Characteristic Habitués of the Parks of St. Paul

It is commonly understood here in St. Paul that as soon as a man and girl become engaged they go and sit in Rice park. Just why Rice park is selected in preference to any other park, no one seems to know. Como is more secluded. Merriam park, being a suburban park, would seem to possess more attractions to the newly engaged whose thoughts are prone to turn to housekeeping. Central park is far more peaceful, for does it not afford a view of a score of churches? Lower Town has this to recommend it that it is very near to the shopping center, and the girl who contemplates matrimony must also contemplate purchasing. None of those special attractions does Rice park possess, yet it is the rendezvous of the engaged. Nay, it is more than this. For a girl to sit on one of its benches in company with a young man is as effective a way of announcing her engagement as if she published it in the daily papers or told it as a profound secret to her dearest girl friend. The first harbinger of spring in this park this year was not a robin. It was an engaged couple. They made the visit on a pleasant day in March, when the roots of the trees must still have felt the frostiness in the earth; when not a blade of grass was to be seen; and when a bleak wind swept the walks. But apparently they carried the spring in their hearts. At any rate, it glowed in their faces and doubtless it was these two happy young people who made old Winter's fancy turn to thoughts of retirement. always carries a paper backed novel with him. A frequent visitor to this park who goes there because he has an overweening interest in humanity, and knows that this is the very best place in the city to study it, acknowledges that very often he has leaned over the old man's shoulders to see what he has been reading, and always it has been a detective story. The man reads with absorbed attention. From the moment he hits down on the bench near the fountain until at noon he lifts his eyes in an absent minded way to observe the position of the sun, he takes no notice of the life that goes on about him in the park. Another constant visitor to Rice park has puzzled the student mightily. He is a man of about forty-five, perhaps, who spends all of his afternoons there and sometimes the greater part of his evenings. Unlike the reader of detective stories, this man is unkempt. His linen is frayed, he is often in need of a shave, and there is a general suggestion of hard times about him. "For a long time I took him for a poet," said the student the other day. "For though for the most part he spends his time lounging idly on one of the benches or gazing dreamily into the fountain, frequently I have seen him take out a piece of paper and scribble on it for awhile. But one day, he dropped one of these pieces of paper, and I picked it up. I found that it was covered, not with couplets, but with figures. These were written in small, neat style, and before each group was a dollar sign as clear cut almost as a copper plate. Not one of the sums was a small one. On the contrary, the figures frequently ran up to millions. I confess I was disappointed to find he

THE NATIONAL GUARD.

The Inspectors in Minneapolis during the past week have been watched with interest, and Capt. Dwyer, the inspecting officer, is well pleased with the showing made. On Monday evening Company A, First regiment, passed under the searching eye and received applause from the large gathering present. Every company of the First regiment was present—they having assembled for the purpose of electing a colonel. There was some surprise evinced when the inspecting officer requested the captain to put the men through a company drill. It was stated that no drill would be expected—just an inspection of state and government property and a muster. Capt. Dwyer explained that in order to make his report complete it was necessary to observe the drill of the company for a short time. On Tuesday night Company B lined up seventy-six men for muster, but this company always has a full roster and men on the waiting list. On Wednesday night Company I also seventy-six strong, put up a fine front. This company has recently been making great strides and now has about a dozen men on the waiting list. On the same evening the field, staff and band of the First regiment was also present for muster. On Friday night Company F, First regiment, was visited, and seventy men were lined up for inspection. This company has also done much in the way of "building up" recently. Twenty-one recruits were taken in as the result of a "smoker," to which prospective members were invited. Thursday evening our own company D made the usual excellent showing, and in excellent shape and there is no question that if markings and ratings were to be made on this tour it would be the same old story—"Company D first." Capt. Fenwode takes the greatest interest in his company, and is always on hand when there is any work to be done, and he stays until he sees that it is done properly. This week will be a busy one for the St. Paul companies. Company C, First regiment, takes it tomorrow evening; Company E, First regiment, on Tuesday evening, and Company E, Third regiment, on Wednesday evening. The property inspection will occur in the company room, while muster will occupy in the assembly room, on the first floor of the building directly across from the Turner building, the present "armory." The drill each evening occurs in the vicinity of Rice park and the Metropolitan hotel, where the streets are wide and well lighted. Col. Reynolds will inspect the artillery battalion, beginning with Battery A, next Friday evening, and the engineers' company the following Monday evening. It is needless to say that the boys look anxiously forward and hope that it may rain on their drill night—for then there is likely to be no drill. The new rifle range has not been completed yet, but the boys hope to commence operations on the bull's-eye by next Sunday. On last Monday evening in Minneapolis occurred the re-election of G. McC. Reeve as colonel of the First regiment by a unanimous vote. Maj. M.

