KIDD CRITICISES STRIKE AND LEAVES

Former President Finley Is Hissed by the Strikers-- Mills Are Running.

Thomas I. Kidd, the vice president of the American Federation of Labor, left Minneapolis carrying with him recommendations which it is hoped by the striking members of the International Union of Flour and Cereal Mill Employees will lead to support that will enable them to continue their strike and finally cause the Minneapolis flour mill proprietors to capitulate.

Mr. Kidd's visit has proved one of anxiety, rather than encouragement. He failed utterly to convince the mill owners that they had better yield to the demand that the roustabouts should be granted eight hours' work for ten hours' day.

In fact, by the time he got here the mills were running about as usual, and grinding as much flour as before the strike, so the managers concluded they would not give in to the strikers.

At the meeting of the strikers at Labor Temple yesterday afternoon Mr. Kidd criticized the way the strike had been called. He wanted to know why President John M. Finley had asked for him to come and look into the strike and then attempted to call it off before he could get on the ground.

He talked in this vein for about five minutes and withdrew without intimating just what he would recommend to the federation council at Washington.

Former President Finley attempted to reply to Mr. Kidd. But few had known of his presence since he had failed to call the strike off and had resigned.

His appearance was greeted with a storm of hisses, jeers, howls and imprecations. His voice could not be heard above the din and he departed through the crowd of angry men to the street.

The meeting adjourned without any voting, but the temper of the strikers has not changed. They will continue the strike, as it is about the only thing they can do, and comparatively few have been filled, and comparatively few would be received back by the mill owners, except as individuals.

The Washburn-Crosby company had their entire plant in operation yesterday. The advertised capacity of the Washburn-Crosby company is 25,000 barrels daily, but this amount is obtained under favorable conditions. Yesterday the company turned out 18,000 barrels, which is the highest output since the strike was declared.

The Washburn-Crosby company is disputing that the output of the mills has been as large as claimed, and one of their theories has been that the entire shipment of flour do not reach destinations as billed, but that part of it comes back to be again shipped out.

This is emphatically denied by Supt. Harding, of the Washburn-Crosby mill, and he is as good as before the strike.

The strikers are growing uglier and the men employed at the mills more cautious daily. Paul Mileck, of the Washburn-Crosby company, claims that he was stopped by a crowd of strikers' pickets who struck him and took his pass from him.

The Galaxy mill Sergeant Russell appeared in court yesterday, and was drawn a revolver, after he had been struck in the face by a striker.

GEORGE MOUTLON INDICTED.
Another Man Accused of Trying to Bribe Ald. Powers.

The first arraignment on an indictment growing out of grand jury boodle investigation was made yesterday.

George Moulton, a contractor, and a well known member of the Chamber of Commerce, is charged with offering Ald. Powers, of the Eleventh ward $800 to aid in the defeat of George S. Sublette, candidate for city engineer last January.

Mr. Moulton was given a week to plead or deny to the indictment and forthwith furnished $800 to W. W. Easton, Morris McDonald and W. B. Moulton as sureties.

The city engineer campaign was a warm one, and the defeat of Sublette was desired, it was gossiped, because Sublette was believed in brick paving, and Mr. Moulton was interested in brick paving in a business way.

Mr. Moulton called one evening and suggested that I might need about this amount to pay some old bills. He learned that I was about this sum on the campaign I made for the mayoralty. He stipulated that the money could be forthcoming if I would oppose Sublette.

It is understood that Mr. Rhodes will testify that Moulton admitted to him that he had offered Powers the money.

LUNATIC DOES DARING STUNT.
Crawls Along an Eight-Inch Ledge of a Fifth-Story Window.

A man crawling along an eight-inch ledge from one window to another on the fifth story of the Washington Hotel, fully 150 feet above ground, was a spectacle that made spectators breathless with wonder and awe.

Shrieking as if with terror, the man, clad with superhuman strength, torn the pane of the window of his cell in the insane ward.

Before he could be stopped he had stepped out on the ledge. An attendant who rushed to his aid expected to see the man's mangled remains on the stone pavement below as he looked out of the window, but instead he saw the man's feet along the narrow ledge and was just disappearing into a window of the wash room.

The lunatic's name is Joseph Brown, and he was arrested Monday night at the Washington Hotel. He was taken to Kenosha, Wis., last night, where he resides.

DUNNED FOR ANOTHER'S DEBTS.
Similarity of Names Subjects a Fireman To Great Annoyance.

To be asked to pay another man's debts and to be molested by another man's creditors with all sorts of impertinent questions, is unpleasant, to say the least. Timothy McInerney, a fireman at the Cataract engine house, has been annoyed to such an extent by the similarity of names of the United States marshal.

Timothy McInerney, living in the same part of town as the marshal, is bankrupt and the case was adjudicated in bankruptcy as the creditors were notified they had to pay the debts of the bankrupt. The fireman has shown scorn and contempt for the hapless fireman ever since, while Timothy McInerney, who enjoys comparative comfort. No law will ever shield a fireman, and he was advised to cultivate angelic patience.

SAY JAIL BREAK WAS A JOKE.
Two Employes Are Charged, and May Be Released.

Further investigation of the supposed jail break at the county jail, which attempt to break out of the county jail by desperate prisoners is said to have developed that the break for liberty was only a practical joke.

The court house electrician and jail cook were the comedians. They climbed to the fifth floor of the building and pounded on the door leading to the corridor of the jail.

When they were followed by Assistant Jailer Brown they ran. He promptly turned in an emergency call without waiting to count noses in the cells. Jailer Dreger fails to see the joke and the humorists may lose their places.

WIFE DOES DETECTIVE WORK.
She Discloses Her Husband's Infidelity and Secures Divorce.

In the divorce court yesterday it developed that a wife had executed a rather neat piece of detective work which disclosed the unfaithfulness of her husband. She is Anna J. Bengten, and she discovered her husband's infidelity by receiving mail at a private box at the post office. In some way she secured a duplicate of the letters and she got hold of letters from the other woman. She opened the letters, then revealed them and returned them to the box, and thus fully posted herself upon the correspondence, which was of an ardent nature. This she laid before the court. Her husband did not resist the action, and the court ordered a limited divorce, alimony of $50 a month and the custody of their children.

LAID IN CHARACTER

Special Agent Recommends Withdrawal of Montana Tracts From Entry.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 13.—The special agent Chadwick, of the general land office, has filed a report with the commissioner recommending the withdrawal of the land of the Great Falls (Mont.) land office, which is under the desert land laws. He says that the land is not desert in character and that the settlers secure abundant crops of hay and grain without irrigation. Notwithstanding this fact, he says, many entries of land under the desert land law have been made.

"How," he says, "the entrymen could have made reply to the question as to whether the land required irrigation I do not know. Many tracts have been entered as desert which are of excellent farming and grazing land character. Neither is the letter nor the spirit of the desert land law complied with. To get title seems to be the only desire of the settlers."

There are many streams in the neighborhood, and in order to comply with the law witnesses were called in after a snowstorm, and standing water standing in furrows, which had been plowed for the purpose they were able to say they had seen "water on the land." The order of withdrawal was made upon the strength of the report and calls for a closer inspection of the proof in question arising in the districts where entries have already been made.
