

FEMALE CHARMS CROW

WOMEN OF TODAY LOVELIER THAN THOSE OF PAST

The Secret Is Claimed to Be in Their Better Care of the Advantages Nature Has Given Them-Education and Refinement Do Their Part.

A number of men and women were discussing pretty women the other evening. They were not gossiping, for once, about anybody in particular, but were taking a general inventory of the charms of women they knew and drawing comparison between their prevalence now and a few years back. The general opinion was that pretty women were more numerous today than at any previous time.

When the discussion reached the reasons for more pretty women, all reasons for more pretty women, all sorts of ideas were advanced, such as "higher education," "privileges in athletics" and "modern progression." One woman who had not contributed much to the logical part of the conversation

"Education and civilization and progress have all conduced to the reflects in hygienic care of herself. Of course this conduces to her general physical beauty. But the real secret of woman's general increase in loveof woman's general increase in love-liness of face is her realization that she must take care of her countenance. She now understands that she must renovate and take pains to preserve her complexion, exposed to the weath-er, as it is, and to the wear of mental and physical exertion and weariness."

Then everybody present acquiesced in a belief that "beauty as an art," applied practically and assiduously to the countenance, has a great deal to do with the modern increase of pretty

Not long ago a Parisian, who is famous for her beauty, was visiting in New York. She was very enthusiastic over the American women's buoyant and delicate loveliness. During a discussion of the modern pretty woman, this Parisian said: "I think that it is just as much a

"I think that it is just as much a woman's duty to be charming as it is for her to make puddings and cakes or make speeches. Isn't she doing her share toward making the world more beautiful and enjoyable?"

And why should not madame and mademoiselle, too, do all she can to make herself charming? Shakespeare says: "All the world loves a lover," but I say "all the world loves a pretty woman," and everybody knows that a woman's heart yearns for love. So, she has this poetic sentiment in all her efforts to be beautiful.

"Even the school girl is interested in the progress of her charms. She studies herself in the glass and contemplates possibilities of a rounded throat, of a darker tint to her hair, of an added grace of carriage, and she an added grace of carriage, and she dreams away the hours and pines for the glories of eighteen and young

What discoveries she makes as the ys go by! What disappointments, days go by! What disappointments, and what ingenious inventions to conceal defects.

"She becomes an artist, and the older she grows the more time does she spend in her little beauty studio. She loves this study of beauty-making like any true artist, and her teacher, the long, beveled mirror, criticises and praises and condoles with her, and the joy of it all is as the joy of a Raphael Velasquez.

or a Velasquez.
"However, a part of modern woman's beauty is due to her more artistic style, in gowning. She adapts the seams and designs to her figure—but the colors and tints and all accessories may enhance the beauty of her face."

Miss Bayard, of Cherokee avenue, gave a luncheon yesterday in honor of Miss Williams, of Louisville, Ky.

Miss Bessie Bolton, of Grand avenue, will give a musicale Saturday evening in honor of Miss Leila Martha Potter, of Minneapolis, whose marriage to Herman F. Abels, of St. Paul, will take place Aug. 18 at the home of the bride in Minneapolis.

Miss Mayroice K. Funke and Neil Akenson, of Minneapolis, will be married this evening at St. Joseph's Catholic church, Rev. Harrison offi-

Miss Agnes Maud Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Nelson, of South Exchange street, and James T. Hughes, of Duluth, were married yesterday at the Cathedral. Rev. J. J. Lawler read the cathedral, Rev. J. Lawer read the service. Miss Rose Marth, of Barnesville, was the maid of honor, and Joseph C. Nelson, of Devils Lake, was the best man. After an Eastern trop Mr. and Mrs. Hughes will be at home Sept. 1, at 405 West Third street, Miss Merrill, of North street, will entertain Friday evening in honor of Thomas Prescott, of Phoenix, Ariz.

CLUBS AND CHARITIES.

A benefit lawn social will be given tomorrow evening at 665 Otsego street. There will be good music.

An ice cream social will be given by Union City Division No. 274, C. I. A., of the B. L. E., at the residence of T. J. Conway, 223 Pennsylvania avenue. The Industrial Society of Acker Corps No. 7 will meet tomorrow afternoon with Mrs. C. H. Schultz, of Charles street.

