SAVED FROM LOSS

Mapleton Bank Depositors Will Be Paid in Full.

S. T. Johnson, state public examiner, returned yesterday from Mapleton, where he has been investigating the affairs of the State Bank of Mapleton. He says depositors of the bank will lose nothing through the shortage of Alfred A. Buck, the assistant cashier, as it is now known that the amount of the shortage will not exceed $18,000. The capital of the bank is $10,000 and the stockholders are liable for double that sum.

Mr. Johnson said that such a condition as had been disclosed in this case would be immediately detected by a system of verification of checks, which he means to put in force. The plan is to send to each individual depositor in each bank, when it is examined, a personal letter from the bank examiner notifying him of the exact amount of his balance on that date as shown by the books. Then, if there is any discrepancy in the books, it will be brought to light.

Mr. Johnson says the adoption of this system by his department will entail great expense because of the additional clerks required for that reason he has delayed putting it into practice, but he has now become convinced that it is necessary.

MR. DOBNER WAGES CROSS-TOWN LINE

Wants It on Snelling Avenue and Says He Won't Stand for Any Makeshift.

"If the street car company does not give St. Paul another cross-town line or an addition to its service equally as good, I will be just as active as any other member of the council in demanding improvements that we can compel. I want a cross-town line that will be located on Snelling avenue and terminate at the state fair ground entrance to the city. It would not be a makeshift." Thus spoke Ald. Dobner yesterday.

Ald. Dobner declares that he intended to insist that he proposed a conference between Vice President Goodrich, of the street car company, and the committee on streets of the board of aldermen. He says that the conference has been arranged for the next meeting, and that if the committee is ignored or its demands refused, he will join with the others in forcing many of the small extensions and improvements that members of the committee are now asking for.

Greatest Need Is Cross-Town Line. "Ald. Rohland, I think did not really intend to question my sincerity in this matter," said Mr. Dobner yesterday. "He is very desirous of securing the building of a street car line and is chafing over the delay. It is an important matter and I hope he will get it, but I think this is the time to bend our energies toward a cross-town line to be located on Snelling avenue. More people want a cross-town line than any other street car improvement, and my idea is to go after that first. If it fails, then Mr. Rohland or any other member who wants any extension can count on me to aid him as far as my vote is concerned."

Hal Packer Puts Up a Weak Defense and is Promptly Convicted.

Hal Packer, the young man indicted by the grand jury on a charge of bigamy, was found guilty by a jury in Judge Orr's court yesterday and was immediately sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. The jury was out less than half an hour.

Packer, who is a printer by trade, was first married at La Crosse, Wis., eleven years ago, and it was the woman he married there who was the cause of his present trouble. About a year ago Packer deserted his first wife and their five children, and came to St. Paul with a girl named Mary J. Bowen, of Albia, Iowa, and they were married there by County Commissioner Galtiek Jan. 29, Packer, at that time, said his home was at Oskaola, Iowa, and that he had never before been married. When the first wife heard of his second marriage she told him at Winona and caused his arrest.

Packer's only defense was that "some one had told him" that his wife had secured a divorce and he thought he was free to marry again. His defense was a very weak one and the jury had little trouble in arriving at a conclusion of his guilt.

Packer had nothing to say when sentenced, but took the matter in a cool manner, leaving the court room without even casting a glance in the direction of his first wife, who was present in court with a small child. Packer will be taken to Stillwater today.

DECIDES AGAINST LUMBERMEN SAY THEY'RE NOT AFRAID OF CURTALS OFFICERS

Supreme Court's Interpretation of the Law Curtals Officers' Supposed Authority.

By a decision of the supreme court filed yesterday the powers of deputy state game wardens to confiscate property are distinctly circumscribed, and the game and fish commission finds itself treated of some of its supposed authority.

The immediate effect of the decision is to make the game and fish department two tanned deer and ten tanned moose hides, seized by wardens at Grave Lake, Itasca county, about two years ago. But that is accounted of slight importance as compared with the broad influence of the ruling in the enforcement of the laws for the protection of game.

The language of the court in the syllabus of its decision, which is written by Justice Lewis, is as follows: "A person who, in good faith, has purchased deer and moose skins for the purpose of tanning the same, acquires a valid title thereto, and in an action to recover the hides or their value from the game warden who took possession thereof, the owner is not required to prove that the animals from which such skins were taken were lawfully killed."

The case is that of Dell Linden, respondent, vs. F. F. McCormick, Jesse Harry, S. J. Fullerton and W. C. Tyndall, appellants. McCormick is a deputy game warden, and Mr. Fullerton is executive agent of the state game and fish commission. Mr. Tyndall is sheriff of Itasca county, and Jesse Harry is one of his deputies.

Dell Linden was engaged in the business of tanning skins at Grave Lake, Itasca county, and on Jan. 27, 1902, Deputy Game Warden McCormick and the officers named confiscated sixty-two tanned deer and ten tanned moose skins under the game law of 1897. This makes all wild game the property of the state under the circumstances, except as otherwise prescribed by law, and provides that the possession of any game, the killing of which is prohibited by law shall be prima facie evidence that it was the property of the state at the time it was killed or taken. The law places the burden of proof upon the person in possession, to show that game was taken or killed as provided by law.

Linden brought suit against the officers for $502, which he alleged to be the value of the skins taken from him, and at the close of the testimony the trial court directed the jury to return a verdict for Linden for the amount of the value of the property. The verdict was $275, and the defendants in action then appealed to the supreme court, which has in this decision affirmed the verdict.

The supreme court, in reviewing the case said: "In the present case, according to undisputed testimony, Linden came into possession of the skins in their own or dry state by purchase, mostly from Indian hunters, and the commission in the county, and had been in possession of them for about a year; that he had killed none of the game from which the skins were taken, and that he had no knowledge that any of the game had been unlawfully killed."

"So far as the record shows, the animals may have been killed in the lawful manner, and under such circumstances the presumption is that they came lawfully rather than unlawfully into respondent's possession."

"The object of the statute is to prevent the extermination of such game, and to that end, as a police regulation, reasonable restrictions and safeguards may be provided; but there is a limit to the state's power in restricting the product of animals lawfully killed, and subjecting those who in good faith have come into possession thereof to the result attending confiscation."
