

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS

There is a so-called Malt Whiskey offered for sale by certain dealers in bottles which are similar to the Duffy Malt Whiskey Bottle, and there is no doubt that it is bogus whiskey put up in a bottle in imitation of the Duffy Malt Whiskey bottle with intent to deceive the people, and anything that is meant to deceive is a fraud.

$500 REWARD

The Duffy Malt Whiskey Company will pay $500 for the detection and conviction of any person or persons offering for sale Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey which is not the genuine, Malt Whiskey bottle, with a label on it similar in style and appearance to the Duffy Malt Whiskey label, and a strap over the cork similar to that on the Duffy Malt Whiskey bottle, representing it to be Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

Of course, when a remedy has been before the public so long, has been prescribed, used and recommended by the best doctors, and in all the prominent hospitals throughout the world, and has carried the blessing of health to so many thousands of homes, as Duffy's pure Malt Whiskey has, imitations are bound to arise. But they can imitate the bottle and label only; no one can imitate the goods.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

formula was discovered fifty years ago by one of the greatest chemists the world has ever known. It is a secret formula, and while it has cured millions of people during the last half century, the secret has never been discovered.

Dr. William Hooker Vail, one of the leading physicians and surgeons of St. Louis, Mo., writes enthusiastically about what Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has done for himself personally and his patients:

Gentlemen:—Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey was introduced to me through a consumptive patient whom I was treating. I called on her one afternoon after an absence of about two months and remarked that she was so much improved.

I inquired after medicaments, etc., and she stated that she had been using nothing but good food and plenty of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. Her improvement was so marked that I went directly and purchased it for several other patients suffering with similar ailments, and in a short time they all expressed decided improvement, and from personal observation and physical examination there was great improvement in the lung tissue.

Two who had Laryngeal Consumption (consumption of the throat) are now entirely well. I am employing it extensively now in my practice, in La Grippe, Pneumonia, Bronchitis, Anæmia (Anæmia or Marasmus), starvation from lack of assimilation of food, etc.; always in convalescence.

Its agreeableness to the taste and stomach of all people and condition makes it almost a panacea for all diseases. Yours very respectfully,

WILLIAM HOOKER, VAIL, M. D.

Thousands of letters are received daily from grateful men and women in all walks of life, who have been cured of consumption, grip, coughs, colds, dyspepsia and general debility, and from old people who say their lives have been prolonged many years beyond the three-score-and-ten, by the use of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey as their only medicine.

Caution—When you ask for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey be sure you get the genuine. Unscrupulous dealers, mindful of the excellence of this preparation, will try to sell you cheap imitations, and so-called Malt Whiskey substitutes, which are marketed for profit only, and which, from relieving the sick, are positively harmful. Demand "Duffy's" and be sure you get it. It is the only absolutely pure malt whiskey which contains medicinal, health giving qualities. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is sold only in bottles—our own special-shaped bottle, like the picture. Never in flasks or in bulk. Look for the trade-mark, "The Old Chemist," on the label.

The genuine is sold by druggists and grocers, or direct, $1.00 a bottle. It is the only whiskey recognized by the government as a medicinal preparation. This is a guarantee of its value, and convincing testimonials sent free to any reader of this paper who will write, Duffy Malt Whiskey Company, Rochester, N. Y.

ARMY NEWS.

Several important changes in the army occurred yesterday. Maj. Gen. Robert P. Hughes, having reached the age of sixty-four years, which marks the limit of service on the active list, was placed on the retired list. He was recently relieved from duty in command of the department of California.

Gen. Hughes began his military career as a private in the "twelfth Pennsylvania infantry in April 1861. During the Spanish war he served as brigadier general of volunteers and because of his meritorious services during that brief war and subsequently in the Philippines he was appointed brigadier general of regulars in February, 1901, and major general in April, 1902.

The vacancy in the grade of major general caused by Gen. Hughes' retirement was yesterday filled by the promotion of Brig. Gen. Joseph C. Brockbridge, inspector general of the army. That officer will be immediately retired, and Brig. Gen. Marshall L. Lindington, quartermaster general of the army, will be promoted to the rank of general.

