

TRAFFIC OFFICIAL LOOKS INTO THE FUTURE AND PREDICTS CHANGES

FREIGHT AND PASSENGER DEPARTMENTS MAY PART

Indications, It is Said, Point to Remarkable Increase in Both Freight and Passenger Departments Which Will Necessitate Separation—Many Benefits Would Result.

"A suggestive remark was made recently," said a prominent railroad official yesterday. "It was the effect that in the future the freight and passenger departments of the railroads would become so entirely separated as to be operated by independent companies, according to this remark, which may be prophetic, the time will come when freight will be handled by freight companies exclusively and passenger companies will devote their entire attention to the passenger business. Now that may seem a little radical at first glance, but if you will look into the proposition it will become apparent that as already the two departments are so intimately interdependent, and so little connection exists between them, the question arises if it would not increase the efficiency of both departments if they were handled by independent companies.

"Of course," he continued, "we have but just entered a new stage in railroad development, and it is to be seen what will be the result of the astonishing increase in railroad traffic. Hitherto the railroads have been exerting their energies in expanding their facilities, but the time has now come when it is the turn of the patrons of the railroads to clamor for service. The fault of the inadequacy of service which has been strikingly apparent recently, when the freight situation was at its worst, is not with the managers of the railroads, but in a combination of conditions over which they had no control. The increase in cars and motive power rendered the position of traffic managers exceedingly embarrassing. The result of their efforts only partially relieved the situation. This suggests that a radical remedy must be devised. The manufacturing plants supplying us with locomotives and cars have now on hand a surplus of cars which they are unable to dispose of. The indications are that in a few years the traffic will be multiplied to such an extent that the vast regions of this country, endowed with fertile soil, propitious climate, and all the natural advantages to render it the most productive in the world, will be unable to handle it as teams of horses are now carrying it.

Locks Into Past. "That is an optimistic view, of course, but if any doubt arises in your mind look to the past. The railroads have then a few small lines of road, and the eminent wagon and stage-coach were still in use. No one would think of the traffic that you might see today that would surprise you. I have spoken of the freight traffic and the passenger traffic, but I have not mentioned the passenger business, but consider the passenger business. The last few years have seen that a rapid and successful. The test of the old coaches was that they were not first-class travelers of today; while the second-class accommodations now offered are better than the first-class of a few months ago. The volume of patronage has kept pace with the improvement in the service. I look for a further increase in travel in the next few years. The tendency of the people is becoming more and more migratory, and the passenger invents a device which will be pressed to accommodate the people.

Declared Unconstitutional. It is the Supreme Court of Ohio That Declines This. COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 2.—The supreme court today handed down a decision in the case of the City of Cleveland vs. Clement Bros. in which it declared the contested eight-hour labor law unconstitutional. The case was carried up to the supreme bench by the city.

Decline in Price of Gold. IS WELCOME IN LONDON. It Indicates Slackening in Demand from Various Quarters of World. LONDON, Dec. 2.—The decline in the price of gold in the last few days has been viewed with considerable satisfaction in financial circles, as it indicates a slackening in the demand from the various quarters of the world, militating against the likelihood of gold exports or a rise in the bank rate.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The decline in the price of gold in the last few days has been viewed with considerable satisfaction in financial circles, as it indicates a slackening in the demand from the various quarters of the world, militating against the likelihood of gold exports or a rise in the bank rate.

The demands for gold for the continent have lessened notably, and the Bank of England is expected to raise the rate of the situation to strengthen its gold reserve, and to meet the increased demand for money generally expected at year-end. Cheaper gold here is also said to lessen the prospect of gold being drawn to London from the United States.
