

FARMERS WILL MEET IN JANUARY

State Agricultural Society Will Hold Its Annual Gathering in St. Paul.

The annual meeting of the State Agricultural society will be held in the Commercial club rooms in St. Paul on Jan. 13 and 14. The programme of the annual meeting will be of an educational nature, and as efforts have been made to secure the attendance of the leading agriculturists of the state, it is expected that the attendance this winter will be larger than ever before. Railroads have announced a rate of a fare and a third for the session.

The programme of the meeting has not yet been completed. There will be the usual annual election of a president, two vice presidents and two managers.

Five acceptances have been received to invitations to deliver addresses. In each case the person who was invited to speak is a recognized authority on the subject he will discuss.

Prof. Robert Shaw, instructor in husbandry in the Michigan School of Agriculture, will discuss the economic production of beef. A. J. Lovejoy, Rose, Ill., will handle the topic of swine breeding, covering the special problems of that work. H. A. Briggs, of Wisconsin, an expert horse breeder, will discuss the ordinary work of breeding farm animals. George McKernon will have a paper on the raising of sheep. Prof. G. G. Greene will explain the difficult points of tree growing, dealing with the creation of orchards and the raising of trees as barriers against prairie winds.

More names will be added to the programme before it is issued. The committee in charge intends to give every important feature of farm work represented in these addresses.

SANTA CLAUS VISITS CHILDREN

He Remembers 200 of Them at the Spiritual Alliance Festival.

Over two hundred children waited with suppressed excitement for the appearance of Santa Claus in Odd Fellows hall yesterday afternoon. The occasion was the annual Christmas festival given by the St. Paul Spiritual alliance, and the children of the lycium, as the Sunday school is called, and 100 poor children who had been invited, enjoyed the affair immensely.

At noon the children sat down to a turkey dinner served by the women of the society, and it was announced at that time that Santa Claus would pay the guests a visit later in the afternoon. This was sufficient to make the eyes of the young guests glisten and their cheeks take on a glow of excitement.

After dinner the children were marshaled into the hall, where a mammoth Christmas tree, handsomely decorated, occupied a conspicuous position.

There were songs, recitations, musical selections, both vocal and instrumental, by members of the lycium and also by the visitors. There were also addresses by adult members of the alliance. Even though the speakers talked over the heads of the audience, the applause was hearty for the close of each number on the programme brought the visit of Santa Claus nearer and that was after all what the audience wanted.

At 4 o'clock the distinguished visitor arrived for half an hour. He was busy handing out gifts to the children. Each girl received a doll and a big bag of candy and each boy a box containing a game and a bag of candy.

The members of the alliance in charge of the arrangements were Joseph P. Whitwell, Mrs. William McKay, Mrs. C. P. Follett and Mrs. John Sauer. The 100 children who were the guests of the alliance, outside of the regular attendees at the lycium, were selected by Relief Agent Hutchins from among the needy families of the city.

GIVES ADVICE TO YOUNG WOMEN

REV. J. M. FULTON SAYS THERE ARE THREE SPHERES ALWAYS OPEN TO THEM

SHOULDN'T COMPETE WITH MEN AS WAGE EARNERS

Neither is it first and everlasting duty of women to get married, in opinion of preacher—Should Learn to Run Kitchen, Dining Room and Wash Tub.

"I believe the 4,000,000 wage-working women in this country are doing themselves an injustice by taking their places as wage earners. There are three lines for women, the domestic sphere, the sphere of teachers and religious work in the kingdom of God."

Rev. John M. Fulton, in an address to "young women at the Central Presbyterian church last evening, took this view of the problem which has been recently so much discussed. The speaker said there had been scores of sermons preached to young men, but somehow the young women had been neglected, and seldom singled out for an address. He approached the subject of an address to young women with fear and trepidation because of the tendency to compliment and flatter them. A passage in the Scripture was: "He who flattereth his neighbor spreadeth a net," and for that reason he should avoid this. He said in part:

Woman's Two-Fold Mission.

"The ideal woman has a two-fold mission in the world, companionship and a helpmeet. The sixth day of the creation was drawing to a close. Adam was alone in the garden, lonely and without a companion. The Lord said, 'It is not good for man to be alone' and he made him a companion. He didn't make another man but something very distinct, a woman.

"Ten men or a thousand do not make society; they make clubs. Robinson Crusoe was lonely on the island where he was marooned, but if another man employed in the fish catching. Do they make good money? Well, I guess they do! It is nothing for a man, during the herring catch to make $80 per week. I know a man who has made $90 between them in six days. Do they have to work hard? Well, I can give you a pretty good idea of the great herring catch. It is one of the greatest in the world. For the particular herring that is indigenous to Lake Superior especially, is found nowhere else than in the American great lakes.

