GERMAN SOCIETIES PARADE IN HONOR OF THE CARNIVAL

Demonstration Is Unexcelled by Any That Has Been Made—Children Own the Carnival in Afternoon—Drawing for the Pony Attracts Little Ones.

Between the German societies and school children yesterday became one of the memorable periods in the history of the carnival. The afternoon was given over to the little folk, and they took complete possession and dominated the entire place. Everything was arranged with reference to them, and they infused new life into the game and gave their elders a few hints on how to have fun out of a carnival. The German societies had their turn in the evening, and opened their program with a parade that was one of the finest of the entire carnival season thus far. This parade was distinctive in its character, and to a person viewing it without previous knowledge of its constituency, the fact must have been plainly apparent that it was a turn-out of German societies. And as such it was a credit to the city and to the nationality in whose name it was conducted.

GERMANS PARADE

The formation of the parade has already been published in complete form in The Globe, but from that alone no idea could be obtained of the many details which contributed to make it one of the most pleasing spectacles presented in the course of the carnival. As a whole, and throughout its entire length, the parade expressed the consonance of the German and American nations.

In the lead rode the customary platoon of mounted police, and immediately following the first band, was borne the American flag, with a guard of honor consisting of the German-American Veterans' association.

Further along the line came the German flag, carried by thirty young women, half of whom wore shoulder sashes of the German colors, while the others were similarly decorated with the red, white and blue. All wore liberty caps to match their other decorations.

Preceding and accompanying the young women were a number of boys carrying Japanese lanterns. Lodge and society flags and banners adorned throughout the entire line of parade, and their contrasting colors added greatly to the attractiveness of the spectacle.

Two handsome and elaborate tableau floats were features of the parade that won admiration. On one of these was presented Germania and Columbia and banners printed in German expressed the friendly feeling which the picture was intended to typify.

The other float accompanied Schiller, Dicks and was a symbolical of that order and the principles upon which it is founded. The car was drawn by eight horses with armored postillions and armored riders, and on the stage was a group of Druids garbed in white gowns and cowls assembled about a camp fire amidst forest surroundings.

It is estimated that there were between 2,500 and 3,000 men in line, representing all of the principal German societies of the city and many visiting organizations. Col. A. R. Kiefer was chief marshal and his aids were Louis F. Schulz, Henry Bueger, W. J. Radbruch and A. Obst.

SCHOOL CHILDREN VISIT CARNIVAL

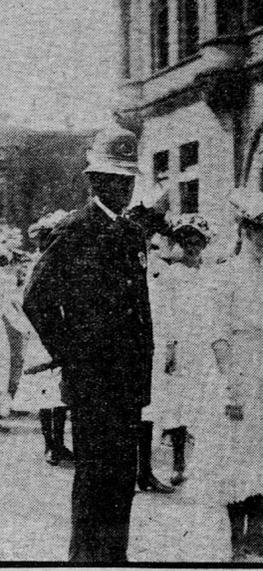

The afternoon parade, participated in by the school children of the city, was one of the features of the summer carnival. The children assembled at Rice park in the afternoon, and promptly at 1:30 p. m. the parade started on its way, including, as it did, a platoon of mounted police, the Great Western band, and the thousands of small children, who marched in a manner which was wonderful.

It is estimated that 3,000 children were in line, about equally divided between boys and girls. Marching through the streets four and five abreast, each holding the other's hand, the children presented a spectacle which all who witnessed the parade were proud of.

Aside from the thousands of little ones who marched with a precision which would have done credit to much older persons, the features of the parade were the decorated little wagon, drawn by a small goat, the wagon being occupied by a little girl dressed in white, and the pony, which was given as a prize, and which was ridden by Warren Lemmon, attired in a gay jockey costume.

At the grounds the children were all admitted free of charge and the carnival was theirs during the afternoon, everything being free to them, including the midway and all of the shows.

THEY GROW UP THE MIDDAY

It was worth the price of admission to all the shows every day for two weeks to see those children swarm over the midway. They broke ranks the instant they passed through the final gate, and scattered in all directions. They rushed pell-mell here, there and everywhere—and took complete possession of the grounds.

As they passed through the first gate, at Ninth and Cedar, every pupil was handed a ticket entitling him or her to a chance on the Shetland pony, which was so conspicuous in the parade.

The drawing for the pony took place on the platform adjacent to the grand stand in the midway.

In a position of prominence on the platform stood the pony, saddled and bridled, ready to be ridden away by the boy or girl who might hold the winning ticket.

The handsome little animal was much admired, and to the adult comprehension there was something distinctly pathetic in the scene, for in the wave of excited anticipation that passed over the throng of little ones could be foreseen the ebb tide of disappointment which must inevitably follow when it became the turn of one child, and only one, of all that number had won the coveted prize.

The drawing was in itself a pleasing and interesting spectacle, for the winning number was selected from among all the rest by a little bird, and these could be no possibility of favoritism. The numbers corresponding to the coupon tickets held by the children were all placed in a large box on the platform, and then Mrs. Coryell, who owns the fortune-telling parakeets that perform on the main street, held one of the birds on a rod just above the box. The bird picked up one of the folded tickets daintily in its bill, and when it was opened it was found to bear the number 742.

