CHIEF OPENS THE DESK

TIRED OF WAITING FOR GETCHELL TO GIVE UP KEYS.

Chief of Police O'Connor has got tired of the pettiness displayed by former Chief of Police Getchell in refusing to unlock the desk in the chief's office at the central station, and so called in a locksmith, who opened the desk. There were many official papers and other city property necessary to the administration of the police department.

Since the opening of the desk Chief O'Connor has possession of everything to which he is entitled by virtue of his office.

BRIGHT FOR DEMOCRACY

SECRETARY ROSING AND TREASURER KOERNER BACK FROM EASTERN TRIP

WENT ON BUSINESS MISSION

All They Heard Politically Was Encouraging to Democrats—People Are Weary of Trust Rule.

Secretary L. A. Rosing and State Treasurer Koerner returned from an extended trip through the East at noon yesterday. Going by way of New York to Virginia, where they were called on official business, they visited the prominent Confederate capital and its historical surroundings, and returned to St. Paul by way of Chicago.

At the governor's office yesterday Mr. Rosing had something to say concerning the political situation in the East.

"Our trip was purely one of business," he said, "but the atmosphere in the East is so saturated with politics that we heard enough to say that the situation is all one of encouragement to the Democracy. On an Eastern train we met a merchant from Connecticut—evidently a conservative and intelligent business man. After discussing business matters generally we drifted into politics, and I asked him what he believed were the prospects of the Democrats in the New England states. He said: 'My belief is that New England will go about as it did the last time. But New York is the doubtful state in the East this year. It is good fighting ground the way things look now, and it is impossible to tell just how it will go.' Such an expression, from the source it came, I consider a pretty good indication for the Democrats."

"What about Maryland and the Virginias?"

He made such a hit with the members of the tour, as well as those who like an easy, swinging air, that the Globe secured a number of copies for use in St. Paul during the coming week. Special mention has been secured from Mr. Newman, by the Globe, to have the song sung in St. Paul by Mr. H. P. Hall, who is expected to stand on a small platform at the Exchange street entrance to the grounds

THE NIGHT I JOINED THE ELKS.

Musical score for the song 'THE NIGHT I JOINED THE ELKS' with lyrics and musical notation.

Chicago hasn't a midsummer exhibition to open to the public Monday, nor is there any display of purple and white about the big city, but at the same time the Elks have the floor. The orchestras are playing, the brass bands are playing, the small boys whistling a new song entitled "The Night I Joined the Elks."

At one time connected with the Elks, at present manager of the Boston Oyster house in Chicago, and a member of No. 4, thinks so well of it that he has ordered his orchestra to strike it up every time a man appears in the restaurant wearing an Elks' tunic. Frank Cottrill button-holes every old friend who drops into the Blue Pencil club, leads him over to the piano, saying he has something new. Then he touches the keys and tells about "The Night I Joined the Elks" in that fine tenor which he possesses. Mr. Hall rehearsed it last night and pronounced the air all right. He says select a quartette to join in the chorus. To give the readers of the Globe an idea of how the chorus runs the following is published. Part of the words and the chorus follow:

THE NIGHT I JOINED THE ELKS. I'd often heard the people say the Elks were jelly creatures. And their initiation had some very funny features. I made my application and paid the usual fee. And the lodge in due and ancient form initiated me. They brought their tools of torture out, a wagon load or more, My hands and feet they tied with ropes, and threw me on the floor. The brethren gathered 'round about and over me seemed to gloat. Inside I heard a deep voice say, "Hustle into the goat."

For some one brought a big goat in and at me he did come, and evening And together 'round the lodge room how that goat and I did hum. He hit me such an awful whack, I thought I'd leave the club. The brethren sang that good old hymn, "Now get your money's worth." I thought for sure my time had come, I felt so awful bitter. With my Elks. When time was called the fun began, they wanted not a minute. My hair began to stand on end, I knew that I was in it.

FOUR BURNED TO DEATH. Fatal Fire in Colorado Home for Homeless Children.

LEADVILLE, Col., June 15.—Fire tonight destroyed the Home for Homeless Children, a charitable institution maintained by the church. Four children were burned to death. The building was a large wooden structure, and burned like tinder.

There were forty children in the building, but all except four were brought out safely, and most of them with scarcely a stitch of clothing on.

The four little ones were found in one of the upper rooms, burned into an unrecognizable condition.

The indications are that the management have been unable to identify the dead.

FRAUD IN BIGGEL BANK. SO JUDGE BROOKS CHARACTERIZES THE KELLY-NUSSER TRANSACTION.

HENNEPIN COURT DECISION. It Awards the Kelly Estate $240 and the Nusser Heirs the Rest of Mortgaged Property.

Judge Brooks yesterday handed down a decision in the case of Jacob J. Eseh, special administrator of the estate of James J. Kelly, against John B. St. Aubin, Max Nusser, administrator of the estate of John Nusser, and others. The central figure of the case, which has been tried several times, is W. F. Bickel, of the defunct Minnesota Savings Bank of St. Paul.

The validity of several notes and receipts given by Nusser to Bickel were attacked. While the face of this paper showed loans amounting to $5,000, it was later found that the actual amount was $240.02, and this contention is upheld by the court.

The plaintiff, the receiver of the bank, and Hazel Bickel claimed that the face value of the receipts was loaned to Nusser, while the heirs of the latter and the judgment creditors claimed that only $240.02 was received by him.

