COMPOSITE RESENTMENT ROUTINE SCHOOLS

Superintendent Smith Declares There Should Be Rearrangement of the Study Course That Would Give the Teacher Time to Arouse the Pupil's Interest in the Subjects Presented—Rigid Grade Requirements, He Declares, Are an Evil.

Rearrangement of our courses of study cannot be delayed much longer. When made they must be founded upon the principle that they are to be given in the early years of child life in which to give all necessary instruction. Let us make no mistake; it is not lack of time but mistaken choice and bad management that brings the evil. Our schools will never do their perfect work until there is more freedom for the teacher and more freedom for the child.

Marked change in the course of study of the St. Paul schools is imminent. Necessity for some modification of method has long been recognized by the school board and the superintendent. The subject was presented in concrete form to the principals of the schools at the regular meeting yesterday afternoon by Supt. Smith, with the request that they discuss it with their teachers, consider it carefully themselves and then submit their views for the consideration of the board of school inspectors.

Course Needs Rearrangement. Discussing this subject at the meeting, Supt. Smith said to The Globe: "There is no question but that our course as it is now is in a sense overcrowded or overloaded. But what we need is not elimination of studies; it is rearrangement of our course. To have recitation in each study every day gives the course too much of a routine character for the child. We must give industrial training to a greater extent than ever before, and we must shape our course so that it will give the child a vision of our time-table, since we cannot add to the number of school hours in the year."

In teaching, loyalty is devotion to principle; it finds expression in unselfish effort, in the desire to promote the objects, and to secure its benefits in the largest possible measure to those who are entitled to them. Our courses of study are undergoing radical changes, and will continue changing until they meet the real needs of the public, unless we have the courage to justify their existence altogether. From the present condition to the true condition, the transition can be safely made without wasteful expenditure, and without loss to the children, if the American people are determined to take the necessary steps to extreme action can be avoided.

In the reconstruction and reformation of our study courses, we should be, not necessarily a conservative, but a sensible, a reasonable line of procedure, a growth of new ideas about the old; the old supplying the nourishment and support necessary to the new growth. This is the only truly normal and enduring growth. There are defects in our course of study that have been created by following mistaken ideas, or by giving a wrong construction to some measure or method, in itself quite proper.

President Roosevelt's Criticism. Defects have also grown up because of an adherence to methods that are wrong in themselves, or that have been grown in a late educational journal I find it stated that President Roosevelt had criticized his own program of the Washington because he had discovered that he knew more about the anatomy of the human body than the public school teachers, and that habits of loose thinking and of haphazard and careless work were being formed. What was needed in the schools was thoroughness, and it was conspicuous only because of its absence. Is the present right? The teachers are working hard enough, but is the time employed as to secure to the children the greatest good? I feel obliged to say that I do not think that our work is done with that care, thoroughness and accuracy that should characterize it; that our children do not effectively use their opportunities for securing the power of right thinking, or the right use of the book; of the right manner of study. I listen with some impatience to continued references to spelling as if there is the great evil lay, and there the great wrong wrought its results. Bad spelling is rather a symptom, indicating a bad mental state or condition. An irate parent sometimes appears at my office with a child who has been suspended for "whispering" or "talking around," and he indignantly expresses a

Mayor R. A. Smith will be a candidate for re-nomination on the Democratic ticket at the coming spring primaries. There were rumors to that effect, but he officially confirmed the story yesterday. He will file at an early date. "I intend to ask for the Democratic nomination for mayor in the spring," said Mayor Smith yesterday. "This statement seems hardly necessary for I do not think any one doubted that I would be a candidate, but if there are any doubting Thomases, probably this will put their doubts at rest."

GET OUT OF COLD TURKEY FLIES HIGH. Artillerymen at Fort Quit Tents for Barracks. Festival Bird Is Marked 20 Cents Per Pound.

After living two weeks in tents, sleeping on straw and carrying their meals from the cook tent to their living quarters, while the temperature stood well below the freezing point, the Thirtieth battery of field artillery is at last housed in the new quarters at Fort Snelling. The quarters were completed Saturday and turned over to Capt. Schofield, constructing quartermaster, by the contractors. Arrangements were immediately made to abandon the canvas homes and seek the warmer place, the barracks Saturday night. The tents were pulled down and the remainder of the battery's outfit was moved in yesterday.

