Red Lodge, Mont., Solomon Finds a Way Out of a Puzzling Difficulty and Saves the City Expense.

Special to The Globe. RED LODGE, Mont., July 19 .- Peculiar innovations are often introduced here in the West, but the most neculiar, perhaps, has been introduced by the police court judge of this city-he fines a man on three different counts and then accepts a promissory note in payment of the fines.

Charles Nodecker is the man who has given the note. He was arrested several days ago, first on a charge of carrying a revolver; then on a charge of using abusive language, and finally on a charge of contempt of court. When the prisoner was arraigned in court yesterday he admitted he was guilty of all the charges, and said he was sorry he had broken the laws of "I will fine you $5 on each charge," said the judge, as he entered the findings on his blotter. "That won't do any good," replied Nodecker, with a half smile. "I have no money now, you know, and it will cost you something to keep me in jail.

Reports to Washington From Foreign Statistical Agents Indicate Favorable Conditions in Grain-Producing Countries.

CROPS ALL OVER

THE WORLD PROMISE

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 19.— The foreign crop report of the department of agriculture, just out, based on advices received by the foreign statis-tical agent of the department at London as late as July 1, is, in brief, as follows: In Russia meteorlogical con-ditions have been in the highest degree favorable for the development of cereal crops in most parts of European Russia and harvest prospects are considerably improved, even in regions where conditions at the beginning of spring were unfavorable. In Germany a great improvement in all the winter cereals, particularly in winter rye, has been shown the past month. The condition of every crop in the middle of June is officially reported above medium, though winter wheat, potatoes and lucern were considerably nearer to good than medium, and all the others are graded about midway between the two conditions. Only an approximately good medium harvest of the spring crops in Austria is to be counted on at best. Maize promises well there. In Hungary unless there is more improvement before harvest, which is hardly expected this year, the out turn of the cereals will fall considerably below that of 1902, the deficiency in the case of wheat being 151/2 per cent. Most of the Bulgarian crops are reported in very good condition. Storms and floods have caused extensive damage to crops and vineyards in Italy.

In France the estimated area of winter wheat is 681,724 acres less than in 1902. A marked improvement in wheat and other crops occurred there doing well. Generally favorable reports come from Denmark. In Great Britain the wheat crop is everywhere somewhat late and hardly can come up to an average yield. Advices to the de partment from the government of India estimate the total wheat crop harvested there in the spring of 1903 at 290,261,104 bushels against a yield of 226,370,890 bushels in the previous

LIVES IN STATE OF COMA HE MAY NOT OVERCOME

The pope lies tonight in a state of coma and there are grave doubts in the minds of his doctors whether he will ever completely emerge. His immediate dissolution seems to be only averted by the reliability of the action of his heart. His pulse, though weak, continues steady. Shortly before midnight Dr. Lapponi said: "The pope at the present moment is in a state of coma which may be called a condition preceding the last agony, the duration of which it is impossible to forecast, although everything leads to the bealthough everything leads to the be-lief that this condition cannot last. To be more exact, he is still in a state of be more exact, he is still in a state of stupor from which, however, he rouses occasionally when he hears sharp sounds as, for instance, the insistent voice of one of his familiars calling loudly to him. Left alone he relapses immediately into a condition of tor-por. At intervals he murmurs in his sleep, continuing to have fearly in his por. At intervals he murmurs in his sleep, continuing to have forebodings that he is being abandoned by his valet, Centra, and myself. These are the symptoms of inclpient cerebral anemia and general exhaustion." He can no longer turn his head without assistance and is being kept alive by artificial stimulants. During the last twenty-three hours he has had two intwenty-three hours he has had two injections of camphorated oil, three of caffeine and two hypodermics of salt water, besides drinking stimulants. Mgr. Bislotti, master of the pope's chamber, said earlier in the evening that the pulse of his holiness has not yet shown any signs of becoming intermittent, so despite his extreme weakness and coma, he believed the pope would survive tonight and possibly tomorrow.

Both the Italian government and the authorities of the Vatican have made final preparations for the pope's death. The government is rigidly censoring all telegrams and telephonic communication between Italy and the rest of the continent. At this hour but few people remain at the Vatican. Dr. Mazzoni and Dr. Rossoni and the cardinals have gone to await the last urdinals the last urdinals urdinals have gone to await the last urdinals the last gent summons.

The medical aspect of the pope's case

The medical aspect of the pope's case is exciting much discussion. One reliable authority, having opportunities of knowing the private history of the treatment, declares that a third operation for the removal of the pleuric fluid actually has been performed, but has not been made public in order to avoid increasing the public apprehension. It is also stated in the same reliable quarter that Dr. Lapponi and Dr. Mazzoni have made a written statement before a notary giving the Dr. Mazzoni have made a written statement before a notary giving the exact details of the pope's case, and that copies of these statements have been deposited with Cardinal Rampolla and Mgr. Cagiano de Azevedo, the major domo of his holiness. The purpose of this statement is to answer subsequent medical criticisms on the treatment of the case. It is understood that the doctors have not been as frank in their bulletins as they personally desired to be, details of some features of the case being withheld at the earnest request of the Vatican authorities. Their formal statement is expected to clear up the entire medical history of the case.

