

GLOBE'S TELEPHONE CALLS.

THE NORTHWESTERN. Business Office 1045 Main. Editorial Rooms 78 Main. Composing Room 1034 Main.

THE ST. PAUL GLOBE.

Entered at Postoffice at St. Paul, Minn., as Second-Class Matter.

Table with 3 columns: Carrier, 1 mo, 6 mos, 12 mos. Daily only, Daily and Sunday, Sunday.

Table with 3 columns: By Mail, 1 mo, 6 mos, 12 mos. Daily only, Daily and Sunday, Sunday.

BRANCH OFFICES. New York, 10 Spruce St. Chas. H. Eddy, Jr. Charge.

WEATHER FOR TODAY.

For Minnesota—Fair Tuesday; warmer in Southern and Western portions; Wednesday fair, probably cooler in Western portion; variable winds.

ST. PAUL.

Yesterday's observations, taken by the United States weather bureau, St. Paul, P. F. Lyons, observer, for the twenty-four hours ended at 7 o'clock last night.

Table with 2 columns: Highest temperature, Lowest temperature, Average temperature, Daily range, Barometer, Humidity, P. m. temperature, Precipitation, P. m. weather, clear, fine, cloudy, etc.

Table with 2 columns: NEW YORK—Arrived: State of Nebraska, Glasgow, London, etc. SOUTHAMPTON—Sailed: Barbarossa, NAGASAKI, etc.

HELPING THE CITY.

The debt which St. Paul is under to the more active and public-spirited of its citizens is greater than will ever be publicly recognized.

It would be hard to apportion the credit among that class of our citizens who have gone to the front when any serious undertaking had to be carried into effect.

The last named of the associations mentioned has done great work, not only for St. Paul, but for the entire Northwest.

As on the Boer question, so it has been on many vital matters which came before the state legislature when Capt. Van Sant was a member.

It seems incredible that any man, unless he happened to be a heavy stockholder or an official of a street railway company, would hesitate for a moment to vote for such a just and humane measure.

There were many other bills which came before the legislature of 1898, and for which there would seem no valid reason why an upright man might not vote, and it is conceivable that a perfectly honest man might conscientiously have voted against them.

have succeeded in like undertakings. We should not be behind hand. There is no reason why we should not have such an industrial interop. It is essential to our future success as a commercial community.

The time has come for St. Paul to open out. Here is one of the directions in which it can do so with most advantage.

It is assumed that every reader of the Globe in this state believes in Minnesota. Minnesota is a great state.

It is not surprising that Capt. Van Sant survived the Civil war. No Confederate bullet could possibly hit such an expert at dodging.

It is universally acknowledged that never in the past has the heat been as intense in St. Paul and throughout the state generally, as during this summer.

It is an impossibility for the man who takes an active part in public affairs to please everyone. Some of his public acts are certain to displease a few persons; but if his acts are dictated by fairness and honest intention even those who differ from his opinions will give him credit for worthy motives.

It is an impossibility for the man who takes a public position, whether executive, legislative or judicial, should act firmly and in a manly, straightforward way upon all matters which are presented to him for his official approval or disapproval.

Throughout the entire heated season of 1900, there was not one well-authenticated case of death caused by heat, nor of one thoroughly healthful person being seriously overcome by heat.

And herein lies the weakness of Capt. S. R. Van Sant, the Republican candidate for governor, with the people. He is not a man who stands up to the tasks set before him.

Those who know Capt. Van Sant best were not surprised at his inglorious retreat or his silence on the vital question of the hour.

As on the Boer question, so it has been on many vital matters which came before the state legislature when Capt. Van Sant was a member.

It is time that we should fully realize these truths ourselves, and bring them home to others. A city which has had for the past twenty years the lowest relative death rate of any city in the world of like population certainly owes it to itself that the facts should be known, and that the outside world should be made to understand something of the delights which life brings with it among its people.

It is reported that a bill has been drafted for presentation to the next Indiana legislature to establish the whipping post for wife beaters and culprit guilty of profanity, vulgarity in the presence of ladies, and for disturbing public meetings.

It is reported that a bill has been drafted for presentation to the next Indiana legislature to establish the whipping post for wife beaters and culprit guilty of profanity, vulgarity in the presence of ladies, and for disturbing public meetings.

Gov. Roosevelt being the campaign in New York by a speech at Saratoga today. He then sets out on his Western trip of six weeks. Then it is understood that "Towns is to follow him.

to be taught a swift and sure lesson, one that will serve as an example for other mobs. The National American Veterinary Medical association meets in Detroit tomorrow.

Today, Sept. 4, is the anniversary of the birth in 1804 of Thomas U. Walter, architect of Girard college, the dome and exterior of the capitol at Washington.

There is little general interest in the Boer war but it is still going on, and additional troops are being dispatched to South Africa.

What is known as the "mercerizing process" in the manufacture of cotton goods prevents shrinkage and gives the cloth the now common silken gloss or appearance.

London publishers have representatives at St. Helena to induce Capt. Grover to write his war reminiscences. If Oom Paul would write out his impressions and experiences it would make good reading.

The "five day boat" seems now the assured being on the Atlantic. The German boats, Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse and Deutschland, have broken all records for fast running from shore to shore.