"Yes, the season's over for another year," said Mr. Hale. "It doesn't last long, four weeks are all that is looked for. This year it ran from Nov. 12 to Dec. 15. As with no other fish, the herring season is clearly and distinctly defined. They come in schools without a moment's warning from no one knows where. They stay for, as I said, just about four weeks and then they are gone just as suddenly.

"The catch is something marvelous—the haul, as it is sometimes called, this year in Bayfield alone 1,800 tons. You know Bayfield is the main fishing port on the great lakes for a well known fishing concern and their catch, by itself, was 700 tons.

"I was just going to place the season's catch at 2,000 tons—that's easy. I've been doing some funny figuring—there were 1,800 tons of fish, so that would mean 2,000,000 feet of fish. That also means that there would be just about 1,500 miles of herring; or in other words they would reach from St. Paul to Seattle if placed head to tail for that distance. That catch will easily be worth $100,000 and will make 1,800 packages, as the small barrels they are packed in are known.

Atkinson, of Litchfield; Charles H. Clark, of Worthington; Charles H. Clark, of St. Peter; B. H. Carter, of St. Cloud; Charles Weslake, of Springfield; and George S. Spaulding, of Alexandria.

CLUB FINALLY CENSURES PAYNE

RESOLUTIONS CONDEMNING HIM FOR BREACH OF PROMISE OF MARRIAGE ARE ADOPTED

NOT A DISSENTING VOICE IS RAISED IN HIS BEHALF

United States Senator Moses E. Clapp is commended for his action in objecting to the use of the word "nigger" in hearings before Senate committees.

Prevented on a previous Sunday by Rev. George Gaines, pastor of St. James' A. M. E. church, from listening to resolutions condemning William Montgomery Payne, the young colored man who engaged himself to a young woman in St. Paul and then abruptly married another in Milwaukee, the Men's Sunday club yesterday, at a meeting in the Peoples hall, Rice and University avenue, heard and adopted the resolutions of censure.

In comparison with the previous meeting, at which the subject was aired, the gathering yesterday was a success. The adoption of the report of the committee there was not a dissenting voice raised in his behalf. The subject showed that a week's time had not cooled the indignation with which the members of the club regarded the breach of promise.

Rev. Mr. Gaines, whose prohibition of the reading of the resolutions in his church on the ground that the church was not organized for the purpose of punishing the curative work in the field of morals.

Case of Mr. Robinson.

About 200 persons gathered in the hall yesterday in anticipation of lively skirmishing. The skirmishing, however, was not prominent in the resolutions. The effort of Harry Robinson to persuade the officers of the club that a member in good standing produced that only excitement. He said he had been "incorporated in the minutes of the meeting for four months" and was a member. The secretary announced that he was not on the roll, and the president prevented him from speaking or introducing his resolution. He still insisted that he was a member in good standing, and even when a favorable vote, on the motion of F. L. McGhee, made him a member, he was refused a vote, stating that it wasn't any use to make him a member twice over. He had desired to speak on the Payne resolutions, but was not to be allowed to do so.

A technical tangle arose over a motion introduced at the first meeting, at which the Payne matter came up, asking for the resignation of F. B. Parker, who befriended Payne, as a member. I know a man who has made $90 between them in six days. Do they have to work hard? Well, I can give you a pretty good idea of the great herring catch. It is one of the greatest in the world. IS CHARGED WITH ROBBING DRUNKEN MAN

Joseph McGregor, Accused of Robbing the Pockets of P. J. O'Brien.

Joseph McGregor, a boy nineteen years of age, was yesterday morning charged with robbing P. J. O'Brien.

Joseph McGregor, a boy nineteen years of age, was yesterday morning charged with robbing P. J. O'Brien. O'Brien claims that McGregor rifled his pockets while he was under the influence of liquor.

According to Patrolman Fitzgerald, O'Brien was lying on the sidewalk near the State theater. McGregor searched the drunken man's pockets in full view of the policeman. When Fitzgerald was within a few yards of McGregor and his alleged victim, the accused man took to his heels.

McGregor fled down Seventh street and then south on Robert. On Fourth street he was apprehended by Patrolman Carroll. When the patrol wagon arrived at the Windsor, where he was taken, he was found with $12 clamped in his hand. O'Brien declares he was robbed of $12.

McGregor, who says that he is the son of a Minneapolis saloonkeeper, was first charged with highway robbery, but later a charge of larceny from the person was lodged against him.