Constipation Cured

Quickly—Permanently.

I have been troubled with constipation for 35 years. I contracted it during the Civil War and never could get a remedy that would give permanent relief. Several months ago I got a bottle of Mull's Grape Tonic and I am happy to say that after using it a few weeks it effected a complete cure. I was also slightly troubled with dyspepsia and it has also completely cured that. I can cheerfully recommend it to all old soldiers and all others who may be troubled in a like way. Respectfully yours, HARRY C. CROW, Chief Engineer Sprague's Delicatessen Co., 716 North Broadway, St. Louis, Mo.

Don't you know by experience that salts, castor oil, pills and the ordinary cathartics will not cure constipation? These remedies merely physic. Stop their use and you are back in the same old way. Continue them and your condition grows worse. People who suffer from piles, appendicitis and fistula will tell you that such physics caused their disease. Unless you are constipated Mull's Grape Tonic will not change the action of your bowels. Mull's Grape Tonic is a cure for constipation because it cleanses the system when it needs it and does not physic a man to death when he does not need it. You won't lose strength when you take Mull's Grape Tonic. The grape contained in the tonic is the greatest blood-maker, strength-giver and flesh-builder known. Constipation weakens the entire system. The muscles lying along the intestinal tract, and which carry the waste food from the body, become flabby when not permitted to properly perform their functions—Mull's Grape Tonic strengthens these. Mull's Grape Tonic makes it possible for you to get all of the nutrition out of the food you eat. It is made from pure, wholesome fruits noted for their strength-giving properties. Don't class Mull's Grape Tonic with advertised medicine. Mull's Grape Tonic comes from Germany, where it is used in nearly every hospital and by most physicians. Send 10 cents to pay postage on large sample bottle. Give druggist's name. Address Lightning Medicine Co., Rock Island, Ill.

All Druggists Sell Mull's Grape Tonic. 50 Cents a Bottle.

MR. IDE ENUMERATES PHILIPPINE NEEDS

Commissioner Says Dingley Tariff Is the Heaviest Burden.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 9.—Henry C. Ide, of the Philippine commission, said today that the greatest help that congress can give to relieve us from the heavy burdens imposed by the Dingley tariff on the exports from the islands to the United States, is to pass a tariff act which will reduce the tariff on the Philippine manufacturer of cigars to send his goods to the United States without paying a duty a tariff amounting to 75 per cent of the Dingley tariff and 25 per cent ad valorem in addition. The restriction which prevents the acquisition of more than 2,500 acres of land by one corporation, he says, has prevented the establishment of sugar industries. He thinks the limit should be 25,000 acres in order to secure the opening of large plantations. Of the friar question Mr. Ide said: "The purpose of the insular government is to acquire the land belonging to the friars, and then to sell it to the present occupants on long terms of payment. The friars are in a sense non-resident owners very much as are the landlords of Ireland, so that the difficulties are quite like those existing in Ireland. They are perhaps aggravated by the fact that the friars have exercised political power. It is impossible for an outsider to determine just how extensive the independent Catholic church movement is. On the surface the schism would seem to be quite important, but the Catholic church is an institution that time counts very little with. The insular government takes no part in these controversies and has no views except to maintain order. It is possible that had the Vatican been able to meet Gov. Taft's advances for the sale of the friars' lands and for the withdrawal of the friars from the islands, this schism might have been avoided."

FAMILIAR SCENES IN THE PARKS

JUST WAITING. KEEPING A TRYST. OLD GENTLEMEN SUN THEMSELVES. MICAWBERS OF THE PARK.

