ANARCHISM IN PATERSON.

The scenes enacted in Paterson, N. J., on Wednesday were such as to give the utmost concern to all peaceable members of society. No doubt an effort will be made to hold the representatives of organized labor in Paterson, if not elsewhere, responsible for the riot and bloodshed which prevailed. Yet the disturbance appears to have been of distinctly anarchistic origin, and seems to have been directed as much against the sober and industrious working people of Paterson as against their employers.

At least one of the leaders of the Paterson riot is a notorious foreign anarchist. The man McQueen has achieved much notoriety in a small way by his anarchistic avowals communicated on a few occasions to American newspaper readers through the cable. It will be remembered particularly that he made himself conspicuous on the occasion of an anarchistic gathering called in London to rejoice over the assassination of President McKinley.

The police authorities of Paterson seem to have been greatly at fault in allowing the possibility of such an outbreak as has taken place. The city has been notorious for some time past as a rendezvous for anarchists and is looked to as an American center of anarchistic activity by all who concern themselves immediately in the operations of that band of outlaws.

There should be no question whatever allowed to exist as to the true nature of the relationship borne by the working people of Paterson to the bloody outbreak of Wednesday. In several of the mills attacked by the mob the main defense of property and property was effected through the operatives at work there at the time. This was notably so, according to the press reports, in the case of the Columbian mill, a silk ribbon factory which was attacked by the mob. In that case a recognized leader of the ribbon weavers took command of the defense and openly denounced the anarchists. Such was also the case when the anarchists attacked the Empire and Augusta mills. There even the women employed engaged in the defense of their employers' property and one of the woman operatives was injured by the violence of the mob. It is quite evident that the anarchist propaganda which was carried on at Paterson for so long finds there its chief source on this side of the Atlantic. The presence in that city of such men as McQueen and Galliana, avowed anarchistic leaders, shows that Wednesday's disturbances represent but the first act in the tragedy of anarchism if these men are permitted to have their way.

The Globe regards the events at Paterson as being of the gravest importance. They should be the signal for continuous activity on the part of public authority. The ringleaders who have been engaged in rioting at Paterson ought at all hazards to be arrested and jailed for the limit of the time allowed by law. If the commodity known as Jersey justice is not a myth the authorities of the state of New Jersey will teach a lesson to these foreign disturbers which will put an end to their operations on this continent at least for a long time to come.

When gentlemen of the sporting fraternity, like the pugs, the jockeys, the baseball players and the others, find themselves able to indulge in the luxuries of life, there is not so much to be said further about the conquests of mind over matter.

PANAMA IT IS.

The passage of the Spooner amendment, involving the construction of the Panama canal in case the necessary title can be secured to the property, brings to a close at last another phase of this protracted canal controversy. It may really involve the effective ending of the controversy, and the engagement by the United States in the immediate future in the construction of a canal on the plans adopted by De Lesseps.

Death and labor go hand in hand, according to Senator Morgan. In the completion of this work of constructing a waterway along the Panama route. Certainly the trail of death and disease, as well as of financial ruin, left by the French Panama concern leads color to the implied prediction of the greatest southward of the advocates of a trans-isthmian canal.

Whatever the result of the action of the senate may ultimately be, it may be safely said that the connection of the two oceans through the isthmus of Panama is nearer to actual realization than it has ever been since it was first brought before the world over four hundred years ago.

It is worthy of note that the two senators from Minnesota voted against the passage of the measure. There will be few among their constituents to quarrel with them on account of their action. The construction of the canal may prove to be an undertaking of the greatest national value. It is one which will certainly redound to the commercial advantage of certain states and sections of this country. Minnesota will not be one of them.

The main advantage from the commercial viewpoint will be found to come to foreign nations. In view of the treaty recently entered into with England there may be some political advantages secured to this people by the construction of a trans-isthmian canal. The commercial gain will always remain open to question, at least until such time as the work is completed and in actual operation.

There remains yet a great deal to be determined before the canal is to be regarded as a tangible thing. The main question, of course, is the one as to the completeness of the title which the French company has to offer to the property which is thus decided on for purchase by this country. Other questions entering vitally into the matter are likely to arise at any moment; and the situation may ultimately evolve into that insisted on throughout by Senator Morgan, of Nicaragua or nothing. For the present at least the country will receive the advantage of a cessation of a discussion which for years has failed to arouse any substantial interest among the masses of the American people.

Hobson is not himself again—he refused to kiss a girl in public the other day. His request for retirement should be granted.

NO EXPERT IS AUTHORIZED.

City Printing Committee to Employ One Only When Needed.

When the joint committee on printing met yesterday afternoon at the printing office of a city expert printer, the only thing in the charter that authorized the committee to employ an expert printer was the employment of an expert printer when needed.

The ordinance under which this office was created was practically repealed by the charter, and even when in existence did not provide for his continued employment. It specifically stated, "when needed."

This condition of affairs was discovered by Assemblyman Whitcomb.

"Peace" is the word to the war-swept belt. That the galloping burghers bring. "Peace" is the cry in a tone heart-felt. From coast and peer and king.

Here is the language imputed to Senator Nelson addressed to the president and his supporters: "We have been charged with being outside the party lines because we will not agree to the Cuban reciprocity plan which strikes down a single industry for the benefit of a trust."

"Our platforms have time and again declared for reciprocity, and President McKinley, through a special representative, negotiated eleven treaties. None of them has been acted on, and what is more you don't intend to act on them."

It is a statement of the very essence of the position occupied by the Republican administration. The Republican party does not intend to act on any of the treaties referred to by him. That is the determination which was reached with President Roosevelt's concurrence at the opening of that official's administration, as The Globe has repeatedly pointed out, and as our contemporary, the Dispatch, has tried without success to deny. If Senator Nelson and his associates in this movement succeed through their best sugar contention in forcing the consideration of tariff revision and reciprocity upon the serious attention of the national administration they will be rendering to their party, The Globe willingly concedes, a great substantial service. Nor will their service be confined to the party. It may ultimately be of the utmost value to the entire country.
