Minot Editor Continues to Find Home of Bride Burned Down and Fault With Measures That Are Fathered by the Senior

Special to The Globe.

GRAND FORKS, N. D., March 2. There is scarcely anything that occupies more attention in the farming communi ties just now than the creamery ques tion. For several years there has been a disposition among farmers to go into the dairy business more extensively than they have done so far, and there are cream eries established in various parts of the state, many of which are doing well, and sending out butter which is a credit to the state. The records of the contests at the Pan-American exposition were some what surprising to many people both East and West, who still entertained the opinion that North Dakota produced only wheat on the farms and stock or

Mr. Cashel, of Grafton, though interested in the creamery business, is under stood not to have lost interest in politics, as he will in all probability be a candidate for re-election as senator from that district. It is said that he may be opposed by former State Treasurer Dris-coll, but there are many who doubt this. Mr. Driscoll, if he has been campaigning at all, has been doing so in a very quict manner, and if he goes into the campaign he will have a hard fight on his hands. as Cashel is a very strong man, and stands well with the Republicans of his district, though he is a Democrat. Marshall McClure, of the Minot Optic, continues to belabor Senator Hansbrough. Hansbrough is his pet aversion. The disagreement was over a matter of pat-ronage, and the editor is very sore. It took him some time to find a hole in Hansbrough's irrigation bill, but he has found it at last, or he thinks so, and the senator catches it every week. The trouble with the bill, according to the Optic, is that the money received from the sale of lands is to go all into one pot, and from this are to be drawn the funds needed for the construction of irrigation works. As there is comparatively little of this work to do in this state most of the money will be spent elsewhere. This the Optic thinks is enough

As a matter of fact, though there is not much irrigating to be done in this state, there is some, and Hansbrough's paper, the Devil's Lake Interocean, points out that there are several sections where work of this kind would be performed could the money be secured. It is also a fact that there are in the state several sections where irrigation is carried on by individuals, but as there are no means for the construction of general systems this work can only be carried on in a few places. So far as the disposition of the money is concerned, the money received now for the sale of lands goes into the federal treasury, and no state receives any portion of the money received from

The dismissal of Judge Noves was received here with comparative indifference. The case has been so long before the public that opinions were formed long ago concerning its merits, and there are many people whose opinions could of be made to vary no matter what the evidence might be. There is some curiosity as to what the effect on state politics

The attitude of the North Dakota senators has subjected them to some criticism, and the dismissal of Noyes compolitical debt to McKenzie which he took this way of paying. This is disputed by many. Some of the papers are talking of M. B. De La Bere, of Sheldon, for insurance commissioner. Mike is the owner of the Sheldon Progress, and a very bright fellow. It is not considered likely that if he should be elected he would make the mistake that George W. Harrison did when he held that office. Harrison is also a newspaper man, and one of the prinannually. Harrison did fairly well in many cases, but when it came to the Fourth district, in which both he and De La Bere are located, he held up most of the statements for his own paper, and furnished his neighbor with one or pos-

NORTH DAKOTA COMING TO THE WILLIAM LIEBRECHT AND BRIDE. OF MANKATO, VICTIMS OF RE-LENTLESS PERSECUTION

Many Threats Being Received by Mystified Couple-No Apparent Motive.

Special to The Globe.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., March 2.- A mysterious persecutor is pursuing William Liebrecht and his young bride, prominent German residents of Mankato. Arrivals from that city furnish the details of the mysterious persecution of the young couple by an unknown enemy, who seems determined to make life miserable for the groom and bride, who until a few months ago, when the series of persecutions commenced, were not aware that they had an enemy in the whole world. The story contains all the elements which go to make up the successful novel of the yellow back detective variety, only in this case the bloodhounds of the law, notwithstanding that they have made strenuous efforts, have been completely and persistently baffled. They have not been able during the many weeks that the persecutions and mysterious assaults have continued to secure the slightest clue which would reveal the identity of the person or persons who are pursuing the young couple.

The bride is the daughter of Carl Kawell, a veteran of the Civil war, who is at present an inmate of the state soldiers' home at Minnehaha. Mrs. Kawell and her five children, including her daughter Emma, who is now Mrs. William Liebrecht, were last November occupying the Kawell homestead, situated a short distance from Mankato. Emma was engaged in the dressmaking busi-ness in Mankato, but was living at home with her mother and brothers and sis ters. She was at the time keeping com pany with the young man who is now her husband, and this fact doubtless was the reason for the commencement of the long series of persecutions of which her self and Liebrecht have been the victims, the motive of the unknown, as re vealed by letters found at various point about the premises and in the vicinity being jealousy, and the purpose of the persecution originally being to prevent by threats of personal injury the marriage of the young couple.

Apparently No Motive. But what adds deeper mystery to the matter is that Emma had no other lover who could have been prompted to indulge in the persecutions by jealousy. The persecutions were preceded by a number of letters written in the German language, and two of which were mysteriously placed in the Kaweil resi-dence. The first letter was found fastened to a rear window. It contained threats of a serious nature, and warned the family that their home would be burned. Th family paid no attention to the warning, believing it to be the work of some boys who were trying to play a joke upon them.