Passengers on the Selby cars, which rattled directly by the couple—prosaic, dreary looking passengers—gazing blankly out of the windows—saw the man and the girl sitting on a bench close together. And they smiled and nudged each other and said that spring had come. But all visitors to St. Paul's parks do not bring with them a sentimental interest as do the engaged couples in Rice park. Parks are havens for all sorts and conditions of people, from weary Willies to the spring poet. Much of the floozian and letsum of the city's tide is cast up on these green spots, for a time, at least, although sooner or later the eddying waves reach even here to hurl them relentlessly back. The observer is sure to be impressed with the number of old people who seek St. Paul parks in the spring and summer time. Some of them carry books and papers here and read for the greater part of a morning or an afternoon. The face of one old man is very familiar to all whose business takes them frequently past Rice park. He is scrupulously clean. His clothes are always speckless and everything about him suggests good care. If not comfortable circumstances, in fair weather his hours are between ten and half past twelve in the morning, and he wasn't a poet. Figures are so much more prosaic than verse. And now I shall have to build up an entirely new romance concerning him." Perhaps one sees more men of the tramp genus in Lower Town park than in any other place. During the sunny hours of the day they lounge about on the benches in groups of two or three. They seem to be a good-natured crowd, for occasionally a low snuff of laughter disturbs the sparrows quarreling on the walks or scolding one another from the branches of the trees. Frequently about noon, one comes upon a group of tramps munching sandwiches together or eating fruit. They display none of that discontent that wise people insist is the outgrowth of laziness. Como park is the haven for tourists and picnickers just as Merriam Park is a paradise for nursemaids and babies. Visitors to the city always visit Como. It is one of the show places of the city. So all public spirited St. Paulites will assure you. Pedestrians loiter on the walks, little put wagons fly noisily and their well kept drivers, and the beat of horses' hoofs are heard constantly. A St. Paul girl who had been invited to Como one morning last summer relates a rather curious experience. It was hardly exciting enough for an adventure. The morning was dull and badly wrecked. The mail compartments are reported to be in splinters and the loads of mail buried in the debris. The two trains are supposed to meet at Fulton Chain, a few miles from Nelson Lake. It is said that the engineer of one of the trains read his orders and caused the disaster. Engineer Nevins, of one of the trains, was killed. James H. Jones, a mail clerk, had both legs broken. John Best, another mail clerk, was frightfully injured and may die. John T. Glynn, newsboy, killed. Conductor Frank Paulk, of Utica, and Fireman Yerden, are also dead. Several of the passengers are reported injured, but so far as ascertained none was killed or fatally hurt. Challenge to Labor Unions. NEW YORK, May 9.—John C. Havemeyer, in an open letter published in the newspapers of Tomkins, issues an open challenge to the trades unions in which he offers to engage a public hall and defray all expenses excepting for the speakers, and makes one condition—that the unions agree to contribute to be furnished by him in addition. He asserts that a refusal to accept his offer will be a confession of weakness on the part of the men.

EVEN RUSSIAN DUKES HAVE THEIR LIMITATIONS

Finance Minister Resigns in Protest and Carries His Point. ST. PETERSBURG, May 9.—Finance Minister Witte personally handed his resignation to the czar May 1, but withdrew it before nightfall. His resignation followed a peremptory letter from Grand Duke Alexander Michaelovich demanding increased appropriations for the latter's new department of commercial marine. M. Witte informed the czar that he would be unable to administer the finances if grand dukes were permitted to give orders. The czar urged Witte to reconsider, but M. Witte complied only after the grand duke had written him a letter of apology.

FRESHMAN CLASS IS SUSPENDED FOR ROWDYISM

Syracuse University Men Were Entirely Too Frisky. SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 9.—Chancellor Day, of Syracuse university, today suspended the entire freshman class for acts committed last night, when the class members were painted over college buildings. Dynamic men exploded, sidewalks ripped up and other depredations to property committed. The suspension is to continue, the chancellor says, until all traces of last night's rowdyism are removed. The freshmen are repairing and settling.
