Irwin A. Gardner Sentenced to Stillwater for Receiving a Bribe

HE HAS NOTHING TO SAY

To Be Given His Liberty on $10,000 Bond Pending Motion for a New Trial-His Attorneys Confident of Reversal.

The drama in which Irwin Gardner, the special police officer of the City of Minneapolis, was found guilty of accepting a bribe of $500 from "Billy" Edwards and "Link" Crossman, "big mitt" operators, is rapidly drawing to a close Gardner was brought before Judge Har rison at 12 o'clock yesterday to receive his sentence for the crime he had committed. The judge asked him what business he was engaged in. The defendant informed him that he had been for the past three years a medical student of Hamline university. He said that he was twenty in the was twenty-nine years of age.

Judge Harrison then asked him if there was anything he had to say why sentence should not be passed at this time. Gardrer replied in the negative. The Judge then sentence Gardner as follows: "You have been indicted and found guilty freezing as the lift consider as the freezing of the lift consider." of receiving a bribe. It is considered and adjudged by this court as punishment for that crime, that you be confined for six gears at hard labor in the state's prison

Gardner received the sentence with no ordeal was over turned away from the bar and commenced chatting with his atforneys and friends, just as though rothing unusual had transpired. He was immediately taken back to the jail by Capt. Alexander, and partook of his roonday meal in company with his attorneys.

Will Stand Pat. Gardner is apparently buoyed up by the hope which his attorneys have given him in relation to their chances for se-curing a new trial, or in getting a re-versal in the supreme court when the case is submitted to that court, as it will be if they fall to show Judge Harrison wherein he has seriously erred in rendering decisions to which exceptions have been taken. been taken.

From present indications it would appear as though Gardner would stand "pat" and say nothing regarding the trial now pending, that would incriminate any of the men who are charged with having been connected with "big mitt" (perators in the city. Many were of the opinion that Gardner was getting ready to "squeal" and now they are disappointed. Gardner's bond, it is understood, will be ready to submit to the court on Monday. If the bond is approved, 'which will be for $16,000, Gardner will be given his liberty pending the motion for a new trial, and the argument of the facts, and also pending the appeal to the supreme court whither his attorneys have decided to take the case.

CHARLES BARDEN BURIED ALIVE.

Was Covered With Caving Sand in a Forty-Foot Well. When the band of earnest workers nad labored heroically through all the long night, and yesterday forenoon in their endeavors to release Charles Bar-Gen from his living tomb, where he was buried beneath the sand of a caved in well forty feet below the surface, reached the object of their search, he reached the object of their search, he had passed beyond recall.

The dead body was taken out of the well yesterday at 12:20 p. m. and from all appearances he had been dead for several hours. The accident happened about 3 o'clock Friday afternoon, when Barden went into the well to cut off a p:pe that ran through it. In doing so he removed a couple of pieces of curbing, which allowed loose sand to run into the well and the force of the sand loosened well, and the force of the sand loosened other parts of the curbing, and before assistance arrived he was partially buried.

A hastily constructed roof of loose boards was placed over Barden's head, and in a short time he was completely entombed in a living grave. It then be-came necessary for the men to com-mence at the top and remove the sand. In a short time the boards that had been placed over his head gave way owing to the great weight of the sand, and the unfortunate man was literally buried

He remained alive, however, until 12 o clock Friday night, and the last words that he was heard to utter, when he was told to keep up his courage, was that "his trust was in the Lord."

Nothing but praise on all sides can be heard for the work done by "Tom" Zeller, a paper hanger, who, at the risk of losing his own life, went down into the well and worked continuously hour after hour filling bucket after bucket with sand to be drawn to the top. He said that he was confident that Barden was dead long before he reached him, as he had heard the death rattle in his to make himself believe that there might to make imself believe that there might yet be one vital spark left when he should at last be recovered.

At the well through all the long night were Barden's parents, his two brothers and three sisters. They are all pros-trated with grief. A purse of $70 was raised for Zeller by the Linden hills resi-

The immunity secured for Adams is said to have been brought about through the good offices of Detective King. He is said to have concealed Adams' connection with the crime.

