

SHOW THEIR SKILL

PUPILS OF CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL GIVE EXHIBITIONS IN RYAN ANNEX

SOME INGENIOUS WORK DONE

Smelting, Modeling, Carving, Etching, Stoyd Work, Sewing and Other Departments of Industrial Course Exemplified.

Exhibition hall, in the Ryan annex, resembled a huge workshop yesterday, for scores of boys and girls from the Central high school were busy both morning and afternoon giving working exhibits in modeling, wood carving, leather etching, sewing, commercial work, stoyd work and in other departments of industrial education.

A corps of special teachers were present yesterday to assist Principal Robinson in conducting and explaining the work. In the morning Miss Colter, of the Mechanic Arts high school, gave a talk on "Arts and Crafts," and Dr. Robinson, of the Central high school, gave a talk in the afternoon on "Business Education in the High School."

So widespread has been the interest shown, not by the teachers alone, but by the public generally, in the industrial exhibit, that it was decided yesterday to keep it open Monday and Tuesday for the accommodation of many St. Paul people who will not be able to inspect the work on Friday.

Of Social Interest.

The members of the Phroso club gave a cotillion last night at Woodruff hall, Merriam Park. The cotillion was led by Charles Hart and the following women chaperoned the party: Mrs. S. W. Raudenbush, Mrs. J. W. Punderson, Mrs. Mui and Mrs. Hart.

Mrs. Ellis J. Westlake, of Ashland avenue, gave a fraternity dinner last night at her home for her son, J. Ellis Westlake, of Chicago, who is spending the holidays with his parents. The tables were decorated with fraternity colors, purple and gold. Mrs. Westlake was assisted by Mrs. Harry T. Black. The guests included seventeen members of the Delta Tau Theta fraternity, and sixteen young women.

Miss Hughes, of Lincoln avenue, gave a card party yesterday afternoon.

The second of the season's table d'hote dinners will be given this evening at the Town and Country club.

Mrs. H. Black will give an informal reception Tuesday afternoon from 4 to 6, at her home on Goodrich avenue.

Mrs. George Thompson gave the last of her informal "at homes" yesterday afternoon, at her home on Summit avenue.

Mrs. Sherman Finch, of Portland avenue, will give a progressive game party this evening for her son, Roscoe Finch.

Mrs. James Allan McLeod, of Mackubin street, has issued invitations for a luncheon next Friday afternoon for her sister, Mrs. Charles M. Steward, of Plano, Ill. Mr. and Mrs. MacLeod will also give a dinner party tonight in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Washburn, of Detroit, Mich., who are visiting in Minneapolis.

Miss Wood, of Laurel avenue, will give a luncheon Monday at the Town and Country club for Mrs. Henry Leonard, of Fort Snelling.

CLUBS AND CHARITIES.

The annual meeting of the Primary Union of Sunday School Teachers will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Dayton Avenue Presbyterian church.

The Methodist Social union will meet at Summit hall on Laurel avenue.

Summit avenue, will shortly leave for the South.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Weyerhaeuser, of Little Falls, spent Christmas with Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Weyerhaeuser, Summit avenue.

Mrs. M. O. Graves has returned from Chicago.

Miss May Strong, of Marshall avenue, is visiting in New York.

Miss Rene Humbold, of Dayton avenue, will return next week from the East.

Mrs. F. E. Hough, of Duluth, is the guest of Mrs. Lewis, of the Virginia.

The Misses Beatrice and Elizabeth Wallace are spending the holidays in Duluth.

Miss Adele Lanphere, of Portland avenue, has returned from college for the holidays.

Miss Cecilia Murphy, of Nelson avenue, is visiting relatives in New Richmond, Wis.

Church Xmas Entertainments.

Several churches held Christmas entertainments last evening for the children.

find it the smart way to do the front of the hair.

Whatever else you do, avoid the real pompadour.

Even Jane Hading, who has revived with great distinction the fashions of Louis XV, and the new play by that name in Paris, has refused the coiffure introduced by that notable woman.

Even the simplest coiffure calls for this.

FIVE SOUP RECIPES.

You would not think of a good dinner without soup, certainly not of a good dinner with poor soup.

The soup should put you on good terms with your guests, as well as lay the foundation for the more substantial dishes that are to follow.

It may be a simple one, but it must be a good one.

Pumpkin Soup.

Put two pounds of seeded pumpkin, cut it in small pieces and put it in a saucepan with one quart of water.

