St. Paul Social Circles

The weather man and the weather played society a very shabby trick during the past week and spoiled all its plans for a good time. The garden party given by Mrs. Hill for Mrs. Beard was quite spoiled as far as the garden part of it was concerned, not alone by the cold but by frequent showers. The Hill house, however, is quite large enough to accommodate great many guests, so the affair went off very charmingly even though all the plans for an open air fete miscarried. The girls have many pretty thin frocks and are all ready for the summer campaign, so that it is doubly trying to have to go back to thick things. But then nobody knows how to dress, for a bright morning by no means insures a fair day, and the frequent showers have tended to make somewhat very cross. Tea on the veranda is always pleasant, although one would need a heavy wrap to be able to enjoy it lately.

The floral dinner is the latest and, according to a writer in a late magazine, such an affair can be given by any one who has a profusion of blossoms in their yards. An apple blossom dinner can be made very tempting by massing the table with these sweet smelling flowers and trimming each dish with them. The menu should be a light one appropriate to the weather, which should be warm to be a success.

This is the time of the year to try all sorts of schemes to lose flesh or gain it as the case may be, as during the warm weather it is safer to use drastic measures than in winter. The woman who is too stout can diet nicely in summer as she requires less to eat and the cold fare recommended for this purpose can be better endured. The woman with too much avoirdupois need only go without breakfast for a month—two and live upon cold dishes to compass the desired end. No matter how much tempted, if you are in earnest and want to get down to a graceful size, you have only to persevere in this regime and you will be a slyph.

A St. Paul woman said the other day that she wondered what society did before we had the telephone. For useful as it is, it is almost a necessity with those who have many engagements and entertain a good deal. Not to have a telephone these days is to be decidedly out of it and one feels a sense of personal injury toward the woman who has not one of the two telephones. Many invitations are given that way, indeed, so general is the custom that some large affairs have occurred for which no cards were issued and the invitations given entirely by telephone.

Our inability to secure a location in St. Paul more advantageous to our particular line of business, coupled with the fact that our present lease expires August 1, is responsible for this sensational sacrifice of our entire stock. Until that time every vestige of the Twin Cities from our Minneapolis store, 610 Nicollet avenue, regardless of previous cost or profit—the object is to be entirely rid of the stock by August 1 and opportunity thus afforded you of buying finest Gloves, Parasols and Umbrellas is most unprecedented.
