 WINE ROOM CASE TRIED
 ONE SALOONKEEPER FINED FOR FAILING TO REMOVE PARTITIONS
 OTHER'S CASE POSTPONED
 Even Toilet or Storerooms Are Not Permitted Under Strict Interpretation of the Ordinance.

GLOBE'S MINNEAPOLIS OFFICE,
 20 WASHINGTON AV. SOUTH.

Eleven saloonkeepers were arraigned in the police court yesterday charged with violating the Jones wine room ordinance, and with the exception of the case of George Kent, all of the cases were continued until July 16.

With one or two exceptions, the offenders were represented by their attorneys, and they were all released upon their personal recognizances.

The case of George Kent went to trial, and while the question of law involved did not come up, he was convicted on technical grounds and fined $25 or thirty days. It was shown that Mr. Kent had manifested a disposition to comply with the law, but he could not secure a carpenter in time enough to tear out all of his partitions by the day it went into effect. The partitions have all been removed, but as the court could not take cognizance of his intentions he was convicted and the fine was suspended. Kent will appeal.

City Prosecutor Dickinson desired that the rooms which were being removed, but pass on the right of a saloonkeeper to maintain a private office, like the one Kent now has in the front of his saloon, but Judge Keer refused to consider the request.

The law requires that "licensed liquor dealers" shall not maintain wine rooms, there is an opportunity for several saloonkeepers to escape on a technicality. Their licenses expired July 1, and the court has not yet authorized new ones. They are therefore operating without licenses. These cannot be prosecuted under the Jones ordinance until their licenses are issued.

Under a strict interpretation of the ordinance, a saloonkeeper will not be allowed to maintain store rooms or even toilet rooms. Whether the police will enforce the ordinance to this extent is a matter that the future alone can determine.

MARY IN TROUBLE.
 Accused of Passing Raised Dollar Bills.

Mary Marden, 530 Thirteenth avenue south, was arrested yesterday evening by Detectives Stasio and Morrissey, charged with attempting to pass counterfeit money. She will be turned over to the federal authorities. It is claimed that the woman offered a $1 bill which had been raised to $1 in payment for a dozen eggs at Johnson & Nelson's store, 123 Sixth street south. She is said to have offered to take it back when told that it was bogus and to have claimed the she received it from a neighbor, but as she has not been able to produce the neighbor she was placed under arrest.

HOW BIRDIE CELEBRATED.
 Hired Girl Robs the House in Family's Absence.

Nineteen-year-old Birdie Short, of Wayzata, was arrested yesterday by Detective N. W. King, charged with stealing $21 in money and wearing apparel valued at $10 from Mrs. and Mrs. Louis F. Putnam, 275 Ninth avenue south, where she was employed as a domestic.

The girl left her home at Wayzata some weeks ago and came to Minneapolis seeking work in the Putnam family through a local employment agency. Wednesday the girl was left in charge of a three-and-a-half-year-old child while the family was away spending the Fourth. She gathered together the money and wearing apparel and deserted the baby.

The Pinkham Record
 Is a proud and peerless record. It is a record of cure, of constant conquest over obstinate ills of women; ills that deal out despair; suffering that many women think is woman's natural heritage; disorders and displacements that drive out hope.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cures these troubles of women, and robs menstruation of its terrors.

No woman need be without the safest and surest advice, for Mrs. Pinkham counsels women free of charge. Her address is Lynn, Mass.

Can any woman afford to ignore the medicine and the advice that has cured a million women?

for the day, leaving a note for Mrs. Putnam in which she stated that she was "the famous May White," and had no friends here, so she was going to Seattle with her chum. The letter concluded by saying, "Don't tell my wish you hadn't trusted a pickpocket."

When the Putnam family returned in the evening they found the baby suffering from spasms, and a physician had to be summoned. The police were promptly notified, and soon learned that it wasn't May White who had hired out to the Putnam family. Birdie Short had given the name of Ellen Voge. Her identity was learned and she was located at her father's farm, four miles beyond Wayzata. When arrested she returned the stolen property and the money.

Primary Election Law.
 The return on the appeal of Matt Gallagher from the decision of the district court, asking to grant an alternative writ of mandamus in the primary election law case, will be perfected today, when the matter will be taken to the supreme court, with the view of having a decision at the present term.

In referring to the case yesterday Mr. Gallagher said that the other side had resorted to every method to prevent the case from being heard at the present term of court.

"Of course they have the right to act as they please," he said, "but the dilatory methods are very unusual, to say the least."

Getting Second Papers.
 The clerk of the district court is up to his ears in business these days in issuing writs of mandamus to compel citizens to become citizens in time to qualify them to vote at the next election.

The law requires that the papers must be secured three months before election, so that those entitled to second papers will be required to take them out by August 6 next, on which day the time will expire.

WAS A BIG DAY IN CANTON.
 Gov. Roosevelt Pays His Respects to President McKinley at His Home.

NEW YORKER MADE ONE OF HIS CHARACTERISTIC SPEECHES, AND THEN CONFERRED WITH MR. MCKINLEY.

CANTON, O., July 6.—The home city of the president today accorded to his colleague on the national ticket an ovation almost unprecedented, even in Canton. It would be hard to say whether Canton voiced more demonstrable welcome to President McKinley or to Gov. Roosevelt, yet it may be said with truth that Canton did not discriminate in today's demonstration, the first occasion on which the Republican candidates for president and vice president have personally met since the Philadelphia convention.