Simmer slowly for an hour and a half, then rub through a sieve, and put back on the fire with one and one-half pints of boiling milk, butter the size of an egg, one teaspoonful of sugar, salt and pepper to taste, and three slices of stale bread cut into small dice. Set on the fire, and when it boils up serve immediately.

Potato Purée.

Put on to boil one quart of milk with one stalk of celery and one onion. Pare six large potatoes, and boil thirty minutes, then cut into small pieces, and mash fine and light.

Add the boiling milk, also a tablespoonful of butter, and salt and pepper to taste. Rub through a strainer and pour into a tureen; add a cupful of whipped cream, and serve at once. This soup must not stand a minute after it is prepared.

Rabbit Soup.

Cut into pieces, as for stewing, one rabbit, dry the pieces thoroughly and dust over with a little flour.

Melt some dripping in a stewpan (an iron one is best), put in the rabbit and fry it a light brown; then add onion and fry that also; stir in an ounce of flour and the liver of the rabbit and two quarts of weak stock. Let simmer together very slowly until the rabbit is cooked; take out the rabbit, remove the best of the meat, which cut into small squares and set aside on a plate.

Put the bones and the rest of the meat back into the stewpan with an onion and a bunch of sweet herbs, and simmer the soup for two hours longer. Take up the liver and pour it in a mortar, strain the soup, and with the liver return to the stewpan, add the juice of one lemon, two tablespoonfuls of mushroom catsup, let come to a boil and add the diced rabbit meat. When all is hot the soup is ready to serve.

Tapoca Soup.

Wash one-third of a cupful of tapoca and soak it over night in cold water.

Take one quart of white stock, or the water in which a fowl has been boiled, and boil the tapoca in this for one hour. Cut an onion into two stalks of celery into small pieces, and put on to boil for twenty minutes in one pint of milk, seasoned with a small piece of mace. Strain this on the tapoca and stock, season with salt and pepper and a tablespoonful of butter and serve at once.

White Bean Soup.

Soak a cupful of beans in cold water over night, and in the morning cook them in three pints of water. When tender put through a sieve, using the liquid in which the beans were cooked. Thin the paste with milk or stock and like thin cream. Season with salt and pepper and pour over small dice of toasted bread. May add to this soup thin slices of lemon as a flavor.

WOES OF THE DEBUTANTE.

Four young women recently found themselves together in the drawing room at Edith's hall.

The eldest, who had just entered her second winter, had existed socially for a year, and was beginning her second season; the third had preceded the latter by a twelvemonth, and the fourth, who looked decidedly bored as she listened in an absent-minded fashion to their chatter, was a society girl of pronounced position, to whom the fears and nervousness expressed by her juniors seemed rather childish.

"Why do you worry about partners?" she said languidly to No. 3. "I can fancy little Lizzie (the debutante) might feel anxious to show me a thing or two, but she is a debutante, and that Judith (No. 2) should, perhaps, wish to prove that her popularity did not depend upon a debutante's dignity, and my own, who seldom engaged for a dance before hand nowadays. The men I know best do not care to be forced to stay for the cotillion any more than I do myself. If I feel that I am not sufficiently agreeable to them, I say, 'if not, I go away.' A woman of the world should feel thoroughly at home in a ballroom, and not be dependent upon masculine support."

Having delivered her little homily, this superior young person arose, and, throwing out her train, departed to a group of young matrons, and became suddenly animated and charming just as the door opened to admit of some of the men, who at once joined the party.

"So you are putting in your holiday making aprons for old Sue?" "Yes, that is the really remarkable thing of it. That I should be doing something for somebody else. A thing that it rarely ever occurs to me to do."

"I don't believe that," he announced bluntly, while his eyes contentedly followed the movement of her slim, deft fingers. They showed very white against the dark blue gingham.

"Well, it is true! This is the first act of spontaneous kindness that I have been guilty of for a month."

"A dress like that would be everlastingly becoming to you—made out of finer stuff, of course."

"Why, no; this is really a good quality. It means that the whole new far more charming she was this way than when she was ta-or-made."

"So you are putting in your holiday making aprons for old Sue?" "Yes, that is the really remarkable thing of it. That I should be doing something for somebody else. A thing that it rarely ever occurs to me to do."

"I don't believe that," he announced bluntly, while his eyes contentedly followed the movement of her slim, deft fingers. They showed very white against the dark blue gingham.

"Well, it is true! This is the first act of spontaneous kindness that I have been guilty of for a month."

"A dress like that would be everlastingly becoming to you—made out of finer stuff, of course."

"Why, no; this is really a good quality. It means that the whole new far more charming she was this way than when she was ta-or-made."

