SALOON MEN TO PROTEST

OBJECT TO SALOON LICENSE BEING GRANTED H. BENNETT

They Say He is Arranging to Hire Ten Men and Twenty-Five Women to Dispense Refreshing Beverages Over the Bar for the Summer Months.

If the application of one H. Bennett for a license to dispense intoxicating liquors at the northwest corner of Washburn street and College avenue is granted by the two bodies of the council, it will be over the strenuous protest of the entire membership of the St. Paul Liquor Dealers' association.

That its grievances may be properly stated and formulated in the shape of a petition requesting that the application be denied, the association has called a mass meeting of saloon owners for next Tuesday afternoon in Central Hall Annex at Sixth and Washington streets. Following it, if possible, the association will endeavor to have called a special meeting of the two Tuesday evening, at which the grievances and petition will be filed.

According to the officers of the Liquor Dealers' association, Bennett, who is a cook in a saloon in Robert street, is acting for an amusement enterprise which proposes to hold forth during the remainder of the warm season in the vacant lot at Washburn street and College avenue. That it may be everything its name implies, the beverage of the fatherland will be dispensed, and for this reason the license is denied, the association will hold forth beneath a huge tent and in this the devotee of the stein can enjoy the novelty of having his thirst satisfied.

Bennett's application for a liquor license was filed Wednesday, and yesterday the officers of the association, among them Secretary Jennings, started the agitation for its denial.

Had Experience at Elks' Fair.

"We had enough of this at the last Elks' carnival," said Mr. Jennings, in explanation of the association's activity. "This Bennett, I understand, is arranging to hire ten barkeepers and twenty-five barnmaids. That means the sale of a lot of beer. It would be all right if the thing was permanent, for it would be competition that any man has a right to engage in, but when it is only for a few weeks, we kick. The Elks' fair, with its bar, was something we did not bargain for. We got the worst of the deal, and we don't want another. The regular saloonkeepers of this city obey the laws, besides paying a heavy license, and it is not just to burden them with an affair like this."

The members of the association have visited the members of the council personally, and it is expected will make a hard fight when the application comes up for consideration.

IDEAL DRAMATIC CLUB
MAKES ITS FIRST BOW

Presents an Amusing Skit Entitled "Not So Bad After All."

A full-sized audience witnessed the first play presented by the Ideal Dramatic association, at the Paul Mallin opera house last evening. The title of the play was "Not So Bad After All," and while the play was really no plot to the audience, the leading parts were portrayed by Miss Ethel Miller and J. Wesley Lee. Both did very well, and the acting of the rest of the cast was very good for amateurs.

An excellent musical programme was given by the Morgan Family orchestra during the intermissions, and the solos by Miss Doran and Harry Howard both called for encores.

TWO GIRLS DROWNED

MARY SEILER AND JOSEPHINE KASTNER PERISH IN LONG LAKE WHILE BATHING

YOUNGER GIRL JUMPS IN AFTER HER COUSIN

The Seiler Girl Steps Into a Deep Hole and Suddenly Disappears—The Bodies Are Found After the Lake is Grappled—Their Parents Are Grief-Stricken.

Two girls, Mary Seiler, aged thirteen, and Josephine Kastner, aged ten, were drowned in Long Lake, near New Brighton, shortly after noon yesterday. The girls had been bathing, and Mary Seiler was pushing a raft out into the lake, when she stepped into a hole and went down. Josephine Kastner ran to the assistance of her companion, and when she reappeared on the surface, she plunged in after her. The girls struggled for an instant, clasped in each other's arms, and then went down together. The only witness to the accident was little Willie Kastner, seven or eight years old. He had been playing with the girls, when one of them suggested that they build a raft, and give the youngster a ride. The plan was immediately put into execution, and some boards and driftwood were collected. He climbed on the raft and the Seiler girl was pushing him toward the center of the lake, when she went down.

The boy saw the double drowning but was unable to comprehend the situation. He clung tenaciously to the raft, and was soon blown into the middle of the lake by the severe wind. He shouted lustily, and was finally rescued by a boat from the shore.

It was 2 o'clock, however, before it was known that the girls had been drowned. The boy was thoroughly frightened and could not regain sufficient composure to tell what had become of his unfortunate comrades. The girls were missed, and the boy then recollected of the drowning, when questioned.

The news of the catastrophe spread rapidly in the village, and men with hooks were soon grappling the portion of the lake where the girls went down.

The body of Josephine Kastner was found in a short time, but the body of Mary Seiler was not found until nearly 6 o'clock, fifty feet from where she went down, and in twenty-five feet of water.

Knew of the Hole.

