CONFIDENCE MEN ARE BLAMED FOR FAKE FIGHT TALE

Philadelphia Detectives Spoil Scheme of Pair After Wealthy Restaurant Keeper's Money—Corbett Was Named to Win This Sure-Thing Contest.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 20.—Back of the "Plant" stories, telling how the Jeffries-Corbett fight has been fixed, is a deliberate scheme to gold-brick wise members of the sporting fraternity all over the country. The work in this city was intrusted to Russell Barnett, of St. Louis, and Edwin K. Morris, of San Francisco, each of whom was held in $1,500 bail by Magistrate Devlin on a charge of conspiracy.

Nothing funnier than the play made by Barnett and Morris has ever been put on the stage, and strange enough they had $10,000 in cold cash fairly in sight when Detectives Nixon and Dean slipped the bracelets on their wrists and said:

"Come on."

Edward Snyder, a prosperous restaurant keeper, was the man behind the money, and his brain is still sizzling as a result of the hot air pumped into his ears by Morris and Barnett.

The story of the play and of the game behind it comes from Snyder, who since the arrests has come to see the funny side of what might have proved to be the loss of his lifetime. Snyder is something of a sport, and will take a chance for $1,000 on almost any old proposition. It was his sporting reputation that imperiled his bank roll, $10,000 strong, with a row of tenements back of it.

Funny to Snyder Now.

"This fellow Morris came into my place two weeks ago and flashed a bunch of diamonds that made my head ache. He paid his checks four times a day with gold coin. He had nothing but real money, and he spent it. He made it a point to get around only when I was on the floor, and finding him a good customer, I did my best to make him comfortable. Somehow or other the Jeffries-Corbett fight came up in a conversation, and Morris told me that he was 'in' on that game. He said that the fight was a cinch for Corbett; that Jeffries was to have $100,000 for his, and that he was under contract to do whatever the syndicate cut out for him. Morris represented the syndicate. He belongs to a fraternity that I belong to, and I really thought him to be on the level with me. The next day he told me that he was in charge of the Philadelphia end of the syndicate, and that I could get the job of betting commissioner if I could raise $25,000 to post as an evidence of good faith.

"That was a bit strong for me. I offered to put him next to a wise man with the amount, but he called me down with the tip that he would pick his own mechanics. His front, his tail, his flash of diamonds and the news from the coast that the fight was fixed all combined to impress me. The chance looked good. I was to bet $100,000 of the syndicate money and was to have 20 per cent of the winnings for mine. All I had to do was to show up $25,000 strong and go out to 'Frisco and bet them to a standstill.

Played for Big Money.

"I talked on the $25,000, but agreed to put up $10,000 in cash and show goods for the balance. This seemed

TWO-MILE BREEZE SAVES AFTERNOON AT WHITE BEAR

Lake Is Calm in the Morning, but Wind Catches Yachts After Start and Turns Drifting Match Into Clever Piece of Racing.

The fourth weekly regatta of the White Bear Yacht club was sailed yesterday afternoon in a fair breeze, which was very light at the start. All during the week a heavy wind had been blowing and yachtsmen expected to have plenty of wind for the Saturday races, but the usual Saturday hoodoo came along bright and early. During the morning the lake was perfectly calm and it looked as though there would be no race.

A two-mile breeze sprang up shortly after 2 o'clock and gradually developed to six miles an hour, and what at first promised to be little more than a drifting match, turned into a clever piece of racing. The wind came from the northeast and for the most part was steady. The course sailed was the short one, six knots, to Wildwood and return and center and return. The first leg was a reach, the next a beat and back from Wildwood a free run, with a close haul into Dellwood.

A singular incident occurred in the first mile of the course. The Class A boats were sent off at 3:35, the Class B, new boats, at 3:40, open class at 3:45 and the B class, old boats, at 3:50. Before the center buoy was reached the open class boats got bunched up with the new B boats and the two classes swung down into the A class. As the boats were nearing the mark they gradually drew together and some fouling took place which was unavoidable, as it was impossible to keep clear at all times. The fleet much resembled a moonlight cruise on a quiet night. Minnesota, who was sailing off by herself and slightly to leeward, got a favorable puff of wind and made the mark first, and after the rest of the fleet came about they gradually stretched out and there was less interference.

Pennants were sailed for in each class. No boats in Class C put in an appearance, and hence there was no race among the little fellows.

One of the double center-boarders was victorious, but the other two did not show any remarkable speed.

The Winning Boats.

The winners of the day's events were Minnesota, Capt. Bement, in Class A; Red Devil, Capt. Sam Ordway, in Class B, new boats; Weirlding, Capt. Dreese, in the open class; and Jim Crack, Capt. Schuneman, in Class B, old boats. Flying sails were allowed in Class A and the two B classes, and were used on the run from Wildwood to center.

The four boats in Class A got off a good start. Minnesota being well in motion, took the lead, with Knight Errant next. Minnesota, meeting with no interference from the other classes to fit Morris like an old shoe, and he agreed to bring the man from Missouri over to see me yesterday. He always spoke of Barnett as the man from Missouri! On Thursday morning Barnett showed up, and he had Morris skinned a mile at every point. His clothes were twice as good as those worn by Morris; his diamonds were twice as big and twice as good. He used paper money, but we had to change a $50 bill every time he ate a meal. No money was good but his. He had talk to talk that no man ever talked before, and it caught me.

