RICH DAUGHTERS FIND POOR FATHER

They Kneel Beside His Cot Amid Squalid Surroundings—Second Wife Opposes Any Assistance That Is Offered.

In a dingy little attic room at 644 Park avenue, surrounded by poverty, want and filth, two wealthy society women knelt beside a worn cot, and with their arms about their aged father's neck implored him to leave such surroundings and allow them to provide for him a home in which he might spend the few remaining days of his life in comfort and peace.

Strenuous protest against the helpless father accepting the offers of his daughters was made by the man's wife, who is a stepmother of the daughters.

The two women, who are in St. Paul for the purpose of assisting their aged and poverty-stricken father, are Mrs. A. D. Price, wife of a wealthy business man of Chicago, and Mrs. Deayne Porter, of England, who had not seen her father in twenty-eight years, and only learned that he was still alive a few days ago, while touring the United States on a pleasure trip.

Was Wealthy Once. The father is Joseph Desjardins, eighty-four years of age, and so helpless that for more than three years he has not been able to leave the cot on which his daughters found him yesterday. Many years ago he, too, was well-to-do, but had investments in real estate which caused him to lose all he had, and for a number of years he was a subject of public charity. He had married a second time and lost track of his children, who, after years of vain searching, believed him dead. Three years ago, helpless from old age, Mr. Desjardins gave up the battle for a livelihood and rapidly became so ill that he was compelled to seek his bed, from which he has never been able to rise. Charity provided a living for him and his wife until recently, when Mrs. Price, the Chicago daughter, learned that her father was still alive, and having located him in St. Paul, provided him with money enough to live on. Not even when she learned that her father was alive did the daughter know of the poverty which cramped him, nor of his pitiable physical condition. This she learned when she reached St. Paul yesterday for the purpose of having him return with her to her Chicago home.

Reunion Was Affecting. The meeting between father and daughter was a heart-rending sight, but not more so than the meeting, an hour later, between those two and the daughter from England, who had not seen her father in almost thirty years, and who had not met her Chicago sister in the last quarter of a century. Being in this country, she communicated with her Chicago sister, and was informed that their father was living in St. Paul. Upon learning this Mrs. Porter, who is the wife of a wealthy Englishman, hastened to St. Paul to reach the home of the father in time to find her sister with her arms about his neck, imploring him to leave his miserable attic home and to live with her. Together the daughters, forgetful of their fine dresses, knelt side by side and begged of the father to leave with them, offering to care for him and their step-mother the rest of their lives, but the step-mother objected and insisted that the father pay no attention to the wishes of his daughters.

Unable to convince the step-mother that it was best for all concerned, and determined to give their father a better home, the daughters applied to the probate court for the appointment of a guardian for their father, that they might be able to take him with them, regardless of the objections of his wife, and yesterday Probate Judge Bazille adjourned his court to the little attic home at 644 Park avenue and heard testimony upon the application. Judge Bazille described the surroundings at the home as something awful. Lying upon a cot which he had occupied for three years was the old man, too feeble to move, while there were dirt and evidences of poverty on all sides. Anticipating the arrival of Judge Bazille, the stenographer and others, the daughters had attempted to reduce the awful stench which filled the room by pouring the contents of two large bottles of perfume about the place, but even this did not have the desired effect. Owing to the strenuous objections of the wife, Judge Bazille did not appoint a guardian yesterday, but took the matter under advisement. The daughters will remain in St. Paul until the matter is decided, and should their application be granted will take their father to Chicago with them, where he will be furnished with a home.

Circuit Court at Yankton Lets Down Bars on Reservations.

SIOUX CITY, Iowa, June 30.—In a case which has gone up from Charles Mix county, S. D., Judge Smith, of Yankton, has made an important ruling which declares polygamy legal among Indians.

The case was where an Indian, who had two wives, attempted to inherit the allotment of land of the son by his second wife. The judge of the county court decided that the child was illegitimate. Judge Smith's decision lets down the bars, effectually. Polygamy is very common on the reservations.

THIRTY THOUSAND A YEAR FOR CLOTHES

Have Mrs. Austin and Her Prize Beauty Daughter "Nothing to Wear?"