"So you are putting in your holiday making aprons for old Sue?" "Yes, that is the really remarkable thing of it. That I should be doing something for somebody else. A thing that it rarely ever occurs to me to do."

"I don't believe that," he announced bluntly, while his eyes contentedly followed the movement of her slim, deft fingers. They showed very white against the dark blue gingham.

"Well, it is true! This is the first act of spontaneous kindness that I have been guilty of for a month."

"A dress like that would be everlastingly becoming to you—made out of finer stuff, of course."

"Why, no; this is really a good quality. It means that the whole new far more charming she was this way than when she was ta-or-made."

"So you are putting in your holiday making aprons for old Sue?" "Yes, that is the really remarkable thing of it. That I should be doing something for somebody else. A thing that it rarely ever occurs to me to do."

"I don't believe that," he announced bluntly, while his eyes contentedly followed the movement of her slim, deft fingers. They showed very white against the dark blue gingham.

"Well, it is true! This is the first act of spontaneous kindness that I have been guilty of for a month."

"A dress like that would be everlastingly becoming to you—made out of finer stuff, of course."

"Why, no; this is really a good quality. It means that the whole new far more charming she was this way than when she was ta-or-made."

"So you are putting in your holiday making aprons for old Sue?" "Yes, that is the really remarkable thing of it. That I should be doing something for somebody else. A thing that it rarely ever occurs to me to do."

"I don't believe that," he announced bluntly, while his eyes contentedly followed the movement of her slim, deft fingers. They showed very white against the dark blue gingham.

"Well, it is true! This is the first act of spontaneous kindness that I have been guilty of for a month."

"A dress like that would be everlastingly becoming to you—made out of finer stuff, of course."

"Why, no; this is really a good quality. It means that the whole new far more charming she was this way than when she was ta-or-made."

"So you are putting in your holiday making aprons for old Sue?" "Yes, that is the really remarkable thing of it. That I should be doing something for somebody else. A thing that it rarely ever occurs to me to do."

"I don't believe that," he announced bluntly, while his eyes contentedly followed the movement of her slim, deft fingers. They showed very white against the dark blue gingham.

"Well, it is true! This is the first act of spontaneous kindness that I have been guilty of for a month."

"A dress like that would be everlastingly becoming to you—made out of finer stuff, of course."

"Why, no; this is really a good quality. It means that the whole new far more charming she was this way than when she was ta-or-made."

"So you are putting in your holiday making aprons for old Sue?" "Yes, that is the really remarkable thing of it. That I should be doing something for somebody else. A thing that it rarely ever occurs to me to do."

"I don't believe that," he announced bluntly, while his eyes contentedly followed the movement of her slim, deft fingers. They showed very white against the dark blue gingham.

"Well, it is true! This is the first act of spontaneous kindness that I have been guilty of for a month."

"A dress like that would be everlastingly becoming to you—made out of finer stuff, of course."

"Why, no; this is really a good quality. It means that the whole new far more charming she was this way than when she was ta-or-made."

"So you are putting in your holiday making aprons for old Sue?" "Yes, that is the really remarkable thing of it. That I should be doing something for somebody else. A thing that it rarely ever occurs to me to do."

"I don't believe that," he announced bluntly, while his eyes contentedly followed the movement of her slim, deft fingers. They showed very white against the dark blue gingham.

"Well, it is true! This is the first act of spontaneous kindness that I have been guilty of for a month."

"A dress like that would be everlastingly becoming to you—made out of finer stuff, of course."

"Why, no; this is really a good quality. It means that the whole new far more charming she was this way than when she was ta-or-made."

"So you are putting in your holiday making aprons for old Sue?" "Yes, that is the really remarkable thing of it. That I should be doing something for somebody else. A thing that it rarely ever occurs to me to do."

"I don't believe that," he announced bluntly, while his eyes contentedly followed the movement of her slim, deft fingers. They showed very white against the dark blue gingham.

"Well, it is true! This is the first act of spontaneous kindness that I have been guilty of for a month."

"A dress like that would be everlastingly becoming to you—made out of finer stuff, of course."

"Why, no; this is really a good quality. It means that the whole new far more charming she was this way than when she was ta-or-made."

"So you are putting in your holiday making aprons for old Sue?" "Yes, that is the really remarkable thing of it. That I should be doing something for somebody else. A thing that it rarely ever occurs to me to do."

"I don't believe that," he announced bluntly, while his eyes contentedly followed the movement of her slim, deft fingers. They showed very white against the dark blue gingham.

"Well, it is true! This is the first act of spontaneous kindness that I have been guilty of for a month."

