Chicago Club Woman Discovers, to Her Own Satisfaction, a Reason for the General Unsatisfactory Appearance of American Residences—No Uplifting Inspirations.

A Chicago woman has discovered the reason for the general unsatisfactory appearance of most American homes. The furniture, she insists, lacks purpose. Too many people are in the habit of buying tables and chairs as furniture merely and of regarding them ever afterwards in that light. "How," she asks pertinently, "can one be uplifted by a chair that has a utilitarian value only, by a lamp shade that is merely a lamp shade, nothing more?" The club woman—she happens to be a club woman—is right of course. A purposeless chair or a purposeless lamp shade could not by any possible chance have an uplifting effect. The difficulty seems to lie in the fact that American people have not been in the habit of depending on their furniture for inspiration toward the higher life. But the subject opens infinite possibilities. Take the matter of sofa cushions, for instance. There was a time, when these first aids to comfort were looked upon as ornaments merely. Recently, however, they have assumed their proper position in the home and are now classed as furniture. With a nice, fat cushion behind his back one is willing to confess with Thoreau that he loves a wide margin to his life; that the smaller the margin of toil that mediates down his meadow of idleness, the more pleased he will be. But a sofa cushion with a purpose must of necessity alter this point of view. Fancy lounging among a pile of sofa cushions, each one of which represented a lofty and distinct purpose! A bed of crumpled rose leaves would be downy in comparison. However, the Chicago club woman's mission—she confesses she has a mission—will not be accomplished immediately. Life fortunately cannot be revolutionized in a decade. And in the meantime one cannot forget purposes and enjoy one's cushions.

Mysterious Woman Identified. MADISONVILLE, Ky., April 23.—Aaron Bark, a farmer, who died suddenly at his home in Muhlenberg county yesterday, was discovered to be a woman, whose name was Mrs. Fred Green. She came to Muhlenberg county about thirteen years ago, with a small child. She was dressed in men's clothes. She lived in one small house on a small farm for the entire time, and her disguise was never suspected. Mrs. Green told a neighbor who was with her before she died that her home was in Massachusetts and that she had assumed a man's garb because she could make a better living than she could otherwise. The only known living relative of the deceased is her little daughter Carroll.

Dyspepsia and Divorce. Bad cookery and slovenly housekeeping were the direct cause of 400 divorces in the city of Chicago last year. This statement by the head of the Chicago bureau of charities furnishes every housewife in the land with a subject for serious reflection. During 1902 it appears 409 deserted Rich Woman Landowner. Mrs. King, of Corpus Christi, Tex., owns more land than any other woman in this country, and perhaps in the world. Her holdings are not less than 1,500,000 acres, located in the counties of Neches, Hidalgo, Starr and Cameron. Her late husband, Capt. King, was one of the old-time cattle barons. Mrs. King has about 65,000 cattle grazing on her broad acres. Under the terms of her husband's will, the estate must not be divided until her death. Mrs. King has one son and three married daughters.

Ojibway Indians Visit Miss Longfellow. A delegation of Ojibway Indians paid a visit to Miss Alice Longfellow, daughter of the poet, at the Longfellow home in Cambridge, Mass., last week and left as a remembrance a belt of wampum. The delegation was headed by the chief, Miss Longfellow was invited to visit the tribe at Garden River reservation, Ontario, next summer.

Milk Cure for Consumption. One of the most interesting suggestions made for the home treatment and cure of consumption is that of Dr. Robert Taylor, of New York, recommending a diet almost exclusively of milk. Dr. Taylor writes:

"From the leaves of a book of records, extending over a long experience, I have selected—because of its facile application by the people—and its simplicity of means. It involves no expense beyond the reach of very limited means, and requires resorting to summary by therapeutic agents remains to be found. In the light of the present day medical science it seems that we must rely on perfect alienation to combat the scourge.

"The rational treatment of pulmonary tuberculosis is today a question of nutrition and reconstruction, and the one great question before the medical profession is how to keep up assimilation of food, and lots of it.

"That question is now answered by milk. Milk, and more milk, and a little olive oil. Milk is the ideal food, containing the correct proportions of carbohydrates, fats and albumenoids for perfect nutrition of the human system. Olive oil is a perfect nerve feeder for the millions of nerve follicles of the stomach and intestines, which in this disease seem to be irritated and starving for lack of proper nourishment.

"In this treatment the patient should take not less than a gallon of milk every day, gradually increasing to about two gallons a day, taken fairly hot, or at least lukewarm, and divided into six feedings. The most practical plan is to take a pint and a half of milk at about 7, 10, 1, 3, 6 and 9 o'clock; digest it and prevent it lying heavily on the stomach.

"Disease is simply the official preparation of the digestive principle of milk, and a standard formula such as the Forbes is perhaps the best, as being free from admixture. A strong stomach should digest the milk in this large volume without distaste, after becoming accustomed to it. The olive oil should be taken in two-ounce doses morning and evening. This should be pure, sweet and of a greenish hue.