"We agreed that I should put up $10,000 cash and 'quality' in $15,000 more. Barnett was to pay me $50 a day while I was in San Francisco, 20 per cent of my winnings and allow me $250 for traveling expenses.

"When I reached San Francisco a man of the name of Allen, representing the 'Frisco end of the syndicate, was to 'put me up' at all the clubs where gambling is allowed, and I was to start betting on Corbett at once, so as to get the swell odds. A syndicate man was to hold the stakes, so that we could double out on every bet and thus increase our haul. Barnett said to me: 'You bet them $10,000 and then refuse all comers until you get a chance to see one of the syndicate managers. Make your flash of the real estate, quality at the banks and file good credentials. When you have bet the first $10,000 you step around the corner and our syndicate will give you $20,000 more to bet.

"With this $30,000 up in the hands of a syndicate stakeholder, we will have at least $50,000 to bet, only $30,000 of which will be our own. Then they will turn up with the $100,000 Philadelphia money and take all comers. We will have touts in all parts of the country passing out the tip that $10,000 you step around the corner and our syndicate will give you $20,000 more to bet.

"I then suggested the possibility of Jeffries taking the syndicate money and then dumping them. Barnett never turned a hair. He looked me square in the eye and said, 'In that event our stakeholder will board our syndicate and the wide, wide world will swallow him up.'

"I hustled around, raised the $10,000 and was about to hand it over when the detectives ducked up and hauled the fellows off."

Jeffries was arrested on a charge of money being found on both Barnett and Morris, neither of whom would make any statement.

NEW YORK, June 20.—At the sale of the Elmendorf yearlings at Sheepshead Bay today Mr. Haegid decided to withdraw all the fillies catalogued and sell only the best of the yearlings. The sale was good and the prices realized were the best of the sale. Newton Bennington was the heavy purchaser, paying $16,000 for the son of Imp. Rapallo Imp. which followed, got around center buoy first and opened a good lead. Ordway made desperate efforts to catch her with Knight Errant, but fleet Minnesota was sailing in a wind that was just suited to her fickle taste, and she refused to be overhauled. Seeress was well up with Knight Errant for most of the distance, but Crusader never was dangerous, sailing in last place all the way, although she won handsily a week ago and beat choppy sea as she covered the last leg of the course.

In the B class, new boats, Red Devil repeated her performance of a week ago and beat Splindid in a minute and three seconds. After the third mile Red Devil was never headed, although Black Deuce, Splindid and Knight Errant were crowding her hard. Flying Dutchman was sluggish and came in a poor last. The Dutchman did not do much better, but wants a heavy wind to send her along. Neola, a light weather craft, did not come to expectations yesterday's race.

Three for Weirlding.

In the open class there were but three entries, Weirlding winning her third successive victory. Geneva was over the line first, and led much of the way for the first mile, but Weirlding got the buoy first and kept the lead from that time on, finishing two minutes and forty-five seconds ahead of Geneva, who was one minute and twelve seconds ahead of Geneva. The race between the latter two was a pretty one for the last two miles, but Capt. Rodenberg, who sailed Geneva before she was sold to Wheeler, refused to come in last, and beat Fry by a narrow margin.

Jim Crack, merely to give a sample of her old-time form, sailing home in 1:27:30 in the B class, old boats, which was the best time of the day, the next best being that of Weirlding's, in the open class, which beat Avis by two seconds. Jim Crack made a runaway race of it, with Avis always her nearest competitor, and Dakota, formerly the old Kennebec, third. After rounding the first mark it looked like Jim Crack all the way. Owl, better known as Mooswa, lived up to her new name by staying out last and finishing eighteen minutes behind the winner.

The races next Saturday will be for cups, excepting in the B classes, which will sail for pennants.

The new launch which will be used for the judges' boat was at the service of the club for the first time yesterday. The model is a new one on the lake, it

NAPIER'S TEAM DEFEATS RICHARDS' MEN

Splendid Not Out Innings of Hibbard Responsible for Victory.

Napier's team, of the Minneapolls, easily defeated Richards' team, of the Minneapolis club, by ninety-five runs yesterday. This was mainly due to the splendid not out innings of Hibbard, who, going in first, carried out his bat for eighty.

Hibbard gave two or three chances, but barring this, his innings was a splendid exhibition of good hitting, timing the balls to a nicety, punishing the loose ones and playing the good ones.

The Minneapolls bowlers were not weak by any means. W. Godwin put on lots of speed, and it was impossible to take liberties with him. His brother Ernest also bowled well. This makes Hibbard's innings the more creditable. On returning to the pavilion he was enthusiastically cheered, as an innings of eighty not out, is very seldom made on the Minnesota ground.

The Minneapolls men went to the wicket first. Cook and Bartlett bowling. The Minnesota on going in topped this score without the loss of a wicket, thirty being on the score board before the first wicket fell. Sisson played good for eleven, and other members of the team, while not making many runs, held their wickets up, thereby enabling Hibbard to punish the bowling. The latter's innings included five fours and seven threes, the sum total being 123. Godwin took five wickets for thirty-eight. The next game will be played the fourth of July in Minneapolis.