The second letter was found tied with an ordinary string to the knob of a screen door at the rear of the house. It was left there during the few minutes that Charles Kawell was caring for the horses for the night, his sister Emma was shortly after 9 o'clock in the even-ing, while the other members of the family were at the supper table. This ietter also contained a warning, telling the

At 2 o'clock on the morning of Nov. 9 the strange series of events culminated in a successful attempt to destroy the Kawell home by fire. The fire was disrecht), who was awakened by the crack-ling of the flames as they were eating turn rushed into the rooms occupied by two younger children, who were saved with great difficulty. The escape from death of the whole family was a narrow wearing apparel with the exception of such articles of clothing as the members of the family could hastily gather together.

When daylight appeared and curious spectators gathered around the scene of the mysterious fire a third letter from the unknown was discovered nailed to a butternut tree about thirty rods from the smouldering ashes of the burned dwelling and on the s.de nearest to Mankato. This letter was also written in the German language, and stated in substance that the house had been burned, but that the worst was yet to come.

The first two letters sent to the Kawell family were in envelopes, while that found tacked to the tree was written on a large plece of wrapping paper, and was more in the nature of a white-capper's warning. The first two letters were quite lengthy. The handwriting in all the letters apparently was the same.

the letters apparently was the same.

Persecutor Did Not Let Up.

It was supposed that with the destruction of the Kawell home the work of the fiend would cease. However, the Nemesis without delay turned his or her attention to the work of plotting the destruction of the house where Liebrecht lived. Just at dusk a few evenings after the burning of the Kawell home Christopher Boknner, a nelghbor of Liebrecht, was seated in his home when his children came running in to inform him that they had discovered a sheet of paper tacked to a telegraph pole, and they wanted him to read it.

Donner went to the pole, removed the large piece of wrapping paper and read the words written upon it. It was similar to that found on the tree near the ruins of the Kawell home. It stated that the Kawell house had been burned, but that the worst was yet to come.

Donner lost no time in notifying the owner of the house of the threat contained in the letter. All the rest of that night a close watch was maintained, and had anyone appeared for the purpose of setting fire to the house they would have met with a very warm reception. Another letter was found the next morning tacked to a tree about half a block south of where a former note had been discovered. This also contained the warning that if Liebrecht did not cease paying attentions to Miss Kawell the Torne house, where he lived, would be burned. This warning was tacked to the tree in the evening, as several men saw it there while going home, but paid no attention to it or gave it any thought at the time.

"That Liebrecht must go to Stillwater for life. He burned that Kawell house. His house will be burned the — if he is that girl alone."

More Letters Came.

More Letters Came.

During the next few days several more letters were found at various points. All of them were in substance the same. Then for a period of about three weeks not a single letter was found. On the morning of Dec. 5 the unknown letter writer again resumed business. A letter in the same handwriting was found tacked to the door of the German Methodist church by Emil Fenske. Janitor of the Mankato Union school building, as he was on his way to work. Led by curiosity Fenske read the epistle, and he soon discovered that it related to Liebrecht and the Kawell fam'ly. This was turned over to the police.

Notwithstanding the threats, Liebrecht continued to keep company with Miss Kawell, and, during the holldays, led her to the altar. For several weeks thereafter a close watch was maintained through fear that the writer of the threatening letters would attempt to injure them or their property. But nothing more was heard from the mysterious source, and the couple were beginning to believe that the persecutions had ceased, when, a few nights ago, their hopes were rudely dispelled.

The latest evidence that the unknown letter writer intended to continue his er her warfare consisted of an attack-on the home of the young couple, during which windows were broken and other damage done. Two young men went to their home between 4 and 5 o'clock and piled a quantity of wood against their front door.

WOMAN'S CLUB IN PARIS.

A young lady residing at the "Home Club for American Art Students" gives an Interesting description of this institution which affords an ideal home for American girls who go to study in Paris. The club owes its inception and initiatory support to a group of American women headed by Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, and the latter still contributes liberally to its maintenance. It is situated in the Rue de Chevreuse, in the Montparnasse quarter, within easy walking distance of the Luxembourg Gardens, the Beaux-Arts and in the midst of many of the principal studios, among them those of Bougwereau Laurens and Whistler. The famous schools of Colarosse, Delectuse and Montparnasse are within a few minutes' reach.

Montparnasse are within a rew reach.

The house itself is charmingly plcturesque. It is a fine old mansion, which, it is sa d, was built in the days when the street it stands on was a country lane. Tradition tells that it was once a convent; but it has been claimed that the house was formerly the hotel of the seductive and restless friend of Anne of Austria, the Duchesse de Chevreuse.

Anne of Austria, the Duchesse de Chevreuse.

Here the American girl who goes to Paris may have ail the comforts of home under matronly supervisor and among refined surroundings. The girls who live there pay a moderate but adequate board. They are in no sense objects of charity, but the home is one of delightful and economic safety for young women who, in the pursuit of art. annually go unprotected abroad. A library and reading room are maintained with free facilities for correspondence and this is open to every American girl in Paris, and each afternoon at 5 the members of the club have their American girl friends in for a cup of tea. There is an occasional dance and the big annual bal given is an event which has been called the most characteristically American dance given in Europe. Informal sketching classes are organized, where one of the girls poses, another volunteers to become the rabbit cook, or yet another picks dance music from guitar transcolin. Exhibitions are held from time to time and the American Woman's Art association holds its annual display here. Miss Blanch Dillaye, of Phi'adelpha, was the chairman of this year's exhibition committee. The club is opened to students of music, although those who paint and draw and "sculpt" are naturally in the majority.—Philadelphia Times.