This was announced as the winning number, and after a brief hush, during which the dropping of a pin would have been plainly audible, a small boy stepped forward upon the platform so thoroughly under the influence of excitement at his good fortune that he stood rigid and speechless for some minutes.

Earl Hansen Wins Pony. Then it was learned that he was Earl Hansen, the son of Mrs. Bertha M. Hansen, of 1063 Pacific street. Earl assumed possession of his pony, and a majority of the other children crowded around to feast their eyes upon the prize that might have been theirs; but here and there in the background was one whose disappointment was too great to be borne in silence, and who could not refrain from tears. The father of one broken-hearted boy, was so stirred by sympathy for his son that he made Earl an offer of $100 on the spot for the pony, but immediately came a hubbub of advice from the other boys to the young owner.

"Nix," "Not in thirty years," "Don't you do it!" shouted they, and with the air of one to whom $100 is no object at all, Earl declined the offer.

Nearly 5,000 checks were given out to children, and as it is known that a number that were on the grounds did not receive any checks, it is estimated that there were nearly 6,000 children in attendance.

WOMEN AND TRAMPS MANY WEARY MILES TO REACH HIS HOME

Tiring of Discipline of State School at Owatonna, Little John Giroux Escapes—He Reaches Home in Little Canada Where He Is Welcomed.

Having been sent with his four younger brothers and sisters to the state school at Owatonna, and being dissatisfied with the treatment he received at that institution, John Giroux, eleven years old, left there quietly one night two weeks ago and made his way on foot to his home at Little Canada, a suburb of St. Paul, north of the city.

Last Friday morning, shortly after dawn, the little lad, footsore and weary, appeared at the village and went to the home of a friend, his own home being a few miles further up the road.

He told his friends of how he had walked the entire distance from Owatonna, sleeping at night in barns, haystacks and by the roadside when no shelter was in sight.

In traveling towards St. Paul he got on a road leading to Minneapolis, and reached that city first. He completed his journey by traveling from Minneapolis to St. Paul, and then out the Mississippi street road to Little Canada. Having refreshed himself with food at the home of his friend, he made his way to his father's house, where he was given a hearty welcome.

One year ago the wife of Pierre Giroux died, leaving with him a family of children, the little lad, ten years old. They were John, Joe, Aurora, Ruth and Lavina, the youngest being two years old.

With the limited means for education afforded by Little Canada their father feared that he could not give them the advantages he wished them to have. Therefore, one month ago all five of the children were sent to the state school.

John said that he could not endure the discipline imposed upon him at the school, and that he would try to return to his home.

When the boy disappeared the authorities at the school notified the St. Paul authorities. He has not yet been recommitted.

DEALERS WARNED TO OBEY BUDD LAW

No Coloring Matter Will Be Permissible in New Stock.

Under the provisions of the Budd law, which became effective July 1, the state dairy and food department will take steps at once to put a stop to the use of coloring matter in cat-sups, but we will go ahead until we are otherwise informed. Pennsylvania has adopted the same course, and Ohio is preparing to do so. The law may be more promptly enforced now without hardship to dealers than at almost any time for years, because there is so little catsup in the market. This is due to the fact that last season was very unfavorable to the market for catsup as a commodity, and there was but little of it turned out. Catsup is a food product that is not used in quantities, and we feel that in granting this respite to the dealers we are doing no harm to the consumers.

The department has issued the following circular to dealers in catsup: "Owing to the fact that the season when you place your orders for catsup is fast approaching, and to reply to the many inquiries now being received, the department deems it proper to advise you that it will pass all catsups now in the hands of jobbers and retailers in this state, which do not contain any deleterious or harmful ingredient, from this date until July 1, 1904. We earnestly request that all catsups of this year's manufacture, placed upon the market, bear upon the label the figures 1903, and shall be free from coloring matter, but until it may be established that benzoate of soda is harmful, a limited quantity (not exceeding one part in twelve hundred parts) will be permitted, if at any time facts be proven harmful, then we reserve the right to withdraw permission of its use. Please to fully understand that the use of no preservative other than benzoate of soda will be permitted, and that only under the conditions and restrictions herein stated."

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS.

"Get something the people need. Then let the people know you've got it." That is the plain-talk prescription for business success given by Mr. H. L. Kramer, the famous creator and advertiser of Cascarets, Candy Cathartic, which in a few years have developed a sale of a million boxes a month. Every reader of this newspaper knows that the manufacturers of Cascarets have persistently used newspaper advertising to "let the people know" that the medicine was available. Kramer "got something the people needed." It is a great object lesson in the school of business.

Excursionists Ground on Pig's Eye.

The sterner Cyclone, on board of which were 300 people attending an excursion given by the First Methodist Danish Methodist church, was stuck on a sandbar at Pig's Eye last night for two hours. The steamer could not get off until nearly 12 o'clock, and when it arrived at the wharf the excursionists were obliged to remain another hour till the heavy rain stopped.

Views of White Earth Agency Taken Thirty Years Ago.

Rev. J. A. Gillilan, who was for twenty-five years engaged in missionary work on the White Earth Indian reservation, but is now living at Washington, D. C., called yesterday at the library of the State Historical society and left with Secretary Upham a large collection of photographs taken thirty years ago at the White Earth reservation.

In these photographs are shown the agency and school buildings and the officials of that time and a number of the Indians. They are merely loaned to the society for a time, but some of them will be copied, that they may be placed in the collection of the society.
