EMERGENCE OF CAPITAL.

New York city proposes to invest $35,000,000 in an underground subway. Chicago has already put $35,000,000 into a drainage canal, and the United States proposes to invest $135,000,000 or more in the construction of the Nicaragua canal.

It would be hard to find a precedent for the action of Dr. Ohage in our entire local political or official history. Officials there have been who have not concurred in certain existing conditions; but they have left those conditions as they have found them.

It was no small consolation to our pride seven years ago when, on the first edge of a severe financial and industrial panic, Mulhall, the statistician, discovered from our census reports of 1889 that we were the wealthiest people on earth, per capita, and that in 100 years we had overstepped all history in the marvelous piling up of material values.

But we are yet in a dangerous frame of mind. We are still harping upon European markets for breadstuffs and raw cotton. We are still building railways at home and expensive conduits and office buildings, simply because we want them.

HANNA ON "GRAFTS." Some time ago Senator Hanna made a public declaration concerning the Payne-Hanna subsidy bill, that it was not a "graft." This was said at a period in the progress of the bill when its promoters, including the Ohio senator, had not the remotest thought that they would be unable to saddle an additional $30,000,000 on the patient people of these states.

Senator Hanna is recognized throughout the country as an authority on "grafts." His denial that his subsidy scheme was of this variety will hardly carry conviction to the people of the country. He is plainly a prejudiced witness, and as an expert, he just as plainly argues for his retainer.

has no such investment, even France being satisfied with the slower but tenfold cheaper transportation furnished by canals and small riverways. In competition for foreign trade, we are handicapped by our magnificent distances and by our bragging disposition of being able to do everything and have everything a little better than any other people. We are compelled to haul our goods a long way to the seashore. And we have sunk millions upon millions of money in expensive interior improvements under the headings of local transportation and local municipal improvements. Five million dollars for a court house is one of the assets of a near-by American city of 200,000 population. Four million dollars would have built eight steamships fit to carry a million dollars' worth of goods at a trip to the Oriental trade, and left a million to go into the local edifice of justice and correction. The bonds have been floated, the credit of five millions exhausted, the energy and force of ten years' construction put into the basket that goes to market, but the market has no demand for the goods. A half million into a water power in the same city has gone to furnish power for local use of lighting and street railway service. The same money would have built a cotton mill of 20,000 spindles, and furnished it working capital for twenty years, to make goods for the Oriental trade, that would have brought into the country annually over $200,000 in gold for the mere surplus product of the mill.

Is it not true that we are submerging in mere luxuries, or brags, enough capital and credit each year to build a merchant marine that would float a foreign traffic as large as that of any nation? Is it not true that England and Germany, with accumulated credits abroad of more than twenty billions of dollars—divided years ago—stripping themselves like prize fighters of all surplus burdens, and preparing for the mighty competition that is before them for the wealth of the world, throwing off each garment of doubtful utility, and putting on colonial possessions to make up the brawn of demand for factory goods that must soon be lost to them in America?

Two events have been brought to consummation in this city recently affecting the well being of the people which should occasion much public satisfaction. They are the establishment in the near future of free public baths, and the collection of garbage directly by the city authorities.

For both of these events we are indebted chiefly to the health commissioner, Dr. Ohage. He has gone outside of the routine discharge of his official duties to serve the public. He has selected the two occasions for doing so with the good sense and judgment which show at once that he is no mere experimentalist, and that he conceives his relation to the public to involve something more than the mere perfunctory discharge of the duties which warrant the drawing of his monthly salary.

It would be hard to find a precedent for the action of Dr. Ohage in our entire local political or official history. Officials there have been who have not concurred in certain existing conditions; but they have left those conditions as they have found them, and have not deemed it a part of their public obligations to take any positive step in the direction of remedying them. It has not been so with the health commissioner. He has forced—literally forced—action on the community in two directions which go far indeed toward safeguarding the public health.

Of course the sanitary aspect of the garbage question is the one which will appeal most strongly to those of our people who are glad to see the work entrusted to the city authorities. But there is another consideration. Democrats at least are steadily approaching the acceptance of the day-labor principle in the discharge of public work, as sound public policy, both for the community and the individual citizen. It has been found in many American cities to be a much more economical system than the contract plan. Better wages have been paid under the system to the citizen doing the work and better work has been done and money saved to the community in all cases where the principle has been adopted thus far. Dr. Ohage rendered a service to the community in having it applied to garbage collection in St. Paul, aside wholly from the good he did in the direction of an improved sanitation.

The example of our health commissioner is one which might be adopted with great advantage to the city by every other official at present in its service.

Some time ago Senator Hanna made a public declaration concerning the Payne-Hanna subsidy bill, that it was not a "graft." This was said at a period in the progress of the bill when its promoters, including the Ohio senator, had not the remotest thought that they would be unable to saddle an additional $30,000,000 on the patient people of these states. Senator Hanna is recognized throughout the country as an authority on "grafts." His denial that his subsidy scheme was of this variety will hardly carry conviction to the people of the country. He is plainly a prejudiced witness, and as an expert, he just as plainly argues for his retainer.

propriety, be asked why Senator Hanna, the power behind the executive throne of imperialism, felt called on to deny the imputation of a "graft" being involved in his bill. He had no more regard for his own reputation or for the dignity of his high official station than to feel called on to stand before the leading commercial body of the leading city of the United States pleading that he was not, at least in connection with this particular measure, a corruptor? Can it be that he was willing to recognize the principle that in a matter of this nature the burden of proof rests upon him to show, when a mere assertion is made to the contrary, that he is not proceeding to his end through corruption? It looks decidedly as if this were the case. But, in any case, it is a pitiful spectacle to observe, that of a man of the highest influence on the progress of our national affairs, the recognized head of his party and of his party's national administration, engaging in a defense of himself as a public character, which is based on the tacit admission that he is not wholly incapable of resorting to corrupt methods, at least in other directions.

A Kokomo man is making a great fuss because he was married to the wrong woman, through the error of an interpreter. Many men have shared the same fate and without the interposition of any third party. Russian press censorship must be unduly strict these days. For some time the Novoe Vremya has not ventured to express an opinion even upon the weather. Mr. Richard Harding Davis must have arrived by this time, and yet there are no reports of the continent of Africa being out of plumb. If King Oscar had ever witnessed an American baseball game he would not be so anxious to act as umpire every time occasion offers. China is bold enough in hurling defiance at the powers, but it is careful not to cast any gains in the direction of Japan. Spain now realizes that her fatal mistake in the late war was in not having a supply of kops and kopjes on hand. If Mr. McKinley cannot find any one else to go over the course with him, why not try Mr. Tanner? Any police officer who was omitted in the dispensation will please hold up his hand. February is rapidly establishing a reputation for itself as a chilly proposition. Among other things that cold often contracts is pneumonia.
