WOUNDS WERE FATAL

EDWARD ROONEY DIED AT THE CITY HOSPITAL LAST NIGHT

HIS ANTE-MORTEM STATEMENT Claimed He Beat a Wheel Run by Healy-Latter's Friends Deny This Story and Demand Him.

Edward Rooney died at the city hospital at 10:30 o'clock last night. His death was due to a bullet wound in the abdomen inflicted by Edward Healy in a fight on the Jackson street wharf early yesterday morning, as was reported in yesterday's Globe. Rooney's mother was the only relative at his bedside when he expired. A brother arrived two minutes after he had died. Coroner A. W. Miller was called and decided that an autopsy would be held this morning. The remains will then be sent to Duluth for burial.

Healy was arraigned in police court yesterday morning and given a continuance until Monday. He has retained Attorney D. W. Lawler to defend him. Healy had a great many visitors at the jail all day yesterday and he seemed quite unconcerned. When informed of Rooney's hopeless condition he expressed regret. He had previously been cautioned against talking by his attorney, and very little could be gotten from him. Rooney's ante-mortem statement to Assistant County Attorney O'Neil and Capt. Clark threw a different light on the events leading up to the tragedy. Rooney said that Healy and Harry Bernard, a waiter, were operating a wheel of fortune on the boat that was crooked, and which he and his friends understood well enough to beat. They played and won so continually that the men in charge refused to let them play any longer. The refusal resulted in a dispute and a quarrel which did not prove serious. When they left the boat Healy and another man, whom Rooney did not know, engaged in a fight. He endeavored to separate them, but as soon as Healy regained his feet he began shooting.

Louis Kantrowich, the other victim, said that he witnessed the shooting and started after Healy when he ran up Jackson street. When at least 100 feet away Healy turned and fired into the crowd, the bullet striking Kantrowich. A number of the waiters questioned by the Globe denied that Healy was operating a wheel of fortune or that there was even a wheel on the boat. They said that the fight first started by Healy's breaking up a "crap" game in which Rooney and Pete Conley, a former West side saloonkeeper, were playing. The fight resulted in a dispute, but half an hour later were still playing. With considerable ire Healy stopped the game, and Rooney and Conley and his friends began to quarrel. Healy also says that he did not carry a revolver, but when it was seen that a fight was coming when the boat landed, Healy's friends persuaded him to take a gun that was in the crowd. Healy took it, remarking, "I won't use it until I have to." Some of his friends endeavored to persuade him to stay on the boat until the crowd had dispersed, but he insisted on leaving at once. Louis Kantrowich, the second man who was shot, will recover from his injuries. He is twenty-two years old, and is a furrier by trade.

STILL IN THE PRISON

WARDEN WOLFFER BEHEGLED BY AN ARMY OF VIGILANT PEOPLE WAITING FOR THE MEN TO APPEAR.

Now that the Younger brothers have been paroled they are indirectly causing the warden more trouble and anxiety of mind than at any time during their long term of imprisonment. He is now perplexed with the necessity of providing them with suitable employment outside the prison, but is constantly being besieged by crowds who wish to see them or to learn when they are to be released. Every day since the parole was granted large crowds have gone to Stillwater by rail or electric car, or in carriages, and the streets about the prison have been thronged. There are newspaper correspondents from Kansas City, Omaha, St. Louis and Chicago, as well as a number from the Twin Cities, eagerly waiting for the time to come when the celebrated prisoners shall be led forth from the scene of their long confinement. There is every prospect, however, that they will be deprived of an opportunity to graphically describe the scene, as the warden has declared that he will remove the Youngers without any parade, and without the knowledge of the newspapermen. This he has every chance to do, as the prison yard has many different exits, and although the warden's clerks closely watch the buildings in relays, it would be a very simple matter to elude them. There are railroad tracks running into the prison yard for the shipment of lumber and other products of the factories, and the prisoners might be taken from the enclosure in an empty freight car without any person on the scene of the escape.

BIDS WEST GOODBYE

'CALAMITY JANE' ENDS HER ADVENTUROUS WESTERN CAREER

HELPED BY EASTERN WRITER Famous Woman Scout and Indian Fighter Will Live as Guest of Mrs. Josephine W. Brake.