HOW THE PRACTICE OF FLIRTING IS SIMPLIFIED IN A MEXICAN TOWN

"A remarkably simple custom, fascinating to the general intercourse between the sexes known as 'flirting,' exists among the Mexican people which might with propriety and not a little satisfaction be introduced into the United States.

The speaker was a small, wiry man, whose years would never again measure forty with the dress of a churchman, the head of a philosopher, a face keen and clean-shaven and a pair of eyes that one would venture to say never threw an over-shoulder glance at a sprightly tripping damsel. The clerical aspect of the man and the gravely announced but frivolous suggestion clashed as would a bar of ragtime music interjected into something infinitely better.

But Angus McLeod, professor of political science in a small Canadian university, and as he put it, "a professor in the wider and more fertile field of rambling," only smiled at the surprise of a newly-introduced acquaintance, who broke into the conversation. Toasting his back before a grate fire at the Windsor, where he stopped for dinner with a friend in St. Paul, the professor continued his remarks.

"When I stopped in El Paso last summer for a day and a night I was asked by the proprietress of a hotel as hot as the mouth of—well, say Mont Pelée. Towards evening I asked the hotel clerk if there wasn't something to do in the town. He asked why I did not go over the river to Juarez. So I went to Juarez.

"The International Mule Line," carrying the mules, passed the place. Juarez is the easiest route. A car full of pleasure seekers I found going over giggled audibly at the basting of blows accompanied by muttered English curses with which the car driver belabored the single mule drawing the dumpy car. Mexican swear words being untranslatable, a whole volley has no appreciable effect upon a mule, but the four distinguished gentlemen who possessed the mule driver, bearing a distinctive American brand, had a moving effect upon our animal. We rattled over the Rio Grande, passed the Mexican toll guard—we had paid our toll with the fare, duos centavos—and wound up at the plaza. The plaza is the great public square of the town, generally a rendezvous on summer evenings, for the young people.

"It was dark when we reached the plaza. The old mission church at one end loomed up misty white against the sky. The conventional park, filled with the flowers of the town, was an iron fence lined with benches, gave out a moist odor of heavy foliage. Near the fountain, under the glare of torches, the city band was playing. Upon the flagging outside two circles of people moving in opposite directions rotated continuously. The gallants of the town were in the inner circle, and sometimes the father and the young girls, coy and languishing in the sight of their parents.

"I wandered around with the inner circle, breathing in the cool night air and the fragrance of growing things. The outer circle passed me face to face, contained only men. I remember wondering where all the men came from. After making three or four rounds I found myself in the inner circle, a quarter of eight. The girls in the rear were giggling, the men looking at me oddly. Suddenly I became aware that I was out of my class. I was among the women. I had usurped the privilege of the inner circle.

"I immediately got into the outer circle and watched. As the night progressed the outer circle waned, the inner circle fattened. The gallants and the girls were pairing off, and when the band ceased a few hopeless ones, myself among them, were in the outer ring. The rest in pairs were sauntering homeward. That is what I call a great institution. See how it simplified the work matter."

LOUIS LEGACE WANTS TO KNOW THE WHEREABOUTS OF HIS LITTLE GIRL

"Nobody knows how badly I want to see my little girl, and the authorities won't let me know where she is," said Louis Legace, a wood finisher at the Great Northern shops, living at 66 Winnipeg avenue, in conversation with The Globe last night.

According to his story it appears that in the year 1894 he and his wife, Adelaide, came to the conclusion that it would be better for both to separate. They did so. Louis kept the child, a little girl, for about three years and then finding her too much care, he placed her in the state school at Owatonna. He says that at that time he was promised by Probate Judge Bazille that his daughter would be allowed to write to him once a month, and that he could see her twice a year. She was taken away, and from that time he has never heard a word from her. He says he has interviewed the governor, who turned him over to the board of control. There he has obtained no satisfaction up to date.

When asked why he did not go down to the school and see her personally he stated that he had never had the means. He was then asked if he had written the superintendent of the institution and he said he had, and had learned that she had been adopted by some one shortly after her installation in the school, but that the authorities would not tell him where she was.

One of the chief causes of his grief seemed to be the fact that he had had her life insured for $500, and he would like to know whether or not she is alive.

MAN'S LIFE MAY SEEM GOOD AND BE ROTTEN

State Secretary E. W. Peck, of the Y. M. C. A., Urges the Value of an Unselfish Life.

"No man liveth unto himself, and no man dieth unto himself." Thus a man's life may be deemed good and pure outwardly, and within all may be rotteness. Each life may be, though apparently a failure, the greatest within the realm of the possibilities of the liver. It, too, though apparently a brilliant success, may be a dismal failure. We were the words of E. W. Peck, state secretary of the Y. M. C. A., yesterday afternoon in Odeon Bank.