Gen. Lindington will in turn be retired and the vacancy thus created will be filled by the appointment of Brig. Gen. James F. Wade to the grade of major general. The appointment of Gen. Wade will be permanent until his statutory retirement in April, 1907. Gen. Wade is now in command of the department of Arizona.

On the retirement of Gen. Lindington, Col. Charles F. Humphrey was appointed quartermaster general of the army with the rank of brigadier general. Gen. Humphrey is on his way home from the Philippines, but is not expected to assume active charge of his department before the middle of next month. In the meantime Col. William S. Foster will act as quartermaster general.

The promotion of Gen. Wade to the rank of major general will result in the successive promotions to the rank of brigadier general of the following named officers: Col. S. W. Grossbeck, judge advocate; Col. J. Smith, corps of engineers; Col. Albert F. Woodson, third cavalry; Col. L. H. Tucker, eighth cavalry; Col. Theodore A. Baldwin, seventh cavalry; Col. J. B. Rawles, artillery corps; Col. John A. Myrick, artillery corps; Col. W. P. Rogers, third infantry. All of the named officers will be successively relieved and the permanent appointments given to Gen. Peter C. Haines and other engineers, who has gone to Panama with other members of the expedition.

The changes already indicated will be followed by a large number of promotions to the rank of colonel and in all the subordinate grades of the army. The secretary of war has approved a scheme proposed by Gen. Randolph, chief of artillery, the purpose of which is to give artillery men, stationed at coast fortifications a better knowledge of the characteristics of warships as well as to acquaint them more generally with matters nautical. It is proposed, among other things, to provide the coast posts with a set of international flags and a set of international signals, from which they may be displayed and signals exchanged with passing naval and revenue vessels.

"If the peculiarities of our fleet are not well known to the coast artillery," said Gen. Randolph in forwarding of his recommendations, "it is not improbable that a friendly vessel approaching a fort in thick weather or after dark might be taken for a possible enemy, which might lead to disastrous results."

Judgment for Real Estate Taxes.

The supreme court has decided that a judgment for real estate taxes may now be reviewed in that court only by appeal. The cause of this decision was the filing of a per curiam decision in the supreme court yesterday morning in the matter of the payment of taxes delinquent Jan. 1, 1902, in Ramsey county. The court granted a motion remanding the case back to the lower court on the ground that in 1894 the legislature repealed the law providing for the certifying of a tax case in the supreme court for review.

DISGRACIOUS MEN WHO HAVE SITTEN AT ST. PAUL

First Begins With Father Champlain Who Came Up the Mississippi in a Canoe 233 Years Ago, and Includes Many Illustrious Statesmen and Presidents.

The past ten days have been busy ones for St. Paul. Not only the oldest inhabitant who could afford to pause for reflection. A few days ago, for instance, when every man, woman and child was kept busy contributing to the entertainment of the two distinguished visitors within the gates of the Saulty City, the oldest inhabitant alone was able to withdraw a moment's time to the quietude of his own home.

Old times are always the best for the oldest inhabitant, and that is no surprising fact, in recalling the visits paid to St. Paul by other great men and on the entertainment prepared for them, he should be only surprised that these far surpassed in splendor the demonstrations held in honor of President Roosevelt and Admiral Schley. Even if the oldest inhabitant's recollection is not just, his reminiscences are interesting, for many noted men have from time to time honored the city with their presence.

Of course, even the very oldest inhabitant cannot remember the visit of the first French explorer, Jacques Cartier, who came up the river in a canoe rowed by painted and blanketed savages, and there was no committee of ladies to greet him, and no waving bunting to welcome him.

Father Champlain the First. His name was Father Champlain, and his memorable visit was paid just 233 years ago, the last day of this month. He came up the river in a canoe, and he was the first white man to see the city of St. Paul. He remained here, if not permanently, at least for a long time, so that it is not until over a century later that the name of Champlain is again mentioned in connection with the city.

But in the next century, in the latter part of the forties, Millard Fillmore came up the river from Rock Island and the little village put on gala attire to receive him. He was the first president then, but he was a power in national politics. Shortly after his visit, Minnesota was made a territory, and Alexander Ramsey, then governor, appointed his governor by President Zachary Taylor, whom Fillmore succeeded.