They made no demonstration until they entered Basin, when five shots were fired as a warning. The mob proceeded at once to the county jail and fired a volley into the jail. Deputy Pierce and Special Deputy Meade were guarding the prisoners at the time. One bullet grazed Meade's shoulder and entered Pierce's heart.

Lapponi remained in the sick room throughout the night

At the morning conference the physicians noted a distinct change for the worse, particularly in the accelerated pulse, which had risen to 98 after remaining for many days between 88 and 90. The distinguished patient appeared to have lost all of that vitality of which he had hitherto so remarkably maintained. He appealed piteously to those about him, asking not to be left alone. Although his mental vigor was nearly exhausted he again asked that those about him, asking not to be left alone. Although his mental vigor was nearly exhausted he again asked that mass be celebrated. This was performed in the rooom adjoining that in which the pontiff lay. He followed the ceremony and took communion with extreme difficulty. Almost immediately he sank into a state of complete exhaustion. At first this took on the character of unnatural sleep and he lay as one inanimate with his eyes closed. But occasionally he started up and cried out as though in fear. Gradually, however, his sleep became heavier and assumed a condition of semi-consciousness or torpor.

After noon there was hardly any revival from this continued state of torpor, and the doctors remained continuously in attendance. Their night bulletin announced for the first time their patient had been in a state of coma, which they said has been almost uninterrupted during the day. How long this condition would continue they did not venture to say.

As Dr. Lapponi came from the sick room at 6 o'clock this evening for a breath of fresh air, he summed up the steady decline in the patient's condition at that time by saying. "The pope's condition tonight is worse than this morning and last night and while the end may come at any moment, yet an imminent catastrope is hardly anticipated, as the state of coma may be prolonged many hours."

Meantime the critical condition of the pontiff caused intense excitement throughout the city. When the state of coma first occurred the doctors formally communicated the gravity of the condition of his holiness to Cardinal Rampolla, who in turn advised the cardinals of the sacred college, At the same time the general public became aware of the alarming change in the pope's condition and the entrance of the Vatican was soon thronged with dignitaries of the church and members of the diplomatic corps, making anxious inquiries. Twice rumors of the death of the pontiff gained circulation. The cardinals and diplomats upon their arrival were informed of the gravity of the situation, but many of them left upon learning that the rumors of the pope's death were untrue.

He lifted his head. Cardinal Vives y Tuto took advantage of the opportunity to approach the bed and tell the pontiff that some cardinals were in the ante chamber. "I myself," said he, "desire to have your benediction." Leo, with a great effort, raised a trembling hand, and in an almost inaudible voice, between long most inaudible voice, between long pauses, gave the cardinal the pontifical blessing. The effort, however, appeared to have been too much for him, and he fell back into a condition of unconsciousness.

Among the cardinals who came to the Vatican today were Cardinal Oreglia, dean of the sacred college, upon whom will fall the chief duty of directing affairs after the pope's death. He went to the apartments which apparently have been prepared for his permanent occupation, and it was believed that he had taken up his residence at the Vatican in anticipation of his speedy assumption of the important duties he will be called upon to perform. Later, however, he left the Vatican. Cardinal Serafino Vannutelli, the great penitentiary, also artelli, the great penitentiary, also arrived in readiness to perform his office of reciting prayers for the dying pontiff. He remained at the Vatican continuously throughout the day and evening. Toward night the reports from the room continued to be of the gravest character. Cardinal Della Volpe, coming from the Vatican, said he had held a brief conversation with Dr. Lapponi, and that the latter made the following statement: "If nothing new happens the patient may live until tomorrow morning, perhaps until evening, that is, twenty-four hours longer. But beyond this his survival is impossible."

Following the departure of the cardinals a number of carriages were stationed in the courtyard of the San Damaso in readiness to bring the cardinals to the Vatican when the catastrophe seemed imminent.

How Mme. De Maintenon, the Most Beautiful Woman in History, Retained Her Beauty and Youthful Appearance.

How Any Woman Can Attain Beauty and Youthful Looks

Mme. De Maintenon, said to be the most beautiful woman that ever lived, and the favorite of the luxurious court of Louis XIV., when seventy years of age, so history records, looked scarcely thirty. Her complexion was a marvel, and the envy of all the most noted beauties for which the court of Louis Le Grande was famous. Her youth and beauty, it was asserted, were ascribed to a secret lotion of Paracelsus, that kept her complexion in its youthful vigor and radiant glow, warding off the wrinkles and keeping away the lines and removing the blemishes that are the arch enemies of beauty and youthful looks.

This secret, for which Mme. De Maintenon paid a fabulous sum, can to-day be obtained by every lady at a very moderate cost.

By a diligent research into the laws of mature and a careful study in the realms of chemistry, Mme. Ruppert, the most noted Complexion Specialist of the present day, has discovered a formula that not only equals thesecret formula of Paracelsus, but in many respects far surpasses it.

MADAME A. RUPPERT'S FACE BLEACH does all that the secret formula of Paracelsus did.
