INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION. The industrial commission has issued the eighth volume of its reports of testimony. This volume comprises 612 pages and deals exclusively with labor disputes in Chicago in 190). The commission makes no recommedation, but prints a summary of the testimony, in the course of which it says:

of the testimony, in the course of which it says:

It was claimed also by several of the witnesses that not only policemen themselves were prejudiced in favor of the strikers, but higher city authorities leaned the same way. They asserted that the police had their instructions not to interfere, except in case of absolute necessity, and several specific instances were cited to show that this was the case. It was claimed that this attitude of the authorities, which showed itself also in the actions of the police justices and other inferior courts, was due to political influence, especially to the desire of the party in power to cater to the large vote of the laboring classes at the coming election. These witnesses held that strikes in Chicago have often been especially numerous just before elections and that both parties have been disposed to make political capital out of labor difficulties.

Mrs. Barker was not in the court room to hear the verdict. She was in another part of the court house, and when told of the verdict sobbed bitterly. Mr. Keller was also absent, and showed no emo-tion when told of the verdict. Barker had expected an acquittal. He based his hopes upon the strong plea of his coun-sel when he dwelt upon the unwritten law that a man has a right to kill where the sanctity of his home is assailed. Whatever the effect of this line of pleading upon the jury, it was swept away by the cold charge of the court that "the story of the alleged outrage or the outrage itself, if true, was no justification of the defendant's assault." The court explained he had admitted evidence that Barker had been told of an alleged assault, not because it had anything to do with the case, but because it was for the jury to determine if the story had anything to do with making the de-fendant criminally irresponsible. If they believed the defendant was sane at the time of the shooting they must convict. ARRAIGNS MRS. BARKER'S STORY.

In his closing Prosecutor Erwin asked the jurors if the woman's course was the natural one. He said her story was improbable, because Mrs. Barker would in the natural course have told her husband of the assault at once, and failing that, would have made a confident of a

Mr. Keller, as soon as the trial was completed, issued a brief statement in which he absolutely denied the truth of the allegations that have been made and published by Mr. Barker.

PRESSMEN CHANGE FRONT.

Reverse Action Regarding Membership in Militia Organizations. waship in Militia Organizations.

Washington, June 21.—The printing pressmen, in their international convention here today, finally decided against the resolution requesting member of the union to refrain from joining military organizations. A motion to concur in a report favorable to the resolution made by the committee on law was voted down. The principal objection to the resolution was that it had a tendency to rob members of their individual independence. The convention also voted down a resolution demanding a readjustment of the relations of the pressmen with the Typographical union in relation to the matpographical union in relation to the matter of labels.

A resolution providing for the reference of disputes with publishers to the executive committee for conference with representatives of the Union of American Newspaper Publishers' association was adopted.

Newspaper Publishers' association was adopted.

President O'Connell, of the Machinists' uniton was introduced to the convention and made a brief speech, asking the cooperation of the pressmen in settling the difficulties of the machinists with the press manufacturers of the country. He said there were six establishments of that character holding out against the demand for a nine-hour day. He sald in this connection that already a shorter day, with a reduction of pay, had been secured for about 125,000 working men by this move of the machinists.

Mr. O'Connell, of the Machinists' to the big packers who will then be ab'e to deal directly. The resolutions adopted pledge the members of the association to refrain from buying meat from all jobters who refuse to sign an agreement to sell only to those whom the association shall designate.

ISTER AT WASHINGTON. YOKOHAMA, June 21.—Hoshi Toru, who was minister of communication in the last Ito cabinet, was stabbed today at a meeting of the city assembly and died shortly afterwards. Hoshi Toru was Lorance minister at Washington and Japanese minister at Washington, and was formerly president of the house.

The assassination is supposed to have been due to politics. Washington officials of the Japanese legation wree shocked when informed through the Associated Press advices of the assassination. His service here as minister lasted from 1896 to 1898. He is well known both in diplomatic and official circles. Before coming here he was prominent in the politics of his country, and on returning to Japan he became a mer ber of the cabinet, serving as minister of communication. His official life in Washington and at home were marked by vigor and decisiveness, and these characteristics brought him much cumity in certain political circles in Japan. This
