THE BLUFF THAT FAILED.

Shaffer is dethroned; his power is gone and now there are none so poor as to do him honor. As in the jungle, the wolves of the pack have turned on their fallen leader and will tear him to pieces.

THE PUBLIC HIGH SCHOOL.

The poor we have always with us. So have we the public schools. With the return of each September the public schools become the object of much solicitude.

A LOCAL OUTRAGE.

The condition of the pavement of Selby avenue for many years has reflected serious discredit upon the city. While that street is given over to the tracks of the city railway company, it is none the less an artery of city traffic and should have been maintained in something like a suitable condition.

that the paving of Selby avenue will probably not be entered upon this year. There is no information current as to the nature of the trifling error referred to.

It is entirely safe to say that if the influence of the street car corporation were not so visible in the administration of certain departments of our city government the condition of Selby avenue would have been improved years ago.

Both the council and the board of public works are called on to do everything in their power to enable the work of Selby paving to go ahead at once.

What is true regarding Selby avenue applies with but little less force to South Washburn street. That street is also an artery of city traffic, and like Selby it is being administered as if there were no other interests concerned save those of the street railway.

The board of public works must bear the onus of the delay in both cases, and should be held to a rigid accountability if that delay be made to extend over into the coming year.

The poor we have always with us. So have we the public schools. With the return of each September the public schools become the object of much solicitude. It is then that the faddists and the anti-faddists buckle on their armor for their annual joust.

Success in life is not measured by the amount of money or property one may accumulate, nor by the notoriety one may gain, but upon the amount of happiness obtained and the amount of pleasure given.

The never-ending contest over our public schools, then becomes a question of pure ethics. We need not expect the contending factions to agree, because they view the shield from totally different standpoints.

As in most contentions, a middle course cuts somewhere near the right; at least like the resultant of opposing forces, it is necessary.

Having confidence in the ability and the good intentions of those who control our public schools; and not wishing to offer any criticisms on theories or methods, we yet desire to record a belief that the public high school is an expensive luxury.

stly preparatory school. The system is pernicious because it attempts to educate the few at the expense of the many.
