Professor Chidlow is the acknowledged expert and authority of the world on wheat, milling, flour, milk, butter, yeast, and most important of all, fermentation and bacteriology. All the materials used by us in Chidlow formula breads are tested and analyzed under his direction. The flour is tested for the proteids, glutenin and glyadin—also for starch—and so blended as to secure the highest nutritive value; yeast is tested for its quick leavening power; milk for its purity, and so on throughout the entire list of materials. Professor Chidlow has made this a life work, founded the Chidlow Institute of Baking Technology at Chicago, and is 10-day devoting his entire talent to the technical work of this company.

Dorothy Dodd
BY X-RAYS
Just for once won't you try a pair of shoes that are not made from guesswork measurements of what your foot ought to be, but from "X-Ray" photographs of what women's feet really are?
The "Dorothy Dodd" Shoe is exactly shaped to the bones, muscles and ligaments of the foot, as they are plainly revealed by "X-ray" photograph. This is the explanation of why you hear so much talk on all sides about the wonderful "Fit of a Dorothy Dodd." The shoe deserves its popular nickname of "an arrangement in comfort." But all this is of no help to you unless you own a pair. On the day you buy them you will learn a new lesson in Foot Comfort.
After that, no one can sell you any other shoe but the "Dorothy Dodd." Sincerely yours,

Hats and Woollacks.

"Why do members of the English parliament sit with their hats on, and why does the lord chancellor of England sit upon a woollack?" asks a certain proponent of curious questions. It happened that in 1190, during the reign of King John, that the difficulty with Philip II. of France concerning the duchy of Normandy must needs be settled by single combat, and John, the Earl of Ulster, was chosen as the English champion, but as soon as this doughty knight appeared on the field of encounter his adversary put spurs to his horse, and, with a speed as great as his feet galloped away, and England's champion was left victor of an empty field and an unshathed sword. Thus, when King John came to bestow a suitable reward upon a hero whose mere presence was enough to insure the enemy's retreat, the earl, in place of a request for titles and lands, of which he already had a plenty, asked the following original favor: "I beg that in future we may be permitted to sit without removing our hats in your majesty's presence." And, as King John was moved to grant this singular boon, the English parliament continued to sit with uncovered heads. As for the woollack, as a cushion for the lord chancellor, Elizabeth's reign

(1588) is responsible for such a custom. The earl's request was forbidden by parliament; it was necessary to impress the people with this great source of national wealth, and its great importance to the kingdom. So, to add dignity to wool, socks of it were placed in the house of lords, where the staid and learned judges obligingly sat. Thus it came to pass that the lord chancellor still throws a red cloth, and to be appointed high chancellor of England is even now "to be appointed to the woollack."
Payment on Delivery.
"Here is a story told me the other night," says a writer in the London Tatler. "Lord Tennyson, as all the world knows, wrote a sonnet for the first number of the Nineteenth Century. As it stands in the poet's 'Collected Works' it reads quite differently from its form as first presented, where it ran:—
"Thus far our bark hath sped without one check."
"Mr. Knowles, the editor, wrote back to suggest that this line should be altered, as a check for the amount of the poem would certainly be forthcoming, and that the public might misunderstand."
"Well," he said, "what do you say?"
"Taking the tickets, sir."

Chess in China.
The Chinese are passionately fond of all games of skill and chance and in particular of chess. The Chinese form of the game closely resembles the European method, but is usually played with flat wooden disks with their distinctive marks written upon them. Servants begin to play the moment the master's back is turned, and men and women, boys and girls, sent on errands will stop in the street and play.

The Inventors of Stoves.
One of the first attempts at making a closed stove of iron was made by Cardinal Polignac in 1709, and seven years later an attempt was made to introduce stoves of this kind into England, but without success, owing to the prejudice of English people in favor of seeing their fire.
The Franklin stove was invented by Dr. Franklin in 1745, and a quarter of a century later, in 1771, and during a few years following the discoverer of electricity invented several other stoves, one of which was designed for burning bituminous coal and which had a downward draft and consumed its own smoke.
Count Rumford was the next person to make an invention looking to the improvement of stoves and during the ten years between 1785 and 1795 devised several improvements.