The girls had been bathing in the lake frequently, and it is almost certain that Miss Seiler knew of the hole into which she unwittingly stepped. She was busily engaged in pushing the raft, however, and it is thought that she did not notice the distance she was getting from the shore. When her companion saw her struggling frantically in the water, she did not hesitate a moment, but ran to the spot, and when the form came to the surface she plunged forward, and grasped her friend in her arms.

The dead girls were cousins, and had often gone to the lake to spend the day with their grandmother, who lives in a little cottage near the shore. Mary Seiler is the daughter of Joseph Seiler, who conducts a saloon at the corner of Grace and West Seventh streets. Josephine Kastner lived with her parents at 605 Western avenue.

Although the drowning occurred soon after 12, it was some time before news of the accident reached the Seiler home. About 3 o'clock a boy came in from a neighboring telephone with the message that Josephine Kastner had been drowned in Long Lake. Leaving his boy, sixteen or seventeen years of age, in charge of the saloon, Mr. Seiler started with his wife for the scene of the drowning. That even the Kastner girl was drowned seemed incredible, and it was not until an hour and a half later, when the parents arrived at the lake, that they learned that their own daughter was also a victim of the treacherous water.

The boy did not learn of the death of his sister until 6 o'clock. He tended to his father's saloon during the latter's absence, and the bar room was full of loungers. Some one entered and the boy asked concerning the drowning. Like his father, he had supposed that only the Kastner girl had been drowned. He heard the sad news for the first time.

His grief was pitiful to behold. His face paled, and he started to leave the bar. A friend asked him what was the matter.

"My God, it's Mary—Mary is drowned."

Then he broke down and commenced to cry. The men fled out of the saloon, one by one, except a few, who loitered about the place. The boy staggered out of the place, and the saloon was left to take care of itself. Later a friend locked the place up, and a large placard was hung on the door, "Closed temporarily."

Neighbors flocked about the place, the men with sad faces, and the women with tear-stained eyes. Little Mary was known by all in the neighborhood, and the place that she held in their hearts was apparent by the grief that was manifested.

SELL TWINE TOO HIGH

STATE BOARD OF CONTROL IS TO PROSECUTE DEALERS

Contention is Raised That Many Merchants Are Violating Their Agreement With the State by Placing Too Great a Profit on the Prison Article.

The state board of control has inaugurated a vigorous crusade against Minnesota twine dealers who have been violating the state law by selling prison twine at a higher price than they have a right to do under the contract. Six dealers are already in the net and will be vigorously prosecuted.

Several weeks ago Warden Wolf informed the board that he had reason to believe that certain dealers were violating their agreement in this respect. He was instructed to investigate the matter thoroughly and attempt to secure evidence against the men suspected. Warden Wolf has reported to the board that he believes he has evidence sufficient to convict six dealers and the board will prosecute at once. In the meantime, acting on the information of Warden Wolf, the board has sent out its own agents on a quiet inspection, and if other dealers are doing this kind of work they will be brought up short and forced to pay a heavy fine.

The prison twine plant is not run to make profit, but to benefit the farmers of Minnesota, and the law provides that the dealers who contract for prison twine shall not sell their twine at a greater profit than 1 cent a pound. At the beginning of the season the board was known by all in the neighborhood, and the place that she held in their hearts was apparent by the grief that was manifested.

The first bad luck suffered by the commission was the partial destruction of one of the big dams, and now this has been further augmented by additional damage in the washing out of large amounts of sand used for filling purposes.

The dam was for the purpose of providing a number of artificial ponds for breeding purposes. Nothing daunted, however, Chief Pullerton has arranged for its strengthening of the dam with a series of piling, which, with the aid of heavy timbers and much rip-rapping, will enable it to withstand an deluge.

The improvements contemplated for the fish hatcheries are extensive, and while lack of time and money will prevent their completion this year, it is hoped to have the ponds in shape before the close of another.

PARK BOARD WILL TRY TO IMPROVE THE FALLS

Shadow Falls Park Will Receive the Benefit of a Larger Volume of Water.

If the funds of the park board will permit, visitors to Shadow Falls park next year will not have to weary their eyes nor exert their climbing abilities in looking for the falls. For their benefit, the park board has planned and will be duly installed when the proper time comes.

Except during a freshet or following a rain, the water in the falls of late years has been a falls in name only, and it is to correct this deficit that Supt. Nussbaumer would have all the small streams that end in space over the edge of the bluffs near Shadow Falls merged into one and their sparkling waters sent tumbling over the rocky crags from which the resort gets its name. From the government dam at Meeker Island to St. Thomas' seminary a dozen or more small streams, many of them fairly large, and some of them fairly large, and these, if merged into one, it is figured, would furnish a stream of water that would be of no small size.

