This Free Distribution Begins Monday, 23rd November, at 9 a. m.

To the Editor of The Globe: Having discovered a new remedy which I believe will revolutionize the practice of medicine, I must earnestly ask that you assist me in its introduction by allowing me to make a free distribution from your office.

I want the public to know the truth, know it as I know it.

I believe there is a cure for every disease—I believe that human life can be prolonged—I believe that people should die only from old age, and I also believe and know that my Paw Paw remedy will not only relieve much suffering, but add many years to the supply of life.

In my opinion dyspepsia and indigestion are the cause of most ailments. Indigestion means nervousness, sleeplessness, impure blood, catarrh, sluggish liver, kidney and heart affections. No person can be happy—no person can see the beauties of life and enjoy its pleasures, who suffers from any form of stomach trouble.

An eminent actor called my attention to the wonderful benefit he had derived from eating Paw Paw fruit, telling me that it had made almost a new stomach for him. I began to experiment with this fruit and found it to be a most powerful aid to digestion.

I have taken the medicinal qualities of this fruit and combined it with other ingredients and have made a preparation which is called "MUNYON'S PAW PAW."

I cannot recommend this remedy too highly for all forms of indigestion, nervousness. This remedy also acts wonderfully well on the liver, blood and kidneys, but I believe its greatest office is in its marvelous effect upon the stomach and vitality.

It gives exhilaration without intoxication. It does what whisky nor beer cannot do. It relieves the nerve tension. It stimulates every fibre and puts into action every tissue of the body. It lifts one into the altitude of hope and holds him there. It is a bridge that enables the weak and sickly to cross the river of life.

It feeds and nourishes the nerves, so that the blood corpuscles will be constantly revitalized, and the losses of the vital forces will be almost imperceptible. In other words, it will supply a sufficient quantity of life matter to take the place of the waste.

Instead of irritating the nerves and stomach, it soothes and strengthens them. Almost every human being some time requires a stimulant. NOT AN ALCOHOLIC STIMULANT, not a stimulant that will woo you for a moment and then cast down to the depths of depression, but a stimulant that will give an abiding strength and lasting force.

My Paw Paw aids the stomach to digest hearty foods, and to make good, rich blood, which again in turn strengthens the nerves, vitalizes the tissues, and soon produces muscle, tissue, bone.

It is my opinion that the clergymen in this country could do no greater service to the cause of temperance than to advocate the general use of my Paw Paw, for by its use drunkenness would be lessened, and the morals and health of the community greatly improved.

A wife whose husband is addicted to drinking can do nothing better for herself or family than to get a bottle of this Paw Paw, and whenever her husband feels the need of a tonic, give him a table-spoonful of Paw Paw. She will find that he will soon lose all craving for strong drinks—that his nervousness and longing for excitement will disappear, and he will be perfectly satisfied without alcoholic stimulants and harmful beverages.

I have so much confidence in this remedy that I propose distributing trial samples free from the leading newspaper offices throughout the country. I want everybody to try it, feeling confident that it will bring relief and happiness.

Trusting you will aid me in this investigation, I beg to remain, Yours faithfully, J. M. MUNYON.

Prof. Munyon has adopted the same method of introducing this remedy that has characterized the introduction of all his other remedies—by distributing free samples from the leading newspaper offices and inviting the public to make a thorough test and then report the results through the columns of the newspapers.

We cheerfully open the columns of our paper to this investigation, and hope that every person suffering with any nerve or stomach trouble will give this remedy a careful test.

Public School Boys Sell Fobs Made by Themselves

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Pedestrians have encountered within the last few weeks a new sort of pedler. Whether they walk in First or Fifth avenue, they are accosted by children, whose usual salutation is: "Buy a watch chain, mister? Buy a watch fob? Ten cents."

The assumption of these juvenile traders brings the ordinary citizen to a halt. His curiosity leads him to examine the child's wares, and he finds them bright colored shoestring fobs which are woven by an ingenious method into square chains. There is a loop at one end for a watch, and at the other hangs a pretty tassel.