PERSONAL.

Miss Wallace, of Fairmount avenue is visiting in Montreal. Mrs. C. P. Nash, of Goodrich avenue is visiting in Buffalo, N. Y. Judge and Mrs. Grier M. Orr are ending a fortnight at Detroit Lake. Mrs. S. F. Fullerton, of Laurel ave-

Mrs. C. J. Shanley, of the Willard,

HAND SAPOLIO

FOR TOILET AND BATH

It makes the toilet something to be enjoyed. It removes all stains and roughness, prevents prickly heat and chafing, and leaves the skin white, soft, healthy. In the bath it brings a glow and exhilaration which no common soap can equal, imparting the vigor and life sensation of a mild Turkish both ALL GROCERS AND DRUGGISTS.

will leave this week for a trip of the

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Lanpher, of Sum mit avenue, have returned from Lake Pulaski. Miss Grace B. Whitridge, of Hague avenue, is spending the summer in New York. Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Stringer, of Ashland avenue, have gone East for a short visit.

Mrs. C. J. McConville, of Arundel street, has gone to Prior lake for a month's stay.

Miss J. C. Gauthier, of Goodrich avenue, who is visiting in the East, will return this week.

heir physicians to seek rest

Her "Morning Jewels."

Every whim of Mrs. Edward J. Ber-light. Mrs. Berwind says that a daz-zling gem defies the sun, and fortunately she has the means of gratifying her jewel scheme. Pearls and tur-quoises come under the head of daylight gems, At the Casino Mrs. Ber-wind wore the nucleus of her collec-tion. It is a turquoise "lalique." This is a complicated bit of jewel work that is suspended from the neck and hangs down on the bust. It is held in place with chains, and Mrs. Berwind's center turquoise is a wonderful gem. It is the true turquoise blue, the color of the sky and without the greenish tinge. It was mined in the Austrian deposits. The chains that hold the central turquoise in place are studded with tiny blue stones. Mrs. Berwind wears this "lalique" with either a blue or white frock, and a rope of finely cut amethysts is shown when she appears

The term "lalique" is derived from a famous goldsmith of the Louis XIV.

reign. His name was Jean Lalique and he was the court jeweler. He in-vented the jewel that hangs in place, and after this creation he set a single pear-shaped pearl on a chain that hung from out of the collar. This pearl was presented to Louise de le Valliere, the favorite of the king, and was named in her honor. Hence the "laval-liere," a style that had an unprecedented run a few years ago. The few jew-els now in existence that were made by the master hand of Lalique are worth

Bargains Are Numerous.

The counters of the big dry goods stores teem with bargains these days but serious thought and good judgment should be exercised before the woman with little money appropriates them. One very sensible woman sums up the good sense of bargain buying up the good sense of bargain buying in this way: "Bargain sales are the poor woman's sartorial salvation. But let her buy deliberately.

"Let her plan out a clothing campaign early in the season, decide how many gowns she needs, and what kind they must be Let her decide on their they must be. Let her decide on their color if she have hats or accessories from a past season that must go with them. Or if she is unlimited in the choice of color after the gowns are purchased, let her decide as deliberate-in purple tints.

Alice Roosevelt's Portrait.

Central Park west entertained Miss Alice Roosevelt one day a week ago, unknown to all its dwellers save one. The president's daughter rushed out of a cab and into the apartment house at No. 465. She was to sit for a portrait and the artist was Miss Zoe Fleming Dunlap. The picture is to be a miniature on ivory. Through friends Miss Dunlap received the commission—one of great value to an artist. Miss Roosevelt's shoulders will be at the commission of the commission of the commission of all hues and are perfectly lovely in texture and woven design.

GLEANING:

Author and more worn, especially at the resorts.

White mitts are popular with white gowns, and ahe shown in exquisitely woven silk, the designs being lacey on the back of the hand, while the long wrists—suitable for elbow sleeves—are plain, but sheer and lustrous.