"A dress like that would be everlastingly becoming to you—made out of finer stuff, of course."

"Why, no; this is really a good quality. It means that the whole new far more charming she was this way than when she was ta-or-made."

man, woman or child, lies in temperate living, exercise and cleanliness.

Late hours and high living will rob the most charming face of its beauty.

Highly seasoned foods, hot breads and sweets will cause indigestion and stomach troubles, which bring on serious skin blemishes, and the once fair skin gives way to a pallor or reddish hue.

The tepid bath should be taken every day. It is a purifying agent, and is indispensable. It is the best cosmetic that can be recommended; it prevents diseases, impurities are thrown off, cutaneous obstructions are removed and the surface of the body is preserved in its brightness, softness and health.

A teaspoonful of ammonia in the bath is recommended; it acts as a tonic, sending the blood tingling to the surface, and closes the pores. Friction should be employed in drying.

POINTERS FOR HOUSEWIVES.

Kid gloves will not mold if you pack them away carefully in a dry place.

Silk and rayon gloves should be washed and improved in flavor by soaking in sour milk instead of water.

Milk and butter should always be kept cleaning is much recommended: Cover the feathers with a paste made of pipe-clay and water, rubbing them only once. When dry, shake to free them of the powder, and then curl them with a bone or silver fruit knife.

Brass and copper articles, such as fenders, fireirons, etc., should be rubbed with a little sweet oil and finally powdered with rottenstone, then polished with a leather; if, however, they are in a very bad state, the following paste should be used: One ounce oxalic acid, six ounces rottenstone, half ounce gum arabic, made into a little paste with one ounce sweet oil and a little water; rub on with a piece of flannel, then polish with a soft cloth and a leather.

Indeed a Question.

Rev. Dr. Samuel Parkes Cadman, pastor of the Central Congregational church, Brooklyn, tells a story of a patriotic small boy in his Sunday school whom he calls "Little George."

He had told the class of the things that God had created at the beginning, and then suddenly turned to the tiny youngster.

"What did God make on the fourth day, George?" inquired the tutor.

"Now the boys' answer was his father and mother and beautiful flag his father had just purchased, so instead of the expected answer, "The sun, moon and stars," George confidently exclaimed: "The Stars and Stripes!"

Involuntarily the teacher smiled, and the little man cried when she said he was wrong.

"Well," he replied, indignantly, "if He didn't make 'em, who did?"

His Sweetheart's Letter.

London Tit-Bits.

A colonel, on his tour of inspection, unexpectedly entered the drillroom, when he came across a company of soldiers, one of them reading aloud while the other was listening, and, at the same time, stopping up the ear of his reader.

"What are you doing there?" the puzzled officer inquired of the former.

"You see, colonel, I've written to Atkins, who can't read himself, a letter which has arrived by this afternoon's post from his sweetheart."

"And you, Atkins, what in all the world are you doing?"

"Please, colonel, I am stopping up Murphy's ears with both hands, because I don't mind his reading my sweetheart's letters, but I don't want him to hear a single word of what she has written."

Johnny's Prompt Answer.

Yonah's Companion.

"What are misappals?" asked the teacher, and Johnny was ready with his answer.

"Animals that have pouches in their stomachs," he said, glibly.

"And for what are these pouches used?" asked the teacher, ignoring the slight inaccuracy of the answer. "I'm sure that you know that, too."

"Yes'm," said Johnny, with encouraging promptness. "The pouches are for them to crawl into and conceal themselves when pursued."

BELLARMINO.

Bellarmino, one of the most troublesome of the Filipino leaders, laid down his arms and surrendered to the U. S. Col. Theo J. Wint, of the Sixth United States Cavalry, on Friday.

Bellarmino, Bellarmino.

Could you no longer sprint, that with a thousand men or so you would be the country's cause?

By laying down to Wint—To Col. Wint.

To Thee, Wint—Eeeng, thereby, no longer Int? O, Ho!

Why did you ever fighting go, Bellarmino, Bellarmino?

Bellarmino, Bellarmino, Why did you choose to be To Uncle Sam a deadly foe, When, as you surely ought to know, He was a friend to ye?

A friend to ye In truth was he, As every man could plainly see.

Wo! Did no adviser tell you so, Bellarmino, Bellarmino?

Bellarmino, Bellarmino, You were a fighter true, As fierce as old Geronimo, That hundred-headed Apache bear, Who killed a man or two, But, ah, he knew It wouldn't do.

To fight his Uncle Sam, and you—O, Wo!

I see, have found the same is so, Bellarmino, Bellarmino!