It is believed that Fillmore's representations to the president had much to do with the conferring of territorial honors on Minnesota. In 1850, Taylor William H. Seward, one of the presidential possibilities in the contest for the national office that fall, and later appointed by Abraham Lincoln, the successful contestant, secretary of state, paid St. Paul a visit.

He delivered an address at the state capitol, and in the course of it he spoke of the future of the Northwest, and in it painted a rosy picture of the future greatness of St. Paul. There is a pretty good record in connection with Mr. Seward's visit.

On the day of his arrival he was given a drive about the city. When the party reached the big dam, which is now the river in the vicinity of Dayton's bluff, the members alighted, and Mr. Seward gazed thoughtfully for a time up the river. He then turned to the men who were entertaining him and remarked: "I predict that within the next half a century this city will be built up here. Railroads will connect you with every part of the continent, and together with your river traffic, will make you a great commercial center."

Since it has proven true, "Seward's prediction" is entitled, has been frequently quoted, although it was, at first, somewhat exaggerated. Then as did later, Proctor Knott's famous speech concerning the future of the city of Duluth. Horace Greeley the Next.

Horace Greeley came to St. Paul Sept. 15, 1871. At that time the railway which has always existed between St. Paul and Minneapolis was particularly good. Mr. Greeley had been engaged to deliver a lecture in Minneapolis, and he found that there was a fair that was held there in opposition to the state fair held yearly at Kittson, Minn. He decided to deliver his lecture in St. Paul, and the address in Minneapolis was to be delivered out of doors, and St. Paulites concluded that it would be a breach of etiquette to engage the famous editor for a lecture to be delivered the night before in this city. Mr. Greeley made no objections, and the lecture was delivered in the old Grand opera house on Bridge square.

The next afternoon H. P. Hall, who was then reporting for St. Paul paper, escorted Mr. Greeley to the town up the river. The lecturer went to the Nicollet hotel, where it had previously been arranged that Mr. Greeley should stop, but there was no Minneapolis man there to meet him. The city was strange to him, but the lecturer managed to find his way to the exposition building, in the heart of which he was to make his address. He was greeted coldly and his address was received with indifference.

At its conclusion, the chairman of the committee thrust into the lecturer's hands a roll of bills and turned away. He had secured a carriage and took Mr. Greeley back to the hotel. The latter was naturally bewildered by his rigid reception, but when he heard the man who had just been introduced to him, he remembered the man who had been introduced to him.

President Hayes' Visit. The next distinguished visitor was not a presidential possibility, but a real president, Rutherford B. Hayes. His visit again aroused the same burning flames of jealousy, but this time it was St. Paul who suffered.

The president came for the purpose of formally opening the state fair, and the city was put to great expense providing for his suitable reception and entertainment. Naturally, those who had worked so hard to bring him had made up their minds that he was to be St. Paul's guest and not Minneapolis'. But they were disappointed.

He is the president of the United States and therefore we have as much right to him as has St. Paul," said Theodore Vanderbilt. He was a warm, personal friend of Mr. Greeley, and the two stayed at what is now known as the Metropolitan hotel during their brief visit to St. Paul.

Robert T. Lincoln, secretary of war; plenipotentiary of Bavaria at the court of Berlin, and Carl Schurz, ex-secretary of the interior. C. D. O'Brien was then mayor of St. Paul. Monday evening, there was a notable parade, the streets were thronged with people and every building was gaily decorated. Most of the social functions took place at Hotel Lafayette, at Lake Minnesota, and they were attended by a number of St. Paul people.

Three More Presidents. Grover Cleveland visited St. Paul during his first term of office and he was welcomed richly royally. The next president following him was the late President McKinley, who came to St. Paul in the fall of 1899. He addressed a big mass meeting and the city was in gala attire during his visit. President Roosevelt was the last presidential visitor entertained in St. Paul, and his visit is too fresh in the minds of both old and young inhabitants to need a description. Admiral Schley's visit during the early part of last week completes the notable list of distinguished men who have honored St. Paul with their presence.

Consider Bid Too High. If the bid of W. J. Preston is accepted by the council it will cost the city just $2,000 for the year to collect all its dead animals. The assembly committee on streets will consider the proposition at its meeting Monday and a protest is likely to be offered. Preston was the only bidder.