The successful child merchant follows up the first attack by a second. He takes a shoestring chain, and pulling it slightly to show that it is not only elastic, but strong, he says: "Yes, I made 'em myself, boss. You ken look at 'em, if yer want'er. See, they're made out of shoelaces. Shoelaces, that's all. A fob is made out of two strings. If yer have time, I'll show yer how I make 'em. All yer got ter do is to take a string, lay it over, so, turn the loop, so, and then pull through the other string. Each string is of a different color, and then when they're made, they are 'beauts,' eh? And only 10 cents!"

If a boy presents his case with the right diplomacy he can generally win a customer. The fobs look to be worth 10 cents. There are combinations of black and orange, red and blue, white and purple, and almost every other shade and color. Lads living near Columbia university have made fobs of blue and white, the colors of the university, and they have found ready purchasers among the college students.

At the ferries the lads whose homes are along the water front find many commuters, whom they are wont to term "easy marks." As one lad put it: "These Jersey commuters bite easier than any of 'em. I s'pose it is because they get bit so much themselves when they're home, and they sort of want ter get even. Why, I sold fifty fobs the other evening to the push in the ferry-house that was waiting for their private yachts."

Truckmen and laborers have also given a boom to the homemade fob market. They are attracted by the striking colors of the fobs, as well as their cheapness. When they are dressed in their "Sunday best," a brand new fob of startling colors gives them a look of luxury, at least. And it doesn't matter so much if there is a watch at the other end. A bunch of keys or the mistress' button hook does just as well.

The fob has also been a solace to many a mother and school teacher. It has kept hands out of mischief and busied minds that would have been otherwise employed. The making of fobs has become such a craze that one finds the lads at recess or noon hour busily weaving shoelaces instead of crouching down on their knees at "craps." At the beginning of the fad there was such a demand for these "vest ornaments" that some of the "newsies" found more money in fobs than in "papes." The wharf rats learned what the school boys were doing, and they, too, became "captains of industry."

The fob fad must necessarily run itself out, because of the unlimited and ever increasing supply. A fob can be made in fifteen minutes by skillful hands. A boy will go to a store, for example, and buy his "raw material" for 1 cent a string. His fob thus costs him 2 cents, and he can sell it for 10 at prevailing prices. His profit is 8 cents an hour. An industrious boy or girl can thus make 50 cents going to and from school. Some are able by dint of special enterprise to earn $1 a day. Others who do not aim at such fortunes are content to trade their fobs for the wares of the candy man or "swap" them for tops and marbles. On the other hand, children of even greater ambition aspire to weave bells, where twelve laces are tied and loosed in much the same fashion. They sell the belts for 50 cents or $1. The average child, however, finds quicker returns and less labor in the two-string fob.

The fad is said to have come to this city from the boardwalk at Asbury Park. At this watering place last summer the art of making fobs was taught to women who were willing to pay a tuition fee of 25 cents. From Asbury Park it was introduced into the public schools here and taught the children as a sort of manual training exercise. When the teachers first explained to their pupils how to fold and loop the shoelastings they little realized that it would spread to the street and the tenement house. Now the tables are turned, and the teachers are many times taught new designs and combinations of colors by their enthusiastic pupils.

Columbia Objects To Leaving Land of Free

The elephant Columbia has gone back to Cuba. Columbia is a gentleman elephant, notwithstanding his name. Coney Island breathes easier now that he has gone. How Cuba will receive him is a matter for speculation.

If he were a man, Columbia would find an indictment for homicide awaiting him in Havana. In Cuba last summer he killed W. W. Goodrich, one of the owners of the Quintard circus, which got some notoriety from the troubles of Quintard and Miss Bradley, of Stamford, who afterward took a financial interest in the show.

After killing Goodrich, Columbia was brought to this country and exhibited at Luna park under the management of Tony Lowande, who in his slyer days was a baraback rider of great renown.

