PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

Oath of Office Administered to the Chief Magistrate by District Judge Hazel.

NO CHANGE IN GOVERNMENT POLICY

The President Announces that He Will Follow in the Footsteps of William McKinley.

CABINET MEMBERS RETAIN OFFICE

By the President.

MILBURN HOUSE, BUFFALO, Sept. 14.—President Roosevelt tonight issued the following proclamation:

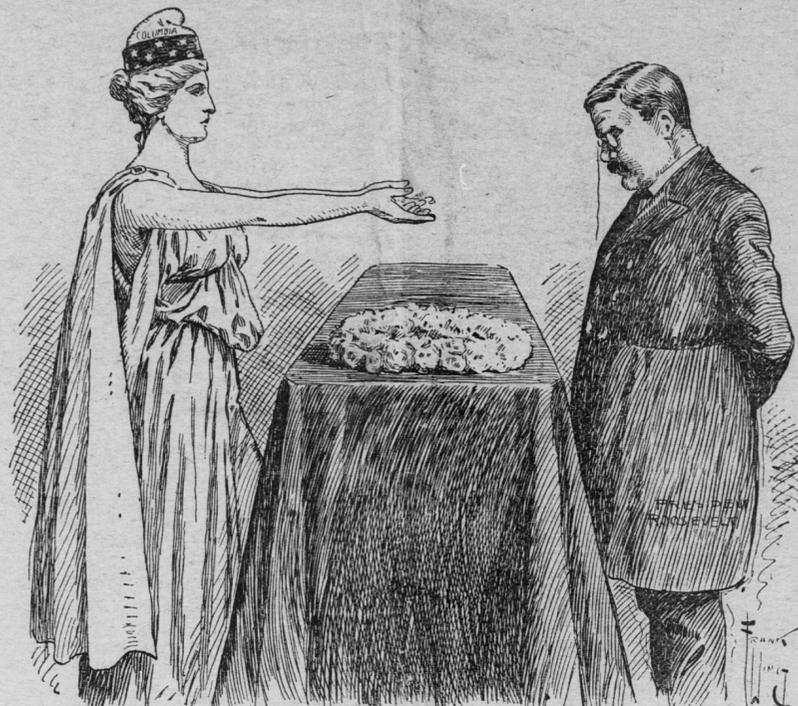

By the President of the United States: A proclamation: A terrible bereavement has befallen our people. The president of the United States has been struck down; a crime committed not only against the chief magistrate, but against every law-abiding and liberty-loving citizen.

It is meet that we as a nation express our abiding love and reverence for his memory, our deep sorrow for his untimely death. Now, therefore, I, Theodore Roosevelt, president of the United States of America, do appoint Thursday next, Sept. 19, the day on which the body of the dead president will be interred, as a day of mourning and prayer throughout the United States.

Buffalo, Sept. 14.—Theodore Roosevelt, who today was tragically elevated to the chief magistracy of the American republic by the death of President McKinley, entered this city of mourning this afternoon after a remarkable and perilous journey from the heart of the north woods.

ROOSEVELT'S POLICY. "In this hour of deep and terrible national bereavement, I wish to state that it shall be my aim to continue, also, without variation, the policy of President McKinley for the peace and prosperity and honor of our beloved country."

FUNERAL PLANS. It was at first intended to have a brief service of prayer at the Milburn residence tomorrow afternoon and a start for the national capital with the body on Monday morning at 7 o'clock, but the people of Buffalo expressed such a strong

Columbia—"Even while we mourn I welcome you to office, President Roosevelt, and adjure you to be ever jealous of the nation's honor, yet disposed to peace."

DEATH DUE TO GANGLIENE

What the Autopsy on the Body of President McKinley Showed the Doctors.

YESTERDAY AT THE MILBURN HOUSE

Mrs. McKinley Has Stood the Shock of Her Husband's Death Better Than Expected.