The court takes this view of the case and held that the latter sum and no more was loaned. Judgment is ordered for plaintiff in the sum of $240.02 and the Nusser heirs are given the residue and the sale is ordered of the mortgaged property. In his memorandum Judge Brooks reviews the transactions at length and concludes as follows:

"It does not appear that James J. Kelly ever paid a single cent for these securities, or that he ever had the actual possession of any of these notes. He had been a cook for W. F. Bickel and Bickel had been largely indebted to Kelly, and he sought to reassign the securities to his wife, Hazel M. Bickel. Nor is there the slightest evidence that Kelly was not fully informed concerning the facts before and at the time the assignment to him was made. It is not shown that the savings bank was loaned to Nusser, and received these notes. They were not discounted in the usual course of business. It is undisputed that the purpose of the bank and its officers, including its board of trustees, when taking these notes, was not to acquire title thereto, but merely to place them among the apparent assets of the bank and thereby develop and maintain the bank's credit and the public as to the true condition of an insolvent savings bank.

As to the alleged claim of Hazel M. Bickel, it is already largely disposed of. Kelly's estate was loaned to Nusser, and could not in any event acquire a greater interest in these securities. It is claimed in her behalf that some years before this transaction her husband made her a gift of $7,500, and that for several years the money was kept in a certain tin box, out of which her husband took the money loaned to Nusser. It is shown that during these years both Bickel and his wife were largely indebted. Against both of them there were unpaid judgments upon which executions had been returned unexecuted. Bickel was, in fact, largely indebted to his savings bank at the very time when he claims that this tin box had been really given to her by him upon the unsupported testimony of W. F. Bickel. It is concluded that after the death of John Nusser Sr., he presented to the estate of James J. Kelly to the effect that the entire indebtedness was due and owing to Kelly. It was not until after Kelly's death and the discovery that the attempted assignment to the wife was invalid that this present claim respecting the alleged interest of the wife was asserted.

The evidence does not warrant a finding that the savings bank had any valid claim to the mortgaged property. The fact that it made an assignment for the benefit of its creditors on Jan. 18, 1897, does not in itself constitute a mortgage, but it is a fact that the mortgage was returned to the bank and Bickel's receipt therefor is a receipt for the note in Bickel's possession, assumed, at least, to be of like value.

NEW ROOMS OF LIBRARY. OPENED TO VISITORS YESTERDAY FOR JUVENILE BOOK DONATION.

COMMODIOUS, LIGHT, AIRY. Formal Dedication Will Probably Be Held, With Invitations to Citizens to Contribute Certain Volumes.

The upper floors of the rejuvenated market hall were thrown open to visitors yesterday afternoon and evening and the general public was given an excellent opportunity for viewing the desks, delivery counters, tables, chairs, or in fact any furnishing whatever, except the floor covering, so visitors had the best possible chance of observing the excellent light and restful decorations.

It was really a donation party, that was held yesterday afternoon and evening, a juvenile book being the open sesame to the warmest kind of welcome from members of the library board, who were present to enjoy the admiring comments of visitors, and from the library's staff of employees whose smiling faces beamed their satisfaction over their new home. A number of books were received from that department of the public library that is in the least flourishing condition, namely, that belonging to the children.

So far the library itself is concerned it would be impossible to find any flaw in the excellent result that wise workmanship has encompassed. The stack room, marked yet by empty shelves, is roomy and light. It is to be entirely shut off from the general public by wire netting, which will be put in this week.

Directly back of the stack room and underneath the reference room, which has a separate entrance, and whose librarian has a separate desk. Opening off the gallery are the reading rooms. One is devoted to history, one to science, one to art, etc. All are well lighted, perfectly ventilated and finished in restful tints of green with light woodwork. The gallery is reached by a short, winding stairway that is an artistic piece of work. Down stairs in the stack room and the rooms opening off from it the woodwork is a mahogany finish that gives a very rich effect. The walls are lighter in tint, but there are no strong contrasts and the oak carpet that covers every inch of the floors, up stairs and down, does not detract from a most harmonious scheme.

It is expected that the books will all be moved from the old library in about three weeks and all the necessary furniture will then be in place. It is probable that the library will have a formal dedication that is an artistic piece of work. Down stairs in the stack room and the rooms opening off from it the woodwork is a mahogany finish that gives a very rich effect. The walls are lighter in tint, but there are no strong contrasts and the oak carpet that covers every inch of the floors, up stairs and down, does not detract from a most harmonious scheme.

The donation party yesterday was under the auspices of the city development committee of the Commercial club. The following brought books:

Margaret McLaren, Judge B. C. Baldwin, Miss C. Cochran, Mrs. E. A. Boggs, Susan F. Smith, Miss Crainie, Mrs. Charles Clark, Mrs. Walter Stevens, Miss E. Estabrook, T. A. Abbott, Mrs. E. W. Post, Mrs. C. H. Hallowell, Mrs. G. W. Schurmerger, Mrs. E. Foster, Mr. T. L. Schurmerger, Mrs. T. L. Schurmerger, Mrs. E. J. Schurmerger, Mrs. H. Schurmerger, Mrs. G. Wetbrecht, Thomas Cochran, Mrs. Powers, Christine Everts, Miss Simpson, Mrs. C. H. Hallowell, Mrs. G. W. Schurmerger, Mr. Proctor, Mr. Dean, Margary Barrows, Mr. Schmidt, Mr. E. A. Baker, Mrs. J. P. Wason, Wm. H. McCaine, Mrs. M. Auerbach, Mr. Cowen.

The annual meeting of the traveling men concluded at Duluth yesterday and several hundred are expected to come down to St. Paul today to participate in the great parade tomorrow. The Saintry City Council, U. C. T., will entertain at their hall in Lowry Arcade at noon, serving the visitors a lunch on Monday. The commercial travelers have invited the St. Paul jobbers to join their division in the parade in carriages. Members of the Commercial club are arranging to appear in the parade in suits—those who have not already done so, should notify George Hallberg.