The black mitts are popular with white gowns, and ahe shown in exquisitely woven silk, the designs being lacey on the back of the hand, while the long wrists—suitable for elbow sleeves—are plain, but sheer and lustrous.

The black mitts are popular with white gowns, and are shown in exquisitely woven silk, the designs being lacey on the back of the long wrists—author of all hues and are perfectly lovely in texture and woven design.

ly the kind of hat that will be appropriate.

The sargains she wast will defend the waiting game. The bargains she wasts will come. There is no doubt about that The trouble is women lose their heads are cheap they practically go and buy everything. But the bargain bought burriedly and thoughtlessly is arranged to the wasterobe. It you want to get the property of much use. It is the black sheep of the wasterobe. It you want to get the best value out of your bed credible reported by the property of much use. It is the black sheep of the wasterobe. It you want to get the property of much use. It is the black sheep of the wasterobe. It you want to get the property of much use. It is the black sheep of the wasterobe. It you want to get the property of much use. It is the black sheep of the wasterobe. It you want to get the property of much use. It is the black sheep of the wasterobe. It you want to get the property of much use. It is the black sheep of the wasterobe. It you want to get the property of much use. It is the black sheep of the wasterobe. It you want to get the property of much use. It is the black sheep of the wasterobe. It you want to get the property of much use. It is the black sheep of the wasterobe. It you want to get the property of much use. It is the black sheep of the waster sheep of the

"To know 300 delightful people and to be able to seat only thirty leads to the most bewildering complications," says a hostess. "You are confronted on every staircase and at every dinner table with the people you haven't been able to ask. Women brush past you with barely a nod, and nice boys look at you with reproachful eyes, not that they want to come to your party particularly, and ten to one they would be engaged five deep if you sent them an invitation, but that, strangely enough, no one likes to be left out of any party, so I have slunk about shamefaced all this week, hiding behind doors, slipping so I have slunk about shamefaced all this week, hiding behind doors, slipping away early, and behaving generally like a criminal who is pursued by de-tectives—and all because I know 300 charming people and can seat only thirty."

The fancy of names is a pretty one, but a little confusing at times to the uninitiated. A dear old body, whose suburban home is filled with these companions, somewhat startled a guest the other day by saying to her maid: "Be sure to water Mr. Jenkins, I noticed this morning he was almost dusty for want of it. And Cousin Sarah there needs new tacking and stakes. Her tendrils will be catching in the window frame next. While you're about it, too, you might as well give of the classroom, who will be mischievable of the classroom, as one one to tend to after school, as ous despite protestations and commands, grow warm with love toward the miss whose duty it is to act as the line work of the lines. Then we can see each other often." The fancy of naming plants for their

Remove fruit stains by wetting them with alcohol or pouring boiling water hrough them.

To remove a wine stain sprinkle salt on the spot and pouring boiling water through it until the stain disappears.

move mildew from white cotton rub the stain with lemon juice and place in the sunshine. It is a simple and old-time remedy that will not fail you.

For very yellow or very dirty clothes make an emulsion of kerosene, clear lime water and turpentine in equal parts. Shake together until creamy, then add a cupful to every boilerful of clothes and boil for half an hour.

In making soup, slow cooking ex-tracts the flavor and the water should not be salted until near the end of the process. In cooking bones and joints, however, a high temperature renders the gelatin soluble and salt should be

Naphtha is recommended by a won an who has tried it as a satisfactory cleanser of light fur. The naphtha was poured over the fur and the boa fluffed and patted until the soil was worked out. The naphtha is then pressed out by drawing the hand firmly over boa shaken and hung in the air to

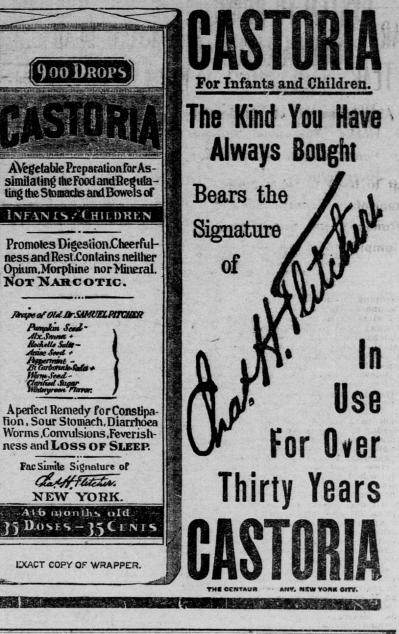

A simple and excellent filling for cake, especially one which has been baked several days, is called soft co-coanut. Pour boiling milk over a half pound box of dessicated cocoanut until it is very soft. Spread between and on top of a cake. This should be eaten inside of three days, especially in warm weather.