Gov. Roosevelt arrived in Canton over the Valley railroad at 5:30. As the governor alighted from the train whistles blew and cannon boomed, and an immense crowd gathered about the station gave him a mighty cheer of welcome. The president's secretary, George E. Cortelyou, was the first person to greet him as he stepped off the platform. Carriages were in waiting, and the march for the president's house was at once taken up.

All along the line from the station to the McKinley residence, nearly a mile, the streets were lined with people, and Gov. Roosevelt was kept busy bowing his acknowledgments to the acclamations of the people of Canton. A brass band, giving forth patriotic airs, led the procession.

The carriage in which Gov. Roosevelt sat was surrounded by small boys shouting at the top of their voices, and by bicyclists, who seemed anxious to get a glimpse of the royal rider.

The yard of the McKinley residence and the streets adjacent were literally packed with humanity when the governor alighted from his carriage and walked briskly toward the house. Then a tremendous cheer burst forth from the assembled multitude. President McKinley was standing on the porch, waiting with outstretched hands to greet his associate on the national ticket. They shook hands, and when quiet was restored, the president introduced Gov. Roosevelt in the following words:

"I cannot express the pleasure it has given me to see the generous welcome my fellow citizens have given to Gov. Roosevelt, and I now have the pleasure of presenting him to you."

PLEA FOR VOTES.
 The governor spoke but a few words, but his voice rang clear and loud and the great crowd had no difficulty in hearing him. He said:

"My fellow citizens: I thank you most cordially for the way you have come forward to greet me. I know that none of you, least of all my old comrades here, will grudge my saying that I thank particularly those who wear the buttons that show they fought in the great war in their laps. I cannot say how I appreciate this welcome, coming as it does from the townspeople of the president, who is now in a peculiar sense my leader, and whom I shall follow and fight for with every particle of strength there is in me. There is to be said for our side that we know what we believe. In Kansas City they have a little difficulty in finding out what they believe. I see by the papers they had some difficulty, extending finally to a vote of 27 to 25, in putting in free silver. (A voice: "They have got to guess again.") We believe with all our faith in a dollar worth 100 cents. Apparently they have 52 per cent of faith and a 48-cent dollar. I do not intend to read more this afternoon than to thank you most cordially and to say that I appreciate what this greeting means, coming as it does from the home of the president.

"I shall try to show myself not wholly unworthy of the way in which you have met me this afternoon." (Long continued applause.)

The president and governor then retired into the interior of the house, but the crowd was not satisfied. The demands for McKinley were so persistent that at length the president stepped out again upon the porch. A great cheer went up, which he silenced with a wave of his hand.

"I only appear," said the president, "that I may say to you that I am going to be with you most of the summer. Cheers and laughter followed this remark of the president and the crowd soon after broke up.

"Beggars Opera" and the Duchess. Good Words.

When the "Beggars Opera," by Gay, was produced in 1728 it took the town by storm. The king and queen, who were in the country, were so much pleased with the play, that they ordered the Duke of Queensberry, among them, flocked rapturously to the "Newgate" opera. The "Beggars Opera" had a run of sixty-two nights, unprecedented in those days; and as one result of its success, Handel became bankrupt. Suddenly there came an order from the lord chancellor to stop the new piece; why, is not exactly known, unless it was because the prime minister considered himself to be too faithfully represented therein. However, the play has been revived, and the Duke of Queensberry took up Gay's cause and championed it.

Very busy was she in those days, driving about in her coach, asking for guinea for printing copies of the forbidden play. And so heedlessly was Kitty, that she carried her list to the king's room, and she was so bold as to audacity to ask the king for a subscription. This was a little too much, and her name was removed from the list. She never came to the court, Kitty announcing with characteristic composure that the command was not to be obeyed. She never came to the court, Kitty announcing with characteristic composure that the command was not to be obeyed. She never came to the court, Kitty announcing with characteristic composure that the command was not to be obeyed.

Boxer Defined.
 Syracuse (N. Y.) Post-Standard.

Dr. W. W. Williams, assistant professor of modern Oriental history, in Yale gives the following explanation of the term "Boxers," as applied to the turbulent Chinamen:

"The term 'Boxers' is derived from a Chinese word about equivalent to an English term for rough classes, and indicates pretty clearly the social character of those engaged in the outbreak. The Chinese term is 'Yi Ho Chuan,' and may be interpreted as 'Righteousness, Harmony and Fists.'"

This does not make us think any better of the "Boxers."

Not Quite Ready.
 Chicago Post.

"Are you ready for your summer outing," asked her dearest friend.

"Not quite," replied the sweet young thing. "Of course I have my bathing suit, my bicycle suit, my golf suit, my tennis suit, my yachting suit and my riding habit, but, as we are going to one of these quiet places merely for rest and relaxation, I will, of course, have to have a few evening gowns and possibly half a dozen suitable for lawn parties and all that sort of thing."

"Thus she demonstrated that she had been there before and knew what "quiet country life" meant in a summer resort advertisement.

Cheltenham Waters.
 From "Old Mortality Junior's Epitaph." Here lies I and my two daughters, Killed by drinking Cheltenham waters; The Chinese term is 'Yi Ho Chuan,' and may be interpreted as 'Righteousness, Harmony and Fists.'"

This does not make us think any better of the "Boxers."

The Spirit Mediums.
 From "As Talked in the Sanctum," by Rounseville Wildman.

The Occasional "Visitor" have noted that these clever spirit mediums who can make chairs and miscellaneous furniture dance a hornpipe always call in a very material drayman when they want to move the piano.

The Artist—You recollect the Voltairre came forth, much to his admirer's delight. It was Voltairre complete in every detail. The Frenchman began an animated conversation in their native tongue. The artist did not respond. At last the Frenchman grew exasperated and turned to the medium.