"Calamity Jane," the most picturesque female character in Western frontier life, was in the city yesterday, at the Ryan hotel. She was accompanied by the woman known as Winifred Brake, an Eastern writer of considerable note. Par removed from the wild mountains and prairies on which she has spent her eventful life, to a brother arrived two minutes after he had died. Coroner A. W. Miller was called and decided that an autopsy would be held this morning. The remains will then be sent to Duluth for burial.

Two decisions which were handed down yesterday complete the work of the supreme court for the spring term recently closed, and leave only a suspension of business until the opening of the fall term, Oct. 1. The members of the bench are still in the city, but within a few days most of them and their stenographers will leave for their summer vacation, as is customary. The office of the clerk will be kept open during the summer, but the employees will as usual each be given vacation. The more important of the decisions of yesterday, both of which were by Justice Collins, were in the matter of the estate of Lafayette Woodward, deceased, in which the court very clearly decided certain rules to be followed by probate courts in the construction of wills, upholding both of the lower courts in this particular case.

The features of contention in the case were set forth at some length in the Globe at the time the case was presented before the supreme court. Lafayette Woodward, a bachelor, whose place of residence had been Minneapolis, died at the age of seventy-eight years, leaving an estate estimated at $30,000, a great number of third cousins, and bonds and cash. He left neither father, mother, sister or brother, and his nearest of kin were cousins. There were twenty-first cousins living beside numerous children and grandchildren of cousins living and dead.

RIGHTS OF COUSINS

HENNEPIN COUNTY COURT IS UPHOLD BY SUPREME JUSTICES

ESTATE OF DECEASED BACHELOR DISTRIBUTED BY RELATIVES WAS WORTH $400,000—NORTHERN PACIFIC CASE

In the other decision Justice Collins reverses the district court of Wadena county in the case of the Northern Pacific Railway company, respondent, vs. Abner Townsend and Minerva Townsend and Joseph Holocock. Under the homestead laws the defendants entered upon the top of a claim within the land grant of the Northern Pacific road in Wadena county. The lower court restored the title to the railroad company. Justice Collins holds that the title goes to the homesteaders, and that the railroad company has undisputed possession for more than fifteen years, the claims of the road being voided by the statute of limitations.

RELIC OF REVOLUTION

HISTORICAL SOCIETY RECEIVES A CURIOUS SWORD.

The State Historical society has just received from Mrs. Helen J. Hunt, of Hastings, Minn., a sword which was carried in the Revolutionary war by a British officer whose name is not known. This officer, with a scouting party of which he was in command, entered the home of Mrs. Hunt's great-grandfather, Jonathan Winslow, in Maine, in 1778 and demanded food. While Mrs. Winslow, under compulsion, was preparing a repast for the British soldiers they became alarmed at some unusual noise outside the house and fled in such haste that the officer left his sword, which has been retained in the family as a relic ever since. The weapon is by no means a handsome specimen of the armorer's skill, as the workmanship is of the crudest character. It may, however, have been in its day a highly serviceable weapon, as the steel of the blade is of good temper. It is apparently a cavalry sabre, with a light, short and almost straight blade. The CLAIMS ARE DEFECTIVE.

Collector of Internal Revenue Bothers by Detective Requisitions.

The clerk in the office of the collector of internal revenue are having much trouble over the way people having stamps to redeem send in their claims. Almost half of them are sent in without being signed by the claimants, and only about two in every hundred claims are found to be correct and complete. Almost 50 per cent have entered their claims under "cigars, tax paid at $1 per dozen" instead of "cigars, tax paid at $3.00 per thousand." On hardly any is the recapitulation table filled out and many are sending claims which ought to be sent direct to the commissioner of internal revenue at Washington, under the name of the collector.

DEARTH A PACIFICATOR.

The State Insurance Commissioner Tries to Settle Difficulties.

State Insurance Commissioner Dearth is now engaged in an effort to settle certain internal differences which have arisen in the fraternal insurance society known as the Benevolent Company. As the case has been represented to Mr. Dearth, the directors at a meeting held Thursday evening voted to depose Luke McKennan from the office of secretary. Thereupon, it is stated, Mr. McKennan locked up the books of his office and left the hall, refusing to turn over any of the books and records which were in his keeping. Mr. McKennan takes the position that the action as taken at the meeting referred to was not in accordance with the by-laws of the association, and was therefore of no effect.
