At 1:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon President Schurmeier will duly announce the opening of the St. Paul Summer carnival.

For two weeks St. Paul and its inhabitants will revel in joy unconfined and the St. Paul public baths will be the beneficiary.

Things were lively about the carnival grounds yesterday. Scores of workmen were busy putting the finishing touches to the buildings and the big arch, and if nothing happens to prevent, the carnival will be opened tomorrow about as complete as could be expected.

In the industrial street merchants were busy fixing up displays in the booths assigned them, while up in the Midway the owners of the sidshows and amusement features had about all they could do keeping out of each other's way. Chaos was represented in the litter that blocked the sidewalks and streets, but midnight saw much of it cleaned up. Many worked until a late hour this evening completing the arrangement and decoration of the spaces assigned them, so it can be pretty accurately stated that there will be little left to do when tomorrow arrives.

Arch Is Illuminated. The big arch, one of the prettiest things of the carnival, was lit up last night for the first time and the illuminations drew thousands of people to the grounds. Added to this, all the booths and much of the grounds were illuminated and the sight was a pretty one.

Monday promised to open with a number of booths left on the association's hands, but the pleasing announcement was made last night that practically every one had been disposed of. Many signed contracts late yesterday afternoon and the association in consequence is considerably ahead.

The principal anxiety yesterday was for the Lockhart performing animals, which the association booked for the two weeks at a cost of $5,000. Because of stringent custom rules the members of the association were in great fear that something would happen to delay the attraction and the wires in consequence were kept hot with messages between St. Paul and Winnipeg. Added to this came word to the effect that a big storm had wrecked the Lockhart tents and the association had to hustle out and secure others. Last night brought a message that the elephants were en route and the members were correspondingly pleased and relieved.

Elephants Will Be Popular. In securing the Lockhart performing elephants at the "act de resistance" of the summer carnival, the executive committee has accomplished a master stroke. The engagement was made possible by the fact that the Lockhart animals were engaged for the big annual exposition at Winnipeg, to which city they came direct from New York, being secured for the Winnipeg fair at an enormous expense.

The Lockhart elephants are conceded to be the highest priced animal featured before the public today, and admitted to be the most entertaining and most instructive performance by elephants ever given in America.

The Lockhart elephants are really so much cleverer than any other trained animals that they must be seen to be appreciated, and the little things which have seemed so clever on the part of the circus elephants dwindle into nothing when compared with the bright, intelligent acts performed by the Lockhart beasts.

The Lockhart elephants have traveled all over Europe, and have been entertained by royalty, having had the honor of appearing before the queen of England at a private performance. Mr. Lockhart has followed a humane system in the education of his intelligent animals. It is by kindness, coaxing and little gifts of sugar and food that he succeeds in getting his pupils to respond so readily, and the things they do cannot be satisfactorily described. They play a little comedy, waltz, form pyramids, have a game of see-saw; they play keeping house and do no end of things which are both amusing and interesting.

It is a question if in the entire category of wild beasts there is one that appeals more to the mind of the child than the elephant. His mammoth size, his peculiar trunk and the odd and eccentric things he does make him an almost inexhaustible source of wonder and amusement to the young folks.

Carnival Headquarters. For the convenience of carnival patrons the association has established quarters near the main entrance. Here all the officers are quartered and ready to attend to the wants of those who call. Several booths have been assigned to the committees, and the chairman of each will be in constant attendance. The executive committee of the association will meet today on the carnival grounds and inspect the arrangements made for the entertainment of the public. It will be the last meeting before the grand opening, and everything will be done to make it a memorable event.

AGED MAN IS FOUND WANDERING ON TRACKS Unable to Tell His Address or Why He Was in Such Plight.

Wandering about aimlessly in the Minnesota Transfer yards last night, an aged man who gave his name as Halverson was picked up and turned over to the police. Halverson appeared to be feeble-minded, and the police were unable to learn from him where he lived, or how he had gotten into the railroad yards. The prior avenue police were unable to gain any information from the man as to his identity. He was held over night by the police.

Halverson said he is seventy-five years of age, but he is short and bent in figure. He was without a coat and was dressed in dark pants and vest, with a light shirt and small soft hat.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 25.—The will of Archbishop Katzer was filed for probate today by Bishop Schwabach, who is named as executor, with a bond. The real estate is given at more than 1,000 and the personal estate at over $1,000. The petition says the only heir is a brother, John Katzer, of this city. The only instructions given by the testator are that his funeral expenses and all just debts be paid. It is provided that if Bishop Schwabach is not alive at the time of the death of the testator then the executor shall be the bishop of the La Crosse diocese, who ever he may be.