To make a good paste for scrap books take half a teaspoonful of starch, same of flour, pour on a little boiling water, let it stand a minute, add more water, let it stand a minute, and more water, stir and cook it until it is thick enough to starch a shirt bosom. It spreads smooth, sticks well and will not mold or discolor paper. Starch alone will not make a good paste.

Gilt frames may be revived by carefully dusting them and then washing with one ounce of soda beaten up with the whites of three eggs. Scraped patches may be touched up with diamond gold paint. Stains or discolored spots may be covered with the paint and the appearance of pictures and mirrors much improved.

A soft woolen cloth, plenty of rubbing and one tablespoonful of vinegar will make a mohogany dinner table shine like a mirror. Piano keys when in need of cleaning should be wiped off with alcohol. For sponging out bureau drawers and drawers of sideboards use tepid water containing 1 per cent solution of carbolic acid, or, if that is disliked, use a small quantity of thymo-line in the tepid water. Instead of paper, some housekeepers line such drawers with white ollcloth. If the contents of the drawers are delicate walsts or other articles likely to be injured by dust, it is a good plan to lay in the bottom of the drawers a piece of cheesecloth as wide as the drawer, but twice as long, so that it can be folded over the top of things in the Stiff linen collars, embroidered over in Dresden sprays, or powdered with fleur-de-lis, French knots or other popular designs, are much worn. The embroidery is in white, or in light blue, pink and green or in black. They launder well, and are just the thing for a shirtwaist dress, with the small turnover cuffs that go with them.

there needs new tacking and stakes. Her tendrils will be catching in the window frame next. While you're about it, too, you might as well give Grandmother some fresh earth and spade up the Canadas, the new shoots are looking a little puny." A new maid has all these various companions to learn by name, and for some of them it appears to be an insurmountable task. Then Grandmother gets what Mr. Jenkins is pining for, and Cousin Sarah goes into a decline because Sister Mary's dose is doled out to her. But the fanciful old possessor of these companions refuses to designate them by any other names nevertheless.

Quart boxes of strawberries are to be found at the candy counters and very like the real berries do these bits of confectioner's art look.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.

Remove fruit stains by wetting them

Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.
Schoolm'ams are just as susceptible to kindness and love as ordinary people. When the little budding hearts of the classroom, who will be mischieved out despite protestations and commands, grow warm with love toward the miss whose duty it is to act as the target, as well as the instructor, in the tacching of the young idea how to shoot, it somehow takes seed in her own heart—if the heart offers the ground for the rightful planting—and the flower and the fruit is beautiful. The sweetness of the blossom is given back ever so quietly and unconsciously, but there is an invariable reward for its return. There is more love and more kindness for the branch that bears the flowers, and soon all is radiant with happiness.

Miss Jennie Williams, teacher in charge of the Third ward school at Merton, knew the secret well, and her heart was a good place for the planting. Though the school had heretofore held a name which carried hesitancy to the minds of many a schoolma'am who had

Though the school had heretofore held a name which carried hesitancy to the minds of many a schoolma'am who had applied for the place, Miss Williams was most successful in her work. Happy and really jolly at all times, there was no loss of dignity for her.

Then, when another bit of a seed took root in her bosom, and when several lads in the village saw their hopes—we call such things "hopes," always lighten you further—better, perhaps. -we call such things "hopes," always we can such things hopes, always—benumbed by the arrival of the young railway man from the city, no one dared to begrudge him his good fortune. In fact, everybody wished him well. Such is not always a result in such affairs.

