Dr. Frederick Cook Gives the Details of His Unsuccessful Attempt.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Dr. Frederick Cook, a member of the expedition who made an unsuccessful attempt this summer to ascend Mount McKinley, in Alaska, the highest mountain in North America, has returned to his home in Brooklyn. The party, which left New York May 26, was composed of Dr. Cook, who has had experience in arctic and antarctic exploration with Peary and others; Robert Dunn, geologist; Ralph Shainwald, botanist, who was a member of the Baldwin-Ziegler expedition; Walter Miller, topographer, of Seattle; Mr. Ridpritz, of Darby, Mont.; John Carroll, of Valdez, Alaska, and two Indians. Dr. Cook said today that the trip had completely established the fact that it is impossible to scale Mount McKinley, 20,400 feet high, from its western side, but that three routes were noted on the eastern slope, by one of which it is possible the summit may be reached.

Owing to the lateness of the season it was impossible to attempt these routes this year. Other results of the expedition were the exploration of some hitherto unknown country to the eastward of the McKinley range, the discovery of what is probably the largest glacier in Alaska and the gathering of valuable botanical collections.

"Following the suggestion of Mr. Brooks, of the geological survey," said Dr. Cook, "we determined to attack the west side of the mountain, and made our start from Cook Inlet, at Tyonek. We followed an Indian trail to the Kuchatur river by boat. On the way I climbed Mount Yenlo, 4,500 feet, and obtained a good view and survey of the whole McKinley range. We followed up the Kuchatur in a westerly direction, crossed the McKinley range, through Simpson pass, and proceeding along the northwestern slope of the McKinley range above the timber line, we reached Mount McKinley on Aug. 14. This left us but fourteen days in which to make our trial, the practical season ending Sept. 1.

"We first attacked the mountain from the southwest, but were stopped by a glacier. In the second attempt we reached an elevation of 11,400 feet, when we were stopped by a spur of the main mountain with almost perpendicular slopes of granite rock forming an impassable obstacle to any ascent from that side. The mountain is an almost continuous series of granite cliffs, cornice by overhanging glaciers. We were greatly hampered by the advance of winter and heavy snow, which made it necessary for 2,000 feet of the climb to dig away thirteen inches of snow before cutting the steps in the glacial ice.

"After finding the western slope entirely impracticable, we had to get out of the country quickly, and instead of returning the way we had come we decided to cross the range and come down the east side, traveling over a series of unexplored country. We found a break in the range fifty miles northeast of Mount McKinley at an elevation of 8,000 feet, crossed it and dropped down into the valley of the Sushitna, striking the Chulitna, the largest tributary of the Sushitna river. This flows through a remarkable canyon, which made it possible to descend the mountain and take to rafts, on which we came down through the unexplored eastern foothills of Mount McKinley. We discovered the most difficult mountain pass in the interior of Alaska, and made a rapid survey of the east slope of the range. On Sept. 15 we left Mount McKinley, and in five days had reached Idwadek at Cook Inlet.

"The trip was one of great hardship on the return trip, especially, the men's clothing being drenched constantly by frequent immersions in the glacial streams. They opened up new hunting grounds in America for caribou, mountain sheep and moose. Dr. Cook says, the western foothills being a great game preserve.

"Mount McKinley is of granite, weighted down with not less than fifty disconnected glaciers and everywhere precipitous walls," said Dr. Cook. "It is probably the most difficult mountain in America to ascend on account of its distance from the coast line, supplies having to be carried 300 miles through difficult country and arctic conditions encountered from the start. On the east side there are three glaciers which terminate at an altitude of about 1,100 feet, and over these a route to the upper valleys of the summit may be found."

STICKNEY'S ACTION BREWS TROUBLE

Competing Lines Prepare to Fight His Proportional Grain Rate Scheme.

President Fish, of the Illinois Central, says President Stickney, of the Chicago Great Western, made a mistake in judgment when he did not extend his offer to the Nebraska city never can be made a grain center without the cooperation of the other railroads entering that territory.

But President Stickney is giving little heed to the opinions of rival railway presidents, and in all probability will place his proportional grain rate in effect Nov. 1, announcement having been made that an extension of time had been agreed on by the Great Western. The executive officials of the St. Paul-Omaha lines held a meeting Friday in the offices of J. C. Stubbs, at Chicago, and it was decided that the St. Paul-Omaha lines would better be made to induce President Stickney to modify the proposal of 9 cents to the Mississippi river and 14 cents to Chicago and Minneapolis from Omaha.

It was reported from Chicago that President Harris, of the Burlington, had left the city Thursday evening to visit President Stickney at St. Paul. At the Great Western offices yesterday it was said that President Harris had not called there and that no conference had been held with Mr. Stickney. From another source it was learned that the conference on the Omaha grain-rate subject will be held Monday.

As the result of this conference it is expected that the roads interested will be able to induce the Great Western to change its determination. Unless the Great Western rates are modified so as not to lower other rates it is probable that serious results will follow, and it is the wish of the railroads that this be avoided if possible.

HOMESEKERS' RATE STANDS.

The attempt some of the Western lines have been making to have the homeseekers' rate in the central and western part of New York in order to save local traffic, which has been cut out heavily by the independent railroads, has failed.

DR. RADWAY & CO.—I have been a sufferer from Rheumatism for more than six months. I could not raise my hands to my head, or my feet behind me, or even take off my own shoes. Before I had finished three-fourths of a bottle of Radway's Ready Relief I could use my arms as well as ever. You can see who I have such great faith in your Relief. Yours truly, W. C. GOVERNOR NEARLY LOSES HIS LIFE

Continued From First Page. After accomplishing this feat he found himself 250 feet below his companions. Not until the next day did he rejoin his companions, meanwhile suffering severe hardships. Gov. Herrick, who also slipped and fell down the declivity, would have suffered similar privations had not his companions, by superhuman efforts, rescued him from his perilous position on a shelf of the "wall," where, by the remotest chance, he was able to arrest his rapid descent by securing an uncertain foothold. Here he remained for some little time before his companions were able to rescue him and prevent his falling to the bottom.