Sept. 4 is noted as the Greek and Catholic churches as dedicated to St. Basilias, a bishop of Antioch, noted historically for compelling Emperor Philip, while on the Danube, to walk in a procession of penitents.

Kipling was right in his estimate of "The man who bears the brunt of the war." The man who bears the brunt of the war is the man who bears the brunt of the war.

The government keeps on buying odds and ends from Spain. A contract has just been made for the purchase of a dry dock at Havana for $250,000, a matter overlooked in the Paris treaty.

Sept. 4 was a notable day in the Catholic church of England, and is known as "St. Andrew's day." St. Andrew was originally a shepherd boy, but became a bishop, and many marvelous stories are told concerning him.

Editor-Manager Bixby, of the Republic an state central committee, is finding it rather difficult to explain his opposition to the plan to establish a state candidate and a poor one two years ago.

It is reported that a bill has been drafted for presentation to the next Indiana legislature to establish the whipping post for wife beaters and culprit guilty of profanity, vulgarity in the presence of ladies, and for disturbing public meetings.

It is reported that a bill has been drafted for presentation to the next Indiana legislature to establish the whipping post for wife beaters and culprit guilty of profanity, vulgarity in the presence of ladies, and for disturbing public meetings.

Gov. Roosevelt being the campaign in New York by a speech at Saratoga today. He then sets out on his Western trip of six weeks. Then it is understood that "Towns is to follow him.

Another good audience witnessed the Grand opera at the Grand opera house last night. A dull, matinee style, but a new playhouse.

STORIES OF THE STREET.

A conversation which proved highly amusing to those within earshot took place in the grand stand yesterday afternoon during the Star theater last night.

How can the wage earner secure that which the earth's bounties and the government's protection will bestow upon him? The associations formed by workmen have been productive of much good.

The labor organization, as we now find it, is the product of industrial conditions. The individual himself at a disadvantage in dealing with the corporation.

RAYS OF SUNSHINE.

Chicago Times-Herald. "Easily Explained." "We'll, that's not surprising. You suppose I would not be a bloomer? It is found out now that they were bloomer girls if they could help it, do you?"

Denver News. "Mrs. Kinard—George, how many drinks did you take down town tonight?" "Mr. Kinard—Couple."

Philadelphia Record. "I have a very sweet, well-trained voice, but you will never do as a ballad singer," said the theatrical manager.

Baltimore American. "You have a very sweet, well-trained voice, but you will never do as a ballad singer," said the theatrical manager.

PHYTHIAN CONCLAVE OVER. Award of Prizes Ends the Encampment.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 3.—The tenth Detroit encampment, Knights of Pythias uniformed rank, formally ended after the presentation of the prizes to the members of the encampment.

Class A, open to all companies, possible percentage, 81.00, 81.00, Terre Haute, Ind.; percentage, 76.3. Second prize, $1,000. Yellow Cross company, Alliance, O.; percentage, 76.3. Third prize, $750. Vigo company, Terre Haute, Ind.; percentage, 76.3. Fourth prize, $500. Kalamazoo, Mich.; percentage, 76.3.

Class C, first prize $50. Elwood, Ind., percentage, 76.3. Second prize, $25. The Burns cavalry troop of St. Joseph, Mo., and the Wheeling, W. Va., battery of artillery, were the only companies competing in these branches. Each was awarded first prize of $300.

Class B, first prize $50. Los Angeles, Cal.; percentage, 55. Class C, first prize $50. Elwood, Ind., percentage, 76.3. Second prize, $25. The Burns cavalry troop of St. Joseph, Mo., and the Wheeling, W. Va., battery of artillery, were the only companies competing in these branches.

Class A, open to all companies, possible percentage, 81.00, 81.00, Terre Haute, Ind.; percentage, 76.3. Second prize, $1,000. Yellow Cross company, Alliance, O.; percentage, 76.3. Third prize, $750. Vigo company, Terre Haute, Ind.; percentage, 76.3. Fourth prize, $500. Kalamazoo, Mich.; percentage, 76.3.

Class B, first prize $50. Los Angeles, Cal.; percentage, 55. Class C, first prize $50. Elwood, Ind., percentage, 76.3. Second prize, $25. The Burns cavalry troop of St. Joseph, Mo., and the Wheeling, W. Va., battery of artillery, were the only companies competing in these branches.

Class A, open to all companies, possible percentage, 81.00, 81.00, Terre Haute, Ind.; percentage, 76.3. Second prize, $1,000. Yellow Cross company, Alliance, O.; percentage, 76.3. Third prize, $750. Vigo company, Terre Haute, Ind.; percentage, 76.3. Fourth prize, $500. Kalamazoo, Mich.; percentage, 76.3.

Class B, first prize $50. Los Angeles, Cal.; percentage, 55. Class C, first prize $50. Elwood, Ind., percentage, 76.3. Second prize, $25. The Burns cavalry troop of St. Joseph, Mo., and the Wheeling, W. Va., battery of artillery, were the only companies competing in these branches.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.

to hold that a representative can act for the people only if he is elected out for himself, is to assert that he is as great in himself as the people are in themselves. The combined wisdom of the people is greater than the wisdom of any individual.