESE TWO CITIES.

Thomas Lowry returned Monday after an absence of two weeks in New York City. He was accompanied by W. A. Reed, of the large manufacturing firm of Vermilye & Co., New York, who also is director of the Twin City Rapid Transit company. Mr. Reed had never seen Minneapolis nor St. Paul, and Mr. Lowry's glowing remarks in the city aroused the New Yorker's curiosity as to the "gateway" of the Northwest that he could not resist the invitation to share the railway magnate's private car upon the return trip. Mr. Reed was shown all over Minneapolis and St. Paul yesterday in Mr. Lowry's private trolley car. After traversing most of the ninety-eight miles of the trip, they made a flying trip over the Stillwater extension. They went to Duluth last evening. After getting a view of the head of the lakes Mr. Reed will return to New York.

"I feel a thousand times repaid for my trip," said Mr. Reed last evening. "I don't know just what were the impressions of the strangers in New York. I think for my part I am simply astounded at what I have seen in these two wonderful cities. I had watched their growth and development from afar, but seeing it believed that this trip has been a revelation to me.

"The stock of these two cities is very high in the East. No other Western cities are held today so favorably in New York. We recognize that there has been more solid, substantial growth resting on a firm basis with greater resources back of it than in the case with other cities of the West. We have come to look upon Minneapolis and St. Paul as practically one municipality, and what benefits one is supposed to help the other. They have a great future ahead of them.

"I have been as greatly surprised at the extent of the street railway system of the cities. It is a splendid system and ought to be maintained as such. The growth of the cities. I think a great mistake will be made if the plans for a fast interurban express service are defeated. It certainly ought to be the interests of the people of both cities to bring them nearer together by half an hour, thus greatly facilitating the transaction of business between the two centers. Fast service is what the people are clamoring for in all cities now. In New York distance is to be greatly annihilated before long with an underground system which will enable a passenger to go from the city hall to the Grand Central station, a distance of three miles, in six minutes, where it now takes half an hour."

Mr. Reed said that signs of renewed activity are everywhere visible, that the money market is easier than ever. He is heartily in favor of the new currency bill. If it becomes a law, he says, unparalleled prosperity will ensue and the industries of the Western country in particular will be wonderfully quickened.