Special to The Globe. CHICAGO, June 30.—There are two women in Chicago whose friends declare each spends $30,000 a year for dress. They are Mrs. Frederic C. Austin and her daughter, Miss Marion Austin. Mrs. Austin is the wife of F. C. Austin, head of the Austin Manufacturing company. Miss Marion Ogden Austin, the daughter, was pronounced by Grand Duke Boris of Russia to be one of the most beautiful American women. Mrs. Austin and her daughter have traveled extensively, and Miss Austin won distinction in all the courts of Europe as being a young woman of unusual beauty and accomplishments. Mrs. Austin says that it has never been the intention of either herself or daughter to purposely outshine others in the matter of expensive apparel. She said: "We never have made a point of dress. Of course, we are fond of beautiful clothes and we must have appropriate toilets for various occasions. My daughter and I believe we should dress harmoniously and in taste, but really we do not aspire to the distinction of being noted for our clothes."

TOWNE TO BE CHIEF TAMMANY ORATOR

His Selection for Fourth of July Function Is a Surprise.

NEW YORK, June 30.—Secretary Smith, of the Tammany society, announced today that the "long talker" at the Tammany Fourth of July celebration will be Charles A. Towne, formerly of Minnesota, now of Wall street, and Senator Bailey, of Texas. The selection of Mr. Towne as the principal orator causes surprise. He made his reputation as a Populist. In 1900 he was an ardent free silver man and a believer in all the doctrines of Mr. Bryan. Later he changed his views on silver. Then he came to New York, started to practice law and is now interested in Wall street affairs. Anyhow, Mr. Towne is now satisfactory to Tammany, which is for campaign purposes against Bryan and all that he stands for.

LIVES OF OVER 200 MINERS ARE SNUFFED OUT IN WYOMING

Explosion of Fire Damp in Union Pacific Coal Company's Workings at Hanna Is Heard for Miles Around—Efforts of Men Attempting to Rescue Those Who May Possibly Be Left Alive in the Mine Are Greatly Hampered by the Noxious Gases.

WOLF NURSES AND PROTECTS A CHILD

Experience of Romulus Is Repeated in a Small Way in Montana.

RED LODGE, Mont., June 30.—From Ewing, thirty miles from here, comes a story so strange that it has attracted much attention, and steps have been taken to either prove or disprove it. If true, the much-maligned wolf will take a higher place in the regard of mankind. Several weeks ago an infant daughter of William Dunphy, a prospector, who lived in the hills above Ewing, with his wife, was carried off one afternoon by a wild animal. Search was made for the little one, but no trace of it could be found, and the babe finally was given up for dead. Ever since the father has spent his time in the hills seeking the bears and the wolves and slaughtering them wherever found, while the mother has been pining away over the fate of her child. While Dunphy was hunting in the mountains yesterday he came on a wolf den, which showed signs of being occupied. He waited for a long time, and then, as no wolf came forth, he decided to enter the den. As he entered the place he heard the cry of a child.

SAYS THE SHERMAN LAW MUST STAND

Speaker-to-Be Cannon Squelches Attempt of Railroads to Change It.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 30.—Representative Cannon has informed the president that the big corporations of the country were preparing to secure a modification of the Sherman anti-trust law in the next session of congress, the leaders securing the cooperation of the legal departments of railroads and large corporations interested in interstate commerce. Twenty of these were secured up to the time Mr. Cannon was informed of the effort. These paid into a common fund $2,500 each, to be used in defraying the proper legal expense in relation to the proposed legislation.

The whole was left to the direction of President Spencer, of the Southern railway, who represents the Morgan interests in the Southern transportation schemes. He is vitally interested because of the proposed merger of all those lines after the fashion of the Northwestern lines under the name of the Northern Securities company. The money was paid in and a Washington lawyer was employed. He was instructed to draft legislation of a kind which would not be violently offensive to the congressmen and the people.

He was at work on this when Mr. Cannon was informed. He at once carried his information to the president, who admitted that he had heard something of this. Mr. Cannon said that the thing to do with this was to "cut its tail off behind the ears." This he proceeded to do by letting those know who are in touch with the effort that any semblance of such an effort would be immediately jumped on by the Republican congressional leaders and the life crushed out of it. The effect was immediate. George W. Perkins, representing Morgan, came to Washington and informed the president that no effort would be made to amend the Sherman act in the next congress. He said that his people recognize that the act would be futile and nothing more would be done.
