Mrs. Lusaeker, of St. Paul, spent Sunday with her daughter, Mrs. Ben Zimmer.

The presence of some charming visitors in St. Paul during the week has made some gayety and been the occasion of several informal affairs. In fact it has been quite impossible to keep track of the many informal luncheons, porch parties and thimble bees which have been gotten up quickly to speed some departing guests or welcome some passing visitors. At this time of year we are quite in the habit of saying that every one who is any one is away, and though there are so many well-known people out of town, there are, too, many well-known ones in town, and this accentuates the fact that we are coming slowly to realize that St. Paul is getting to be a large city. Socially the lines are broadening in one way, and tightening in another, as there are few houses large enough these days to entertain all of society at once, and the result has been the increasing number of societies, sets and cliques. Indeed a woman who has not been here long, but has been well received, declared recently that St. Paul is the cliquiest place she has ever seen.

St. Paul society will remember Mrs. William T. Maxfield, formerly well known and much liked in this city, now no longer living here, and will be interested in a paragraph which appeared in the New York Herald last week concerning her. Mrs. Maxfield was a Gibson of Kentucky, one of the most prominent and exclusive of the old Southern families, and she now makes her home at her old home, but spends much time in Washington, where she is almost equally well known. The reference made to her by the Herald was in an article describing the beautiful old family home in Kentucky, of which not the least famous is the Gibson place. The reference is as follows: "Elmsdale and Shadyside are the names of the homes of Messrs. Howard and Richard Gibson, who own adjacent farms near Lexington. Both of these places are old-fashioned mansions. One is a typical Southern porch, with a plain red brick house back of it; the other is a Gothic structure, most suggestive of a Norman church. Only the best of horses are in the stables. "At Elmsdale lives Mrs. Louisa Maxfield (nee Gibson), whose room is a fashionable New York hotel, but who robed last year when she came North to see some of her favorites, and who has the reputation of being herself the most famous cross-country rider in Kentucky. "Like all the other native breeders of horses, the Gibsons—father, sons and daughters—are always in the saddle. There is a picture of Mrs. Maxfield on her horse accompanying the article, which is unfortunately so poorly printed as to be well nigh unrecognizable."

The fiancée of Mr. Frederick Bigelow, Mrs. F. W. Canada, having been in town for a week, there have been several small affairs given for her by her relatives—to be Mrs. Charles Bigelow Sr. and Mrs. Charles Bigelow Jr. each gave a luncheon in her honor and returned to Canada. Mrs. Bigelow, of Louisville, who has also been in town, and there is to be a family reconciliation, it is said. This "making up" may be the prelude to entertaining at Newport on a more lavish scale than ever.

There has been a general shaking up of the military at various posts, and in consequence much traveling on the part of the officers and their wives. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson and their family have been in town during the week just past and have been the guests of Mrs. Thompson's mother, Mrs. H. M. Rice, and with her aunt, Mrs. Auerbach. They are removing from Fort Meyer, Virginia, to Vancouver barracks. Miss Thompson has developed much artistic talent in the last few years and has taken several prizes for her work in Washington. Maj. Bingham, brother of Mr. Frank M. Bingham, of Dayton, Ohio, and wife will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Bingham for a few days on their way from Alaska. Mr. Bingham will occupy an important position.

Mrs. Lambert and Miss Anne Lambert, of Pennsylvania, formerly of this city, are now the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Peet at their White Bear cottage. Miss Katherine Richards Gordon is visiting Mrs. C. A. Severance, of Cedarhurst. Miss Gull, who has been Mrs. Bishop's guest for two weeks, leaves this week for her home at Kenosha, Wis.

Gordon, of Laurel avenue, have returned from the lake and will spend two weeks in New York and Bridgeport, Conn., before returning. of the State Federation of Women's Clubs will receive the guests. Mrs. Moore is well known, not only in her home state, but nationally. She is prominent in the National Federation of Musical Clubs and is president of the Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs.