Columbia kept things moving at Coney Island. On one occasion he broke from his moorings and assaulted the Luna park with his red jay eyes at folks who came to stare at the "Horrible Mankilling Elephant." This was monstrous. When it was made clear to him early the other morning that the show was going to move Columbia manifested perfectly intelligible displeasure. He lifted his trunk and trumpeted his joy. He slapped Tino, his diminutive Ethiopian valet, gently with his trunk. He knuckled the earth under his feet most vigorously.

Duke, Wallace and Brute, the lions, Topsy, the trick donkey, and Bijah, the goat, were all put in boxes and loaded on wagons, along with eight or ten assorted unnamed dogs and minor goats. Sport, Harry and Charlie, the horses, and Columbia marched on foot behind.

Tino found that he had his hands very full with Columbia in his cheerful mood. Columbia long ago discovered that horses are afraid of him. He would pass by a horse and dance at sight of him, the brute would veer over toward it. Then just as he seemed likely to pass by safely, he would toss his trunk in the air and let out a snort that might be heard a mile.

He snorted and a trumpet that might well have terrified the steadiest street car that ever started and stopped at the sound of the conductor's bell. There were four runaways and one tip-over caused in this way between Coney Island and the Thirty-ninth street ferry.

Once in the ferryhouse, Columbia became very serious. Life wasn't a joke any longer. He didn't like that ferryhouse. Especially he did not like the bridge from the house to the boat. He tried his weight on it with one fore foot and then with the other. Then he swung his trunk and caught Tino by the small of the back, knocked him half way across the bridge and galloped blithely out into Thirty-ninth street and liberty.

over and said something that sounded very like a policeman's "Gwan!" Everybody g'waned.

Ignoring Tino's efforts to start him again, Columbia walked over to an elevated pillar, took a squint at the structure above, knelt down and twined his trunk around the pillar. Then he pulled and hauled most mightily.

"Gee!" chuckled Tino. "This is my time to laugh. The old fool thinks he can pull the elevated down."

The elevated did not come down and Columbia arose with a snarl of disgust. He didn't want to pull the old thing down anyway. He just wanted to see whether it was well built.

An Editor's Ambition Gratified. "One afternoon at Salt Lake I went into the Oregon Short Line office to buy a berth in the Pullman car leaving that night for Nampa," says "Ed" Howe, in giving for the Atchison Globe an account of his travels in the West. "The ticket didn't lower, and I hate an upper, so I indulged in an extravagance I have long dreamed of: I bought a stateroom! I thus had from 9 o'clock at night until 6 o'clock the next afternoon, a room with every modern convenience. The porter asked if I wanted the bed made with both mattresses, and I said I did, supposing that was the usual thing with the heavy swells. And the bed, made with both mattresses, turned out to be a good one. Besides, I was enabled to address and dress in the usual way; I not only had the upper berth up, but had a big sofa in front of my bed. Also a lavatory of my own, and complete privacy. It was an experience I greatly enjoyed. You will not believe it, but a Pullman porter has great deference for a passenger in a stateroom. When he enters the room he knocks at the door very humbly.

Sweetest Things. What are the sweetest things of earth? Lips that can praise a rival's worth; A fragrant rose that hides no thorn; Riches of gold untouched by scorn.

A happy little child asleep; Eyes that can smile though they may weep; A brother's cheer; a father's praise; The minstrelsy of summer days.

A heart whose anger never burns; A gift that looks for no returns; Wrong's overthrow; pain's quick release; Dark footsteps guided into peace.

The light of love in lover's eyes; Age that is young as well as wise; A mother's kiss; a baby's mirth; These are the sweetest things of earth. —New York News.

MONKEY ATTACKS AND TEARS A CHILD

Furious Brute Fights Long Battle With Mother of Little One.

OAKLAND, Cal., Nov. 21.—Freeing himself from the chain which held him and stealthily climbing a high board fence, "Joeko," the pet Filipino monkey kept by Hans P. Jensen, made a fierce attack this morning upon two-year-old Willie Jaquith in the rear yard of the home of the child's parents, which adjoins the Jensen place. The savage brute pounced on the youngster from behind, while the latter was at play, and before the child could make an outcry had sunk its teeth deep into the right cheek of its victim.