Everyone liked William Masterson, superintendent of the southern division of the B. & B. To hear the words "superintendent of the division" once inspired the villagers to conjure up visions of a merciless creature, with several idle dollars ceaselessly jingled in his pockets by an oppressive right hand.

That was before they knew Even when the Mertonites found out that Billy was the real enough son of the president of the road, they were merely surprised; their interest grew to the fact that one can be the son of a railway president—the head of a "heartless corporation"—without being Contrawise to the situation at Mercontrawise to the situation at Merton, some one in the city found out and that started all the trouble.

One evening the father and the son stood face to face in the Mastersou house, both flushed with wounded pride and anger What strange things love will bring about! Billy was very short and decisive "All right, sir," he said, "I'll go. The whole road can't buy my heart! Suppose she is 'only a little schoolma'am' as you say, she is a woman dearer to me than any of the dolls who prance me than any of the dons who pranta about in your drawing rooms!"

After delivering this rather ultra-democratic speech, Billy Masterson wrote and delivered his resignation from services on the B. & B.

He was on the Southern, going toward Merton, the next afternoon, ward Merton, the next afternoon.

"Why, Mr. Masterson!" exclaimed Old Jim, the conductor, surprised when Billy offered him a regular paid ticket.
"It's all right, Jim," Billy answered.
"Tye quit the road." Then he leaned back in his seat and wondered what she would say.

There was a long silence in the when Billy finally told her—"my little schoolma'am," he called her. She spoke first,

"Please, Billy, go back," she pleaded.
"Why should you leave—"
Billy drew the pretty head close to his shoulder and held it there snugly and ever so long. Only a sob, and then another lost itself in the stillness all

"You foolish, dear boy," came a muf-fled voice from near the shoulder of the man.

"No, dear, I'm not going back," he

"No, dear, I'm not going back," he said.

When the pleadings of those loved best fail, it is best to stop pleading—when the sweet little mouth is hidden and the cheek is softly pressed to another cheek. Jennie pleaded no more—not then.

A week later Billy had a postton on one of the great newspapers in the city and was hustling about daily in search of the evasive news item. And all the time there grew in Billy's heart sometime there grew in Billy's heart some-thing that cut and caused a deep yearn-ing. He worked every day except Sun-

ing. He worked every day except Sundays, and on Sundays there was no train in or out of Merton.

The little schoolma'am suffered, too. To be sure, every few days one of her little tots brought an envelope, the contents of which, according to the various pupils, caused Jennie to become quite rosy and ever so much more pretty Even little schoolma'ams—but that is immaterial.

immaterial. 'Oh!' she cried out one afternoon in

No sooner had Billy received word of the secret plotting, than he straight-way proceeded to work on the lines suggested. So did the little school-ma'am. She was successful—the branch was bearing new buds and the buds were opening. buds were opening.

The president of the B. & B. was much agitated. Alone in his private office, he read and reread a number of clippings from newspapers, both country and city productions. By and by five directors of the road filed into the committee room and he followed, with clippings in hand.

"Gentlemen," he began, vainly trying to appear comfortable and quiet, "you doubtless have considered the agitation for a new Sunday train on the southern division as much as I have. You know if we do not put on the new train the people along the division will secure a continuance of the spur ownlighten you further-better, perhaps than could one of teh men whom I have sent out to investigate. Your consideration is therefore required at once. In ten minutes the announcement was made that the B. & B. had granted demands for a Sunday train on the southern division, "in accordance with the road's spirit of meeting popular demand and convenience."

The reports at the close of the month showed that the new train would never pay. One Sunday evening, as the cars sped rapidly toward the city, Billy was quite amused to hear old Jim say:

"Figure 16 it don't pay the convenient."

"Even if it don't pay, the company can't take it off." Then he chided himself for his amusement over the affair, and, making himself as comfort-able as possible in the plush seat, mused and smiled until the train pulled into the metropolis. laughed out loud. His thoughts played among the remembrances of the day with his little schoolma'am.