Shadow Falls park, because of inadequate street car facilities, is not patronized to the extent of some of the smaller parks, but in point of natural beauty it surpasses them all. During the past year extensive improvements have been made to the grounds, including walks and drive-ways, and the water park, however, is not inspiring, and to correct this deficit Supt. Nussbaumer has done some extensive planning. These plans are described above, and if the board's money next year permits, they will be carried out.

The park board is now preparing for the construction of a strip of ground extending from the government dam to Fort Snelling, this to be converted into a driveway, and to be known as the Mississippi and boulevard. Much of the ground has already been secured. It is the desire of the board to ultimately control a driveway along the river from the dam to the Omaha shops, there to connect with a parked street that will have its terminal at Com.

RAIN HAS RETARDED WORK AT HATCHERIES

Recent Heavy Precipitation is Responsible for Breaking in of a Large Dam.

Rain has demoralized the improvements in progress at the fish hatcheries during the past two months to the extent that it is hardly probable that the hopes of the fish and game commission will be realized this year.

The first bad luck suffered by the commission was the partial destruction of one of the big dams, and now this has been further augmented by additional damage in the washing out of large amounts of sand used for filling purposes.

The dam was for the purpose of providing a number of artificial ponds for breeding purposes. Nothing daunted, however, Chief Pullerton has arranged for its strengthening of the dam with a series of piling, which, with the aid of heavy timbers and much rip-rapping, will enable it to withstand an deluge.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY GETS VALUABLE GIFTS

Mrs. Ignatius Donnelly Presents It With Manuscript Letters of Seer of Nininger.

The state historical society has received from Mrs. Ignatius Donnelly a valuable collection of books and manuscripts which were owned by her late distinguished husband. Among the documents are some original letters of rare value. There is one letter of peculiar interest to St. Paul people. It is a letter written to Mr. Donnelly Feb. 25, 1864, by N. P. Langford, afterwards well known and influential citizen of St. Paul, who was then in Washington. It is a lengthy document, discussing the proposed opening of a post route between St. Paul and Montana points, in which he argues the necessity for such a route and the great possibilities of the new West.

There is also a long letter from Hon. James Kergus, who founded the city of Fergus Falls, and who died a few weeks ago in Montana. He writes at some length of Mr. Donnelly regarding the formation of the territory of Montana, and suggesting that Mr. Langford is the proper man to be appointed territorial governor, and adding that the one objection which may be urged against him is his extreme youth. Mr. Langford being at that time but thirty-five years of age.

Among the documents is the original petition of residents of West St. Paul for annexation to St. Paul proper.

SCHMIDT ARRESTED OVER A TICKET FRAUD

He is Charged With Selling Doctored Employee's Pass to S. W. Bleurock.

J. S. Schmidt, a ticket scalper, has been arrested on the charge of tampering with a railway ticket. S. W. Bleurock, who purchased the ticket, preferred the charge. Bleurock purchased the ticket, supposing that it would carry him to Spokane, but when he reached Helena it was taken up, and at the instigation of the railroad company he returned to St. Paul to prosecute Schmidt.

It is alleged that Schmidt secured the ticket, an employee's pass, and issued at Valley City, N. D., to Helena, Mont. He is alleged to have treated it to a chemical bath and otherwise fixed it to suit the purposes. Bleurock. He will lead in municipal court today.

BARBERS LOSE FIGHT

STATE BOARD OF CONTROL DECIDES THAT PRISON BARBER SHOP MAY CONTINUE

UNION SAYS IT WILL CARRY CASE TO COURTS

Board Says if Warden Can Compel Employees to Remain at Prison They Can Certainly Be Shaved There—Think Law Does Not Apply in Prison Case.

The state board of control yesterday rendered its decision in the matter of the protest of the barbers of Stillwater against the state prison barber shop, and, as expected, the decision is against the barbers. The decision, instead of settling the dispute, probably inaugurates a bitter fight, at least it throws the case into the courts, as the barbers declare they will fight the matter through to the supreme court before they will surrender.

Text of Decision.

The board in its decision says: "If the prison authorities may, for the interest of the public service, arrange the prison management as to require the guards and other employees to be present at all times, which may be conceded, we can see no reason why they may not, as an incident to this management, arrange that such officers and employees be shaved as and shaved within the prison walls. To this extent the act of the legislature, requiring barbers to be licensed, and in our judgment the incidental shaving of the guards and officers of the prison by unlicensed convict, acting under the direction of the prison authorities, is not a violation of the laws of the state, assuming, of course, that the prison authorities have required the presence of such guards and other officers in and about the prison during the time it is convenient and possible for them to be shaved. Our conclusion, therefore, is that the prison barber shop may continue to be maintained for the purpose of rendering tonorial service for the inmates of the prison, the warden, deputy warden, assistant warden and such other officials and employees of the institution, as in the opinion of the warden it is necessary to keep about the prison and subject to call for duty, and no others. This would not include the families of such officers, nor other persons not in the foregoing class."