It is also charged that the Hooper diamond has been recovered and that De-tective King retained it, never turning it over to the owner. Johs Reid was brought over from Stillwater and testi-fied to these facts, it is understood, be-fore the grand jury, which was the rea-son for the arrest of King on the charg-

King pleaded "not guilty" to both counts, and his attorney, Victor Welch, was given until next Tuesday to prepar a demurrer to the indictment or withdraw the plea. King's bond was fixed at $5,000, Johs Flannagan, Leffengwell and Edward Massolt appeared as sureties.

PROGRESS IN NORBECK TRIAL

Story of "Graft" Recounted With Wonderful Accuracy.

There was very little new or startling testimony introduced at the bribery case of Christopher C. Norbeck yesterday. "Billy" Edwards was on the stand most of the day, both in the direct and cross-examination. He was the same positive witness as when testifying in the dardner trial

When he was turned over to Attorney Erwin for cross-examination he was seemingly much more at ease than when he passed through that trying ordeal the first time the noted attorney had an op-portunty to cross-examine him. He was direct and positive in his answers to all questions, and at no time was he dis-cencerted. He told of his agreements with Norbeck and the part which the de-tective had played in the role of accom-plice to Edwards and Crossman in their operations to "skin suckers" under pohee protection.

Norbeck sat beside his attorneys and displayed very little concern in the case as it advanced or in the retial of "Billy".

Edwards, which story, if believed by the jurors, certainly means that he will at least he denrived of his liberty for a least be deprived of his liberty for a term of years.

The story told by Edwards implicates Norbeck very closely with operations of the "big mitters," and relates the fact that he was around their joints most of the time when he was supposed to be doing duty as an officer of the city. Attorney Erwin again made an unsuc-essful attempt to find out the exact loeation of the 'ledger," in which the firm of Edwards and Crossman were supposed to have kept their accounts. This is the book that the defense is very anxiou to get hold of, as they think that it con tains evidence which would be of much benefit to them. Their attempts to se-cure it were just as futile as they were on the former trial, and the book at the present time is safely lodged, no one seems to know where.

During the afternoon Attorney Erwin tried at different times to impeach the testimony of Edwards, given at the Gardner trial, but all of his attempts Gardner trial, but all of his attempts proved miserable failures, as Edwards had just as good and retentive a memory for the truth this time as he had on his former investigation, and would tell almost word for word the story he told before.

Finally Mr. Erwin gave the matter up, and said he was through with the viness. Detective Harvey was then called by the state. this testimony directly connected Norbeck with a $275 draft deal that the "big mitt" operators had been instrumental in separating from one of the "innocents."

Attorney Loomis was also called, and he testified to a conversation which he had relative to a draft he had and was trying to collect for Orrin Crossman, and he said that Norbeck told him that when the draft was collected that he (Norbeck) was to receive $25 out of it. Loomis told him that he knew nothing about any such arrangements, and that was a matter he would have to settle with Crossman direct.

It is understood that the state has a number of star witnesses which they are going to place on the stand, and that the case against Norbeck is a much stronger one than they had against Gardner. The court room was filled with Stronger one than they had against Gardner. The court room was filled with people interested in the matter, and through the extreme heat many stool up the entire day. The case will be resumed Monday morning at 9 o'clock.

which Gov. van Sant was a guest of honor, was a success.

A large number of citizens were in attendance, added to many officers in military attire. Music for the reception and hop was furnished by the Peerless orchestra. During the evening refresh-ments were served. The dancing hall was profusely decorated in flags and bunting. It was the prettiest formal military hop the city ever gave.

Col. Joseph Bobleter, commander of the Second regiment, was a camp visitor today. Among others were Maj. Whitney, Capt. Milliken, both of Faribault, and officers in the Second, and Maj. Williams, military storekeeper of the Wisconsin guards.

Capt. Nordby has finished his work as military storekeeper for the year with the Third, having them fully supplied.