President Masterson, for once with a minute to spare, strode quietly from his private room into the waiting of-fice, where his stenographers spent a great deal of time each day trying to convince people that the president was too busy to see them right way. He stopped as the merry laughter of the two girls behind the tall desks came to his ears, and looked wonderingly toward the polished backs of the office furniture. furniture. The girls kept up their merriment, little knowing of the danger merriment, little knowing of the danger in which they were, "Billy played a great trick on the company, did you hear about it?" ask-ed one of the girls. The president of the B. and B. became very much inter-the B. and B. became very much interested now and waited for more.

"No; tell me about it, do," eagerly insisted the other young woman, without having been denied.

"You know about that schoolma'am he lost his place over?" said the other.

"Well, Billy works now and could not get off Sundays to see her. There was no train. So the two started the whole community into a furore for a Sunday. no train. So the two started the whole community into a furore for a Sunday train, she doing her missionary work in great style. All the papers picked it up and helped circulate petitions. They and helped circulate petitions. They got their train—and the train doesn't

'Who told-" President Masterson now stepped across the room and looking fiercely over the desk tops at the two aston-ished girls, cut their laughter short by

"Is that true?"
"Why, yes, sir," one of the girls hastened to explain. A second thought caused her to add: "Well, that is

"Take this letter, please," Mr. Mas-terson smiled as he said this and the girls could not satisfy themselves as to what was coming next.

"My dear son," he dictated rapidly.

"I beg you to accept the superintendency of the Southern. The prospective Mrs. Superintendent will also report at my house as soon as convenient.

"Henry Mestarson."

"You need not make a copy of that,"

Hollow Mockery.

"So you are going to take a vacation

"So you are going trip?"
"Yes," answered the weary statesman.
"I suppose you have your fishing tackle and golf outfit all ready?"
"No. But I have prepared most of my speeches, and am now going through a special course of gymnastics to fortify me for the handshaking."—Washington Star.

This pretty shirt waist is of pale blue batiste, yoke and upper steeves finely tucked, and irregular medallions of cream lace let in. The wide bell of the sleeves is edged with the same lace. It fastens with a button fly in front, the two deep tucks being trimmed with pearl buttons. The back is treated with tucks and lace, and just lace forms the low collar.

far from profuse. There is some magnetic about Miss Roosevelt. comes the driving hour, a visit to the golf club, then a reception and dinner feel a certain subdued strength." at night. The strain is great and is particularly noticeable upon the wan faces of many of the debutantes. Sev-Women Farm in the East. That women are now prominent as farmers is largely illustrated in aleral of the latter have been advised by most every state of the Union.

In New England the fact is uniquely Many self-supporting women have wind is gratified, and why not? Her husband made six millions in coal. In New York the Berwinds are running purchased old and neglected farms lo-cated in these Eastern states and are improving them and adapting them to the Pembroke Joneses and the Morti-mer Brookses a close race for un-bridled extravagance. The Berwinds profitable industries.

Many of these landed proprietors do not live on their farms the year round. They remain in the city during the winter busy at their various vocations.

sunk many thousands in the mere ar-ranging of their garden, and their town house abounds with luxuries that They leave their farms under the management of caretakers who either share in the profits or give their servfew persons care to spend money for. Everything—their linens, their table-ware and their tapestries—is made ices on the usual basis of regular especially for them. Their chinaware was made in the pottery at Limoges, and Mrs. Berwind conferred with the A woman who engages in busines in New York a part of the year, and lives on her farm in Vermont all sum-mer, says that last year "the profits of superintendent and selected a design. For this little privilege the Berwinds butter and eggs and turkeys and chick-Now Mrs. Berwind is collecting what she calls "morning jewels." These are opaque gems that look better by dayens delivered in the city" counted up

There were other profits—the bulk of them much more than covered the expenses.

Business for Girls.

No girls in this age of the world should be permitted to attain the age of womanhood without having obtained a thorough acquaintance with the methods in vogue in the business world. It makes no difference what their social or financial standing may be, all members of the sex need a fundamental business training. To make expenses and receipts harmonize ought to be a part of every girl's edu-cation, and she should be grounded in rdinary business customs and usages t makes little difference whether one is earning her living or simply attending to household affairs and accounts, business will not run itself and no great measure of success can be obtained apart from rightly regulated economy.