—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Observation-Parlor-Case.

Cars are found on the Northern Pacific's morning trains between the Twin Cities and the Head of the Lakes.

Some comfort riding in such cars, with their steam heat in winter time.

Go to Hutchinson Via Great Northern.

When you go to Hutchinson be sure to purchase your ticket via the Great Northern. Leaves Union depot, St. Paul, 4:30 p. m. daily except Sunday.

St. Paul to Hutchinson Via Great Northern.

For particulars, rates, etc., call at City Ticket Office, 332 Robert street, St. Paul.

PICTURE PUZZLE.

The Babes in the Woods. Find their cruel uncle and the two robbers. Solution of yesterday's puzzle picture: Spardeck, Gunwale.

WOES OF THE DEBUTANTE.

Four young women recently found themselves together in the drawing room at Edith's hall.

The eldest, who had just entered her second winter, had existed socially for a year, and was beginning her second season; the third had preceded the latter by a twelvemonth, and the fourth, who looked decidedly bored as she listened in an absent-minded fashion to their chatter, was a society girl of pronounced position, to whom the fears and nervousness expressed by her juniors seemed rather childish.

"Why do you worry about partners?" she said languidly to No. 3. "I can fancy little Lizzie (the debutante) might feel anxious to show me a thing or two, but she is a debutante, and that Judith (No. 2) should, perhaps, wish to prove that her popularity did not depend upon a debutante's dignity, and my own, who seldom engaged for a dance before hand nowadays. The men I know best do not care to be forced to stay for the cotillion any more than I do myself. If I feel that I am not sufficiently agreeable to them, I say, 'if not, I go away.' A woman of the world should feel thoroughly at home in a ballroom, and not be dependent upon masculine support."

Having delivered her little homily, this superior young person arose, and, throwing out her train, departed to a group of young matrons, and became suddenly animated and charming just as the door opened to admit of some of the men, who at once joined the party.

"So you are putting in your holiday making aprons for old Sue?" "Yes, that is the really remarkable thing of it. That I should be doing something for somebody else. A thing that it rarely ever occurs to me to do."

"I don't believe that," he announced bluntly, while his eyes contentedly followed the movement of her slim, deft fingers. They showed very white against the dark blue gingham.

"Well, it is true! This is the first act of spontaneous kindness that I have been guilty of for a month."

"A dress like that would be everlastingly becoming to you—made out of finer stuff, of course."

"Why, no; this is really a good quality. It means that the whole new far more charming she was this way than when she was ta-or-made."

"So you are putting in your holiday making aprons for old Sue?" "Yes, that is the really remarkable thing of it. That I should be doing something for somebody else. A thing that it rarely ever occurs to me to do."

"I don't believe that," he announced bluntly, while his eyes contentedly followed the movement of her slim, deft fingers. They showed very white against the dark blue gingham.

"Well, it is true! This is the first act of spontaneous kindness that I have been guilty of for a month."

"A dress like that would be everlastingly becoming to you—made out of finer stuff, of course."

"Why, no; this is really a good quality. It means that the whole new far more charming she was this way than when she was ta-or-made."

"So you are putting in your holiday making aprons for old Sue?" "Yes, that is the really remarkable thing of it. That I should be doing something for somebody else. A thing that it rarely ever occurs to me to do."

"I don't believe that," he announced bluntly, while his eyes contentedly followed the movement of her slim, deft fingers. They showed very white against the dark blue gingham.

"Well, it is true! This is the first act of spontaneous kindness that I have been guilty of for a month."

"A dress like that would be everlastingly becoming to you—made out of finer stuff, of course."

"Why, no; this is really a good quality. It means that the whole new far more charming she was this way than when she was ta-or-made."

"So you are putting in your holiday making aprons for old Sue?" "Yes, that is the really remarkable thing of it. That I should be doing something for somebody else. A thing that it rarely ever occurs to me to do."

"I don't believe that," he announced bluntly, while his eyes contentedly followed the movement of her slim, deft fingers. They showed very white against the dark blue gingham.

"Well, it is true! This is the first act of spontaneous kindness that I have been guilty of for a month."

"A dress like that would be everlastingly becoming to you—made out of finer stuff, of course."

"Why, no; this is really a good quality. It means that the whole new far more charming she was this way than when she was ta-or-made."

"So you are putting in your holiday making aprons for old Sue?" "Yes, that is the really remarkable thing of it. That I should be doing something for somebody else. A thing that it rarely ever occurs to me to do."

"I don't believe that," he announced bluntly, while his eyes contentedly followed the movement of her slim, deft fingers