PLANNING DETAILS FOR THE FUNERAL

By the Physicians.

MILBURN HOUSE, Buffalo, Sept. 14.—The following report of the autopsy on the remains of President McKinley was received at 5 o'clock: The bullet which struck over the breast, but did not pass through the skin, and did little harm. The other bullet passed through both walls of the stomach near its lower border. Both holes were found to be perfectly closed by the stitching, but the tissue around each hole in the abdomen, hitting and tearing the upper end of the kidney. This portion of the bullet track was also gangrenous, the gangrene involving the pancreas. The bullet has not yet been found. There was no sign of peritonitis or disease of other organs. The heart walls were very thin. There was no evidence of any attempt at repair on the part of nature, and death resulted from the issues around the further course of the bullet. Death was unavoidable by any surgical or medical treatment, and was the direct result of the bullet wound.

MILBURN HOUSE, BUFFALO, Sept. 14.—Absolute quiet prevailed in the neighborhood of the Milburn residence during the early hours of the day. The police maintained a strict watch on Delaware avenue and the streets which intersected it, and double picket lines patrolled by Fourteenth infantrymen protected the house from any intrusion. Many persons came to the outer police lines and gazed in silence at the house where the body of the dead president reposes. Some talked in awed whispers of the cruel tragedy that had taken the nation's ruler, and among all the deepest sorrow was manifested. Pathetic figures in the crowd were scores of old Grand Army men who grieve at the loss of a comrade. Their bitterness at the crime seemed melted in regret. Many of them pleaded with the police for admission to the lines and declared that it was their right and privilege to guard the body of the man who had fought in their ranks and was their comrade. The police respectfully enforced the order against them.

while they grieve, and the loss, therefore, seems more poignant. It is a fact recalled during the morning that Ellihu Root, now secretary of war, was present when Arthur took the oath of office when castled here. He was sent for by Arthur as soon as the news reached him, and by his advice, and also at the request of the members of the Garfield cabinet, the oath was administered at 2 o'clock in the morning by Justice Bradley, of New York. Abner McKinley, brother of President McKinley, drove to the Milburn house at 10 o'clock. The relatives of President McKinley, Col. Brown and Mr. Meek, of Canton. The police removed the rope lines and the carriage rolled slowly up to the entrance of the house. Mr. McKinley bent forward in his seat in the carriage and shaded his eyes with his hands. When he alighted he walked slowly up to the door of the house with words of condolence and head bent. His face plainly showed the strain and grief of the night.

MRS. MCKINLEY SLEPT. The first word of encouragement came from the servants of the residence, who said that she was still in her room and had apparently rested well. This report was amply confirmed at 8:45 o'clock by Dr. Wassdin, who had called at the house to see her. He said that she had not only rested fairly well, but was showing encouraging strength in her grief. His assurances were welcomed by those who heard them. Dr. Wassdin announced that the autopsy on the body of the president would be held at 11 o'clock. A large American flag has hung from the front of the Milburn home almost continuously since the exposition began was not removed. There was no means of halting for a mute tribute of respect, and it was left where it draped across the front of the veranda. It was one of the only bits of color in a gray and cheerless landscape.

Col. Bingham, superintendent of public buildings and grounds in Washington, arrived early in the morning and will devote himself to assisting Secretary Cortelyou in the minutest details of the late president's funeral. The cabinet members will remain in the room up stairs where the president had died and where his body rests. Gen. Charles F. Roe presented himself informally at the house at 11 o'clock. He said that until the funeral arrangements had been completed he could say nothing about the New York troops that would be assigned as escort to the body of the departed statesman. He said that he was in a position to issue the necessary orders just as soon as the funeral plans were completed.

The expressions of condolence began to arrive almost simultaneously with the announcement of the president's death, showing that the people everywhere had waited on through the weary watches of the night for the news that the end had come. After daylight the telegrams began arriving in a steady stream, thousands reaching the house before noon. Those for the grieving wife were.
