ROYAL REMAINS SPAT UPON

Bodies of Alexander and Draga Are Reviled by the People of Belgrade Then Privately Buried.

KING AND QUEEN OF SERVIA RECEIVE MANY SHOTS AND STABS

Alexander Makes Heroic Stand at the End --- Assassins Find Their Victims by the Light of Candles --- Draga Pleads for Mercy and the King Kills Naumovics --- Then Shooting Begins and Doomed Pair Die in Each Others Arms --- Relatives of Draga Are Permitted to Leave Belgrade --- Intelligent Servians Favor a Republic.

BELGRADE, June 12.—The assassination of King Alexander and Queen Draga, the latter's two brothers, the Serbian premier, minister of war and former minister of war and the proclamation by the army of Prince Peter Kara Georgevitch, as king of Serbia, has apparently been accepted by the capital and the Serbian people without a murmur. The meeting of the skupshtina on Monday next is now looked forward to confirm the proclamation as king of Prince Peter and to regularize the new situation. The only new element in the situation is a feeling among the intelligent classes in favor of the abolition of a Serbian monarchy altogether and the creation of a republic, and this sentiment is shared by at least one member of the provisional government. Differences of opinion on this point developed today at a meeting of the cabinet when the new foreign minister, Ljubmir Kalievics, expressed himself for the establishment of a republican form of government. The majority of the ministers, however, declared themselves in favor of a new king in Prince Peter. They strengthened their declaration by the strong argument that it was certain that Austria and Russia would not countenance the creation of a republic. This is the view generally shared by politicians.

The remains of the ill-fated king and queen were buried almost stealthily last night in the chapel of St. Mark, where the members of the Obrenovitch family are interred. The government has laid claim to the possessions of the late monarch. It is not known whether he left a fortune, but it is estimated that he had considerable savings, having lived economically during the last decade. It is reported that the greater part of his money was deposited in England, but it is questionable whether the capital would be delivered to the Serbian government. The opinion here is that all belongs to the state, including even the king's foreign investments. It is possible that Ex-Queen Natalie may also appear as an heiress. Queen Draga was in receipt of 30,000 golden ($12,000) monthly and also had great savings, which will be handed over to her three sisters.

SHOT DEAD WHILE LIGHTING CIGARETTES

Almost simultaneous with the butchery in the palace the troops endeavored to arrest the king's part in the revolution. In the Konak palace itself the revolutionaries had two important partisans in the king's body guard—Col. Alexander Maschin, Queen Draga's cousin (not brother-in-law), and the king's personal attendant, Lieut. Naumovics. Two officers of the high military academy appeared at the appointed hour, 2 a. m., at the gate of the Konak, where the king's adjutant, Panajotovic, who was in the conspiracy, handed them the keys to the garden gate, which is always kept locked. First stepping before the guard at the Konak, one of the two officers called "throw down your arms." A fight ensued, with shots from both sides, in which several persons were wounded.

DETAILS OF THE REVOLUTION

The following is a narrative of the revolution given by men who took an active part in it: Army officers to the number of ninety, having formed a project of revolt, among them being delegates from almost every garrison in Serbia and the majority of the officers of the Sixth regiment, Col. Mitschitsch invited his comrades on Wednesday evening at 11 o'clock to meet in the Kalmagden garden and there the immediate carrying out of the intended deed was organized.

At 1:40 a. m. the officers in eight groups went to the Konak, the royal palace. Each had a cue about special directions regarding his part in the revolution. In the Konak palace itself the revolutionaries had two important partisans in the king's body guard—Col. Alexander Maschin, Queen Draga's cousin (not brother-in-law), and the king's personal attendant, Lieut. Naumovics. Two officers of the high military academy appeared at the appointed hour, 2 a. m., at the gate of the Konak, where the king's adjutant, Panajotovic, who was in the conspiracy, handed them the keys to the garden gate, which is always kept locked. First stepping before the guard at the Konak, one of the two officers called "throw down your arms." A fight ensued, with shots from both sides, in which several persons were wounded.

The revolutionaries then entered without hindrance and reached the court yard, where Lieut. Naumovics was awaiting. He opened the lock of the iron door leading to the front room on the first floor. By this it was seen that the Konak was carefully closed and that danger was suspected. Hurrying upstairs to the first floor, the revolting officers attracted the attention of the palace attendants and the royal couple by the noise of the shooting. Lieut. Lavar Petrovitch, alarmed by the unwhipped hubbub, hurried with a drawn revolver in one hand and in the other a stick, to the door. "What do you want?" he cried. "Show us where the king and queen are," came the reply. Lieut. Naumovics, and at the same moment a ball stretched him on the ground. The revolutionaries pressed forward, when suddenly the electric light gave out. In the greatest excitement and feeling their way, the revolutionaries climbed the stairs and got into the sleeping apartment through corridors. Here they found candles and lit them. This seemingly slight circumstance was decisive to the whole action.

PLAIN WOODEN CROSSES FOR MONUMENTS

The remains of the royal pair were interred in a vault in the cemetery chapel. Two wooden crosses alone denoted the spot, marked "Alexander Obrenovics" and "Dragina Obrenovics." The other bodies lie outside in the cemetery in rough graves. Lieut. Naumovics was not interred with the other victims, but, in response to the wish of the public, was buried in daylight, with full military honors. He is now generally styled "a patriot," who died for his country. Today the sisters and nieces of the late queen, who had been arrested by the military authorities, were expelled from the country. Her sisters late last night were permitted to take a farewell look at the dead queen's remains. They were subsequently conveyed on board a Servian ship, which brought them to Pancsova. They were lucky to escape with their lives. Ex-Queen Natalie was desirous of coming to Belgrade to see the body of her son, but was dissuaded by the government. Some shouts for the republic have been heard in the streets, which are still patrolled. The military authorities seem to apprehend complications and are anxious to get formal communications regarding the attitude of the powers toward the new government. It is also stated that the formalities connected with the proclamation of King
