"I have lived in St. Paul many years, and while in every campaign that I can remember, the repeater scare has been raised and used as a campaign club by the Republicans. I have never known of an arrest or a conviction for illegal voting. This time I am inclined to give more credence to the reports of repeating than ever before. The defeated Republican candidate openly charges that the fight on him was irregular, and that he has affidavits to prove his charges. I do not propose to be the victim of that kind of politics. I have not examined the registration sheets, but it is claimed that he is in earnest and his offer is not the well worn intimidation tactics of some of the Republican workers, the combined reward of a similar reward of $100. If the honesty of American citizenship is not sufficient to protect legal voters and candidates, in any event, I propose not to be the victim of a factional fight of the Republican ranks, and I will cheerfully pay $200 to secure the conviction of anyone tampering with the vote."