DAIRY AND FOOD MEN PLEASED WITH CITY

Excursion Yesterday to Minnetonka Ends Convention Programme.

"Every year our conventions have been growing in importance, but the one just closed has overshadowed them all," said President E. W. Bailey of the Dairy and Food association, last night. "We have met with the very best possible treatment here and everything has been done to render our stay pleasant. I feel satisfied that there is not a single delegate but will leave St. Paul with the most pleasant recollections of the city. Four years ago when we met in Chicago there was not a paper there that would give us anything but a bare mention, and I look on the increased interest that is being taken in our work as an indication that the people have taken this question of pure food to heart and wish us well in our work."

"The manufacturers have also shown a much greater disposition to co-operate with us than on any previous occasion, and there is no reason that when such is the case the problem of honest food should not be solved."

All the other visitors to the seventh annual convention of the National Association of Dairy and Food Departments of the United States expressed themselves in similar terms to President Bailey and each was delighted with the closing day's outing which was taken yesterday at Lake Minnetonka.

The party left early in the morning for the lake and the entire day was spent on board a steamboat and at the Hotel St. Louis. All the ports were visited and a good view of the yacht racing was had from the boat. Lunch was taken at the hotel and a banquet was held there in the evening.

The delegates expressed their appreciation of Commissioner McConnell's services by presenting him with a G. A. R. button, with a gold fob set with diamonds attached, while Mrs. McConnell was made the recipient of a silver tea set.

The only address that was made was delivered by Prof. F. Shepard, of South Dakota. Prof. Shepard has perhaps taken the most radical stand during the convention against the use of antiseptics in any form or the use of coloring matter, however harmless.

He said that he could see no good reason why the use of these materials should be permitted, as in most instances they were simply made use of for the purpose of making manufactured products appear what in reality they were not.

"We can be sure at the present time even that we are eating pure meat, for the packers can by sterilization put up their goods in such a way that they will keep fresh unspoiled," Minnesota produces absolutely pure, fresh butter and bread, so that even if we had to do without manufactured products altogether, we should not be in such a bad way. The only danger we have to contend with lies in the manufactured stuff, and this, I think, should be subject to the strictest regulation."

Most of the visitors left for their homes this morning.

PATENT LEATHER. Processes of its Manufacture Are Guarded Carefully. Patent leather has become a feature in the leather world, and its making has assumed considerable proportions hereabouts. Penobly is probably the largest patent leather manufacturing place in the country, though Newark, N. J., and vicinity probably make more real and imitation patent leather. All manufacturers have their own tanning processes, much like those of the calfskin tanner, though some patent leather is given a bark tanning. Horse hide and colt skins are the chief leathers made up with a patent finish, and the process of producing the glossy surface is most interesting. The patent or enamel finish is really painted and baked on, as the bicycle manufacturer paints and bakes enamel onto a frame. Tanners are very particular about keeping their processes a secret, and nobody but workmen are ever allowed into the finishing rooms. Painters are especially kept far from the work rooms. It is said that the workmen have to drink much beer on account of the chemicals with which they work, and the heat of the oaking ovens. The hide or skin having been stretched and dried as much as possible, is first given a coating of a mixture of linseed oil, litharge, white lead or similar materials, boiled together until they make a paste mixture. This is dabbed on the surface with a steel tool, and well rubbed in so that the pores of the leather will be filled up. Then the leather is put into the oven, its surface being exposed to steam pipes at a temperature of about 180 degrees. It takes about half a day for this finish to set. Next the surface is rubbed down with pumice stone, and then it is covered with linseed oil and ivory black, about six layers being applied, each layer being dried and rubbed down. Finally a varnish is applied, and then the surface is rubbed down and finished off as nicely as a painter finishes a fine carriage. The final gloss is brought out by exposure to the sun. It is a peculiar fact that Old Sol brings out a better finish than can any artificial drying or baking process. Manufacturers of high-grade patent leather test every skin before shipping it. The test is made by folding the hide or skin at any point seized at random into a double V. This V is hammered with a mallet. If the finish cracks, the skin is rejected, and if it does not crack, the tanner is set to the shoe manufacturer. A patent finish is on a smooth surface and an enamel on a boarded, Japan or lacquer leather is the same as patent. A "boarded" surface is a surface whose grain is raised by roughing it up with a piece of board.—Newburyport News. DEATHS OF THE DAY. WINONA, Minn., July 25.—Capt.