Protest of Barbers.

About six weeks ago the barbers of Stillwater commenced their fight against the conduct of the prison barber shop. They first obtained from the attorney general an opinion to the effect that under the law only a licensed barber could do tonorial work in this state, and that a prison convict could not be licensed. They then applied to the board of control, protesting that they had obtained the privileges had been greatly abused, the families of many of the officers and even outsiders having their work done there, for which they contributed 25 cents a month to support the shop. The barbers were willing, as a concession, rather than precipitate a higher bid to the right of the warden, to allow his deputy to be shaved by the prison barber. They contended, however, that the shop was wrong in principle.

Warden Wolf defended it on the ground that in order to maintain prison discipline he could not allow the employees to continually run down town to be shaved. The board of control, at the time of the hearing, suggested that if it was held that the prison shop was not justifiable, the barbers would expect every state institution in the state to have the same rule, and that this would work heavy financial loss to where the nearest barber shop was several miles away. The barbers held that it would be easy enough to secure a regular barber to visit the institution regularly.

Will Take It to Courts.

At that time Chairman Leavitt declared that if the shop was found to be out of order, the board would certainly stop its operation. The question was then submitted to Attorney General Douglas, and the board's decision is undoubtedly based on an opinion rendered by the attorney general in the matter.

While the decision is what was generally expected, the barbers received it with great surprise and indignation. They declare that they will take the matter into court and there determine whether or not the state law can be violated even in a state institution.

CROWDS AT CODY'S SHOW

WILD WEST EXHIBITION PROVES POPULAR AS EVER

Two Immense Audiences Cheer Buffalo Bill and His Heroes of Many Nations—Show Preserves Spirit of Old West—Stage Coach, San Juan Hill and Many New Features Presented.

Young America feasted its eyes yesterday on everything that young America most admires. It winked those orbs rapidly when grandly painted Indians dashed into the arena. It applauded liberally when reckless cowboys, wild looking Cossacks and fierce Mexicans swarmed after those Indians. But it was when Buffalo Bill himself, preceded by a rider carrying the American flag, rode into the arena and took his place at the head of his rough riders of the world that young America's enthusiasm reached its highest pitch. For Young America's hero is "Buffalo Bill" and yesterday "Buffalo Bill" was in town.

Two big audiences witnessed the afternoon and evening performances of the wild West show, which exhibited at the corner of Dale and University avenues yesterday. Because it is absolutely unique and because, as somebody in the big audience said yesterday, "it all really happened long ago," the wild West show seems never to lose its hold on the interest of the people of America. Col. Cody has caught and imprisoned under his canvas the very spirit of the old west, and the younger generation who know that of West only through books and the older generation who know of it through experience are alike delighted at every fresh glimpse of it. Yesterday's performances differed very little from the last performance given by the show in St. Paul two years ago.

Life Saving Crew.

Perhaps this year there are more people with the show and there is at least one new feature. This is the presence of the United States life saving crew from the Atlantic coast guard. Capt. Grant heads the crew. With the aid of the complete government apparatus they give an illustration of the rescue of shipwrecked people by means of the breeches buoy. The charge up San Juan hill and the taming of the Western bronchos, though two widely different performances, claim, perhaps, the deepest attention of the audience. The shooting by Johnnie Baker, as usual, a clever exhibition of fine marksmanship. A bit of Western realism that was loudly applauded yesterday was the bison hunt, led by Buffalo Bill himself. The old Deadwood stage coach, drawn by six horses and driven by a hoary headed stage driver, made the rounds of the arena twice, was attacked by the Indians and rescued in thrilling fashion by Buffalo Bill, leading a party of Western scouts. The act preceding the charge up San Juan hill—an act showing the bivouacking of the soldiers on the Cuban plains—was a bit of army realism that was thoroughly appreciated and tremendously applauded by the 200 soldiers from Fort Snelling, who were yesterday the guests of Col. Cody at the Wild West show. The lasso throwing of the Mexican riders and the exhibition in fast riding by the cavalrymen of the United States army were both skillful and warmly applauded performances of their kind. The exhibition of the old west, as usual, Col. Cody by the rough riders of the world. An excellent concert followed both afternoon and evening performance.
