DANISHMENT IS THE PENALTY FOR POLITICAL ACTIVITY IN RUSSIAN CITIES

RESULT OF REPEATED RIOTS

Nearly 1,000 Taken Into Custody in Moscow While Making Demands for a Constitutional Government

DEPORTATION IS TO FOLLOW

ST. PETERSBURG, March 14.—The government of Moscow and the Russian minister of the interior, M. Sipiaguine, strongly urged that the 600 students who were arrested recently in Moscow should be deported to Siberia, while the others will be banished to various towns and villages in Russia.

ST. PETERSBURG, Saturday, March 1.—Private letters received here, referring to the recent Moscow university meeting, confirm the view that those of the students who do not participate in the disturbances from American college boys "can rush" motives; that is, those who have conscientious aims, are actuated by political rather than academic considerations. The number present at the Moscow meeting is given at 618. The departure of about 100 who disapproved of general politics was followed by the unanimous adoption of the following resolution:

As the present abnormal situation of the higher educational institution is merely a consequence of the general absence of civil and political rights in Russia, we desire to do away with the illusion that our students can participate in the disturbances on our banner "general political demands." We are convinced that a normal academic life requires a total reform of the whole political system on the basis of the recognition of individual liberty. Without such a reform we are convinced that Russia will not make a single step forward as her best men are periodically torn from society. We demand:

First—Personal, corporal liberty (habes corpus) and similar guarantees are meant.

Second—Freedom of the press.

Third—Freedom of conscience.

Fourth—Unrestricted privilege of assembly.

Fifth—Responsibility of administrative officials to the courts on the same terms as other citizens.

Sixth—Universal, but not compulsory education.

Seventh—Equality of nationalities.

We appeal to all thinking Russians on the ground that it is necessary to elect a constituent assembly, since it is evident.

TWO BRIDES IN ST. PAUL

CHRISTIAN C. NELSON'S CAREER BRISTLES WITH BRIEF MATRIMONIAL EXPERIENCES

ROBBED MOST OF HIS VICTIMS

One of Them Is Prominent in St. Paul Society and She Will Not Prosecute Him

AS MANY ALIASES AS WIVES

Winning women's hearts and breaking them, marrying for the purpose of robbing his brides, was the central thought in the brief but meteoric career of Christian C. Nelson, with five other aliases, who was arrested for bigamy at San Antonio, Tex., Friday night.

Two St. Paul girls fell victims to the wiles of the giddy Nelson, who has posed as a German count, business agent, financial promoter, gallant soldier, etc., and he may be brought to St. Paul to stand trial. The identity of one of his St. Paul brides, a prominent young woman, is zealously guarded, and unless the other demands that her betrayer be punished in Minnesota, he will be offered in turn to the authorities of California, Oregon, Utah, South Carolina and New York. Nelson's aliases, so far as known are Nelson Foster, Capt. A. N. Freeland, John Anderson, Nelson Porter, Charles E. Porter, and the name of a distinguished German family, which is usually quoted by the St. Paul woman who became his bride, believing she was marrying a German count.

His first St. Paul bride, who was No. 2 on the list, as compiled to date, was Miss Laura Schultze, a countess, the daughter of a prominent local fur establishment. Nelson married Miss Schultze under the alias of Charles E. Porter. He took her to Chicago, robbed her of her jewelry and money, and disappeared. The license for the Porter-Schultze marriage was issued Aug. 16. Six weeks later he was again on deck as a count, the son of a noble German family, and had won for a bride a well known young society woman. He remained with his second St. Paul bride, the daughter of a prominent family, for a few days, and then departed from his usual method in that he did not rob her. After his departure he wrote her a very pretty letter, acquainting her with the fact that he would not prosecute.

Will Not Prosecute. The victim never made complaint, because of the unpleasant notoriety, and will not now consent to appear against the gay count. Nelson's visits to St. Paul were brief. He had the faculty of arranging his affairs and marriages with neatness and dispatch. In personal appearance he was just the kind of man women are expected to admire. He was over six feet in height, with square shoulders, florid complexion, and a stubby, dark mustache. He was always faultlessly attired, and his erect bearing gave him a striking and attractive appearance. He claimed to be of German descent, and spoke with a decided accent. He gave his age variously from forty-two to forty-eight, but looked much younger.

Nelson was fastidious in the choice of his brides, and his methods bespeak the energetic business man. His career as a professional bridegroom, so far as known to date, began in Los Angeles, Cal., in July, 1898, in the ensuing months he had accumulated to himself seven brides and all the loose personal property of seven brides in six different states. His Los Angeles victim and bride, Mrs. M. J. Brown, a middle-aged woman, prominent in suburban society. They met on a train in the East. After parting, a correspondence was kept up until he suddenly appeared in Los Angeles and asked immediate fulfillment of her promise to become his wife. A minister was summoned to the house late on
