

FRENCH RIOTERS BURN AND DESTROY Mob of Striking Weavers Control Town of Armentieres for Several Hours.

ARMENTIERES, North France, Oct. 13.—This town was today given up to riot, pillage and incendiarism as a consequence of the weavers' strike.

The rioters then spread through the principal streets, breaking the windows of the stores, dragging out the huge display rolls of linen, which they stretched across the streets with the object of impeding the advance of cavalry.

One gang set fire to a large quantity of linen in the cellars of Messrs. Bequaerts' factory, others broke the windows of houses and threw inside burning straw.

After dark the rioters tore up the sewer gratings and paving stones and stretched wires across the streets. Women brought piles of empty bottles for use as missiles, while boys swarmed up the lamp posts and extinguished the gas jets.

The local brigade being inadequate to cope with the confagurations, an urgent appeal was sent to the neighboring town of Lille, whence a steam pump and reinforcements of firemen were sent.

By midnight, however, the troops and police had gained the upper hand and dispersed the mob. The streets are now deserted, except for the armed patrols. The authorities are taking measures to ascertain the names of the ringleaders in the riots.

"Why he did I cannot tell," said Miss Berggren yesterday, with tears in her eyes. "Oh, Jim!" she sighed to herself, forgetting the presence of a stranger, "how could you be so cruel!"

The last time she saw him, she said, "was before I went to the operating room, and he promised to come up and see me twice every day. But he did not come. I thought that he could not get permission to come up, so I wrote him the note he had in his pocket when he died."

Bride Claims the Body for Burial. Though Miss Berggren was sadly affected by the shock of the death of her intended husband, she bore it calmly, and made arrangements for the funeral, which she decided should be held the day they had intended to have been their wedding.

POSTOFFICE CASE UP

both sides. Miller and Johns are old friends, having lived in adjoining counties in Indiana for years, where both have been prominent.

While District Attorney Sherman McPherson and his assistants, Moulton and Darby, have been working on the case for some time they were assisted today by Charles H. Robb, assistant attorney general for the postal department at Washington, D. C.

The government has called a dozen witnesses and the defense three times that many, so that it is not expected arguments will be reached until the latter part of the week.

John J. Ryan, the star witness of the government, was on the witness stand from 3 o'clock until court adjourned. He gave a history and an explanation of his co-operative investment company, telling how he advertised in the papers and received answers with money by mail.

Last November he was called on by postoffice inspectors and soon afterward received a notice from D. V. Miller, an assistant attorney general in the department, that his turf commission's operation was fraudulent.

Miller on Nov. 11 in Washington, and the whole matter was finally referred to Ryan before the postoffice inspectors. Ryan described in detail how they mingled about the hotel in Terre Haute, and finally retired from the room, where Johns remained with the postoffice inspectors.

When the two were alone in a room at Terre Haute, when he was interrupted by an objection from Rulison, devoted the attention to what Johns testified about what Miller said to him.

Ryan was testifying that Johns claimed to be close to Miller and able to advise him as to what he should do. Ryan said that Miller had said could or would be done in the pending case, but he objected to connecting Miller in a conspiracy with Johns.

Johns had stated that Miller had said regarding the case, court took the objection under advisement until tomorrow at 9 a. m.

ARMY AUTOMOBILE

Cumbersome Machine to Carry Repair Tools.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—An autocar equipped with outfits for horseshoer, saddler, carpenter and blacksmith, for use in the army, will leave this city for the war department at Washington in a few days.

The autocar is the only one of its kind ever constructed. If it comes up to the expectations of its designers any necessary repairs to the equipment of the artillery, cavalry and infantry branches of the service may be made in camp or even while the forces are on the march.

The car is not a model of beauty, and is not calculated to break any time records. It is simply a large box on wheels, with numerous doors that open and reveal all sorts of tools and appliances from the blacksmith's anvil to the artillery wheels.

The uses to which this traveling shop may be put are almost without number. If a field piece in the artillery should be rendered unserviceable it would not have to be abandoned on the field. The soldier-chauffeur would throw on the high speed gear and reach the crippled piece.

If the breech proved to be the source of trouble a new breech block would be secured from one of the many compartments in the autocar. In the case of a broken wheel a new wheel would be put on in a few minutes. If the breech block failed to fit it could be turned down on a lathe operated by an auxiliary engine.

If a cavalry horse lost a shoe the anvil would be brought out, and with it a portable forge. Coal would be secured from another compartment, a fire started and the horseshoer would go to work. The horseshoes are carried along and would only have to be fitted.

If a cavalryman should break a stirrup strap, bridle or any part of the harness, the broken parts would be replaced with duplicates carried in the autocar, and a saddler, supplied with every tool of his trade, would send the unlucky cavalryman on his way rejoicing.

Any small repairs to the arms of the infantry could also be made on the spot. The signal branch of the service is also provided for, and even telegraph instruments and wire are carried.

The autocar has been equipped with a winch, power being transmitted by means of a worm and worm wheel from the crank shaft. If the car is ever stuck in the mud the chauffeur will lasso a tree and then wind the free end of the rope around the winch. The engine will then be started, and if all goes well and the tree holds, the cumbersome repair wagon will come out of the mire.

The gasoline tank contains a supply sufficient to propel the machine 300 miles. The engine is of the kind known as four speed, and is calculated to drive the machine at any rate up to ten miles an hour.

The work on this car has been under the supervision of Lieut. O'Hearn, who will accompany the vehicle on its trip to Washington.

Fellowship for Michigan U. ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 13.—A $500 classical fellowship has been presented the University of Michigan by Theodore M. Buhl, of Detroit.