"The patient need not fast at the suggestion of a gallon or two of milk a day; if given under the conditions above suggested. The idea that 'milk does not agree with one' must be abandoned, for it should, and will, if taken properly. Best results are had by drinking slowly, with clothing loosened, nibbling a cracker or other light food.

"One will generally find that little other food is desired or required, as this is a complete food in itself. The patient will soon find that if a gallon of milk with distaste and olive oil, is taken every day, perfect assimilation will be established, flesh will be added and strength gained to build up the system faster than the ravages of the

Willie K's Matrimonial Plans.

LONDON, April 23.—William K. Vanderbilt has returned to Paris. His friend, Mr. Lottendin, connected with procuring a special marriage license. There is much discussion as to whether a license could be issued under the circumstances. It was said that the ecclesiastical court could not refuse, whatever its feelings in regard to divorced persons, but it was added that it could delay matters probably for a fortnight, by requiring the production of documents which would have to be obtained from America. At the Archbishop of Canterbury's office it was said that the archbishop has the undoubted right to refuse to issue a license. No application, however, has yet been received from Mr. Vanderbilt. For an ordinary license one of the parties must live in any parish here for three weeks and have the banns read out in church on three successive Sundays. The French formalities require a residence of six months.

PARIS, April 23.—There continues to be much mystery concerning the plans for the Vanderbilt-Rutherford wedding. One of the intimate friends of Mr. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Rutherford said it was generally believed that the ceremony intended to make the ceremony as private and quiet as possible. It is said the report that the marriage would be solemnized Saturday next in London did not come from an authorized source. Word reached here today that Mr. Vanderbilt was returning to Paris from London, but at his residence later in the day it was said positively that he was not expected to return for several days.

The Duchess of Marlborough has been here for several days, coming from Vienna, presumably to attend the wedding of Mr. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Rutherford. She is indignant at the persistent inquiries made regarding their engagement. A photographer stood outside Mrs. Vanderbilt's residence most of the day, trying to get a snapshot of her for American papers.

press physical vigor and lead to disease as their light and slender as can be made, being in the form either of a flat, thin ring, or else of a flat plate, twelve or fifteen inches in diameter. Of the many styles and weights the lightest is usually supposed to do for the most considered preferable from a hygienic point of view for women's use. An enthusiast upon the throwing of the discus says that half an hour a day for a month increased the strength of her arms 50 per cent, and that from the first she felt the strengthening effects of it about the lungs and waist and in the intercostal muscles, which are almost always neglected in physical training for women.

Fashion in the French capital is always extremely progressive. It does not take long for the clever Parisienne to find out a style suits her, or not, and having decided that it does, she adopts it once. Thus the short walking skirt has become the one thing to wear on the streets in the latest fashion. There are various kinds and cuts of this short walking skirt. Some have one jaunty and much gored flounce, which clears the ground fully an inch and a half all around, and others are composed of three pieces shaped in flounce fashion—the smallest beginning at the waist, the next reaching to the knees, and the last, which flares widely, reaching to the ankles. But the prettiest of all are the short skirts, with box plaits. These are evenly arranged all round, and start from the waist. The plaits are stitched to the knees, the latest and are allowed to flare. The lines thus formed give height to the figure and obviate the short cut-off effect so often seen in the short skirt.

Berlin, always an agreeable place of sojourn for those who like the glitter of a military atmosphere, is to be even more brilliant in the future than the past. A royal decree has gone forth that hereafter evening dress for women be of a more brilliant character than a good deal smarter than the usual Entertainments, too, are to be held on a larger scale, and the social life of the Prussian capital to be quickened generally.

The Parisienne is not credited by Americans and English women with being particularly strong in athletics, but in one respect she has advanced a step or two beyond them. Among the sports which the French woman of fashion has taken to the latest and most notable, is discus throwing. It is the true, classic game of antiquity, not the modern and comparatively prosaic game of quoits, which the French and enthusiasts declare that its advantages include a wonderful improvement in the figure, and particularly a development from twenty minutes to half an hour is good work unless the fire happens to be near an engine house.

Russian Fire Alarms Are Curious. In St. Petersburg the arrangement of fire alarms is rather peculiar and decidedly unique, and the fire alarm telegraph is an unknown thing. Instead a fireman is at all times in the tower of the city hall, and he watches the surrounding city to catch the first glimpse of a fire. When a fire is discovered during the day, he runs up black balls on the top of the tower as signals; at night red lanterns are used. The number of the balls or lanterns shows the district or ward in which the fire is located, says a writer on "Foreign Fire Fighters" in Cosmopolitan. As soon as the signal is seen by the man on duty at the engine house he rings a bell outside, which calls together the members of the company, who may be scattered over a couple of blocks. This method is not conducive to quick time in reaching the scene, and from twenty minutes to half an hour is good work unless the fire happens to be near an engine house.