As We See Others.

Plenty of us do not realize that verything we do or say or believe has a certain influence on other folk. A a certain influence on other folk. A young girl who admires some older woman will often make of herself a nice little carbon copy, talking and thinking according to her ideal. Little children are usually what their parents make them. As is the mother, so is the child. A baby brought up in an atmosphere of stunted mentality is seldom bright. The child who hears sane conversation is building up in its sane conversation is building up infant brain the likes, dislikes perfections or blemishes of a whole life All of us are influenced; all of us se ut influences. The woman who walks lown the street with her shirt waist spick and span, her hair done neatly, her shoes clean and polished and her belt all tidylike is an influence for belt all tidylike is an innuence for good. There's no telling how many frumpy, unneat, shabbily feminine mortals take the hint to themselves and start in on a little process of improvement. The Neat Salvation Maid.

Every observing person in the car saw the Salvation Army maid. She was different from the average "halle-luiah" damsel. She was neat as a new Miss Lucile Davis, of Fairmount avenue, will return to their homes Friday.

Debutantes Have Wan Faces.

NEW YORK, July 28.—The strenuous life at Newport is affecting the health of the young women, and a halth has been called by the parents or guardians. Long before the dew is girls assemble to play tennis and patronize the squash courts. The players, mostly women, play until lunch. Then comes the driving hour, a visit to the golf club, then a reception and dinner.

"Twice a year, on April 23 and Oct. 26," writes a young Bulgarian woman living in Sofia, "our streets are full of servants, and people bargain with them for service. During the winter season they are very cheap, as the peasants send all their girls to the city to be send all their girls to the city to be hired, they having no work for them at home. The price paid differs; one can get a girl for her board, or pay up to 20 lusor ($4) a month for one who get a girl for her board, or pay up to 20 lusor ($4) a month for one who cooks, washes and irons. Girls are often thankful to enter a good family for their board. For the men there is very little work, and the papers are full of suicides on account, during the dull seasons, of starvation."

A successful young woman has discovered that men only eschew after-noon teas when there is danger of any one of them finding himself the single black coat in a sea of pink muslin, "derelicts on an ocean of chiffon." But "buff waistcoat indubitably attracts buff waistcoat," continues this discoverer, "and five young men to one young woman is about the proper proportion for a successful 'high tea' mixture. They enjoy the beverage when well made, and are delighted to meet each other. other. Their supposed aversion to these frivolous functions has arisen solely from the fact that they were rarely confident of meeting there more than one of their kind." Galalith is the name of a new tance made from skimmed milk by treating the casein with metallic salts and soaps and finally, with formalde-hyde. It is as hard as celluloid, takes a fine polish, is odorless and is less inflammable than the guncotton and camphor combination. At the recent hygienic milk supply exposition, in Hamburg, there were shown toilet arti-cles, chess figures and even tables made of the new substance. These had the appearance of marble, as galalith takes kindly to various coloring processes, but were far lighter in weight. As an article of commerce it is destined, so its sponsers believe, to become widely used and correspond-ingly reasonable in cost;

A bird garden is rather a novel idea, but one which, if faithfully exploited, will prove as real a delight as any garden of blossoms. An enthusiast on the subject has set apart a spot of per-haps an acre's extent as forbidden haps an acre's extent as forbidden ground for cats and small boys, and the birds have become very tame. Bermuda grass, whose matted tangles are a harbor for bugs and worms, covers the ground. Hydrants are left dripping, where the many kinds of feathered folk that this garden has attracted may drink and bathe to their hearts content. There is an abundance of seeds and fruit, which mature at different seasons, and old logs under which congregate the fat grubs that are a bird's delight. If these natural stores seem to run short at any time. stores seem to run short at any time, sunflower seed and crisp lettuce hearts are spread on a stand called the "birds' banquet board," that none may want. Strings, threads and fluffy cotton are strewn about for nesting time, and as many as twenty different species have been counted building or rearing their young at one time. Thirty-four varieties frequent this Garden of Eden, and their sweet notes and bright plumage make it as charming as any conserva-tory of rare blossoms.

"The Siamese are a very supersti-