Grade Requirements an Evil. And now, aside from the rearrangement of studies, there is in the extreme and severe description of the study, a fundamental evil. The amount of ground the pupils go over, the numberless excursions that they solve in arithmetic, the thousands of exercises in geometry that they, literally, "execute" are more than sufficient to make them accurate and thorough. If they were effectively performed, our schools will never do their perfect work until there is more freedom for the child and more freedom for the child. What can be more degrading than the doing of work, simply because one is told to do it, and the child is turned away from the manifold needs of the child, from the essential mental requirements, and is made to be contented down in a course of study, or in the list of assignments!

Sale auction rugs—real Orientals—at about half-price. One-half of yesterday's buyers bought for Christmas. The opportunity is one you cannot afford to miss, for there has been nothing quite so good in the Twin Cities. It's a great rich, practical feast, and if you're a lover of beauty and fine furnishings, you're invited to see it for no buy.

There are many other lots, including the carpet sets, in which you'll find such rare gems as Ghorevans, Tabriz, and Muskadabs, at 200.00 and up to 300.00, all worth exactly double.

WILL TAKE UP GAS FRANCHISE AGAIN. GRAND JURY CALLS MANY WITNESSES. Council Bodies and Gas Company Officials Will Confer on It Tonight. Intends to Investigate the Charges Preferred Against Members of Council.

More than twenty grand jury subpoenas were served yesterday upon persons who are summoned to appear before that body today and tell what they know regarding the charges of municipal scandal which came back to the investigation into the alleged crooked methods of certain members of the council, commenced last week, is to be resumed today, when the grand jury will go into the matter in earnest. All day yesterday deputies from the sheriff's office were busy serving subpoenas, and it is expected that the waiting list in the corridors outside the grand jury room will be long this afternoon. City officials, business men, newspaper men and others have been rounded up, and so quietly did the deputies go about their task of serving the subpoenas that many of the witnesses were caught before there was any opportunity for the matter to be "tipped" to them. It is stated that a number who were expecting to be called as witnesses had prepared to sink out of sight before they could be served, but the deputies who went out yesterday came back with "returns" on almost every paper in their possession. That the grand jury has decided to go farther into the charges made in connection with the methods employed in securing the passage of the downtown park ordinance is evidenced by the personnel of the witnesses summoned to appear this afternoon. Newspaper Men Will Testify. Although several witnesses have already been before the jury in this case, the investigation is not concluded, for among the witnesses summoned yesterday were a number of sporting editors of local papers, some of whom are said to know something about the inner workings of the deal whereby the downtown park ordinance was passed. Other matters besides the ball park deal, in which members of the council are said to be implicated, will also be taken up by the grand jury, and it is expected that at least another week, and possibly more time, will be consumed by the grand jury in investigating the alleged city scandal.

HER CASE PRESENTS DIFFICULT PROBLEM. Mrs. Carrier Beyond the Aid of Charitable Societies. "The case of Mrs. Carrier shows the need of a state institution for the reformation of women," said Judge Fineout yesterday. "Charitable organizations, private parties and the Salvation Army have done all they can for her, and have given up in despair. All that can be done for her now is to keep sending her to the workhouse whenever she is liberated." Released Saturday from the workhouse and taken in charge of immediately by the Salvation Army, Mrs. Carrier refused to be cared for and Saturday night went to a policeman and pleaded with him to arrest her so that she might have some place to stay. She declared to the officer that she had no place to go and nowhere to get food. The Salvation Army had decided to take care of her, but she grew rebellious and nothing could be done with her. She broke away, and after passing the day about town asked the officer to give her shelter in the lock-up. Addresses Commons Club. Cicero Caesar Talbot, A. M., addressed an audience last night at the St. Paul Commons, 100 Jackson street. The title of his lecture was "Looking Through the Ages," and, as he has read, traveled and studied, his discourse was highly entertaining. Beside speaker and a finished orator, and he possesses a delicate sense of humor which was appreciated. A GUARANTEED CURE FOR PILES. Undergoes Second Surgical Operation. A. D. S. Johnston is Again Treated for Appendicitis. Through his love for outdoor sports and his inability to restrain his desire to play golf, A. D. S. Johnston, of Summit avenue, has been forced to undergo a second operation for appendicitis. The operation was performed last week at St. Luke's hospital by Dr. Charles Wheaton and Mr. Johnston is improving rapidly. Mr. Johnston was operated upon last winter for appendicitis, but before his wound had healed, he began playing golf and other outdoor sports. The wound was prevented from healing perfectly by the strenuous exercise, and a second operation was found necessary. Windlass Slips and Strikes Him. Street Laborer Gets Bad Wound in the Head. While at work at a windlass hauling a bucket from a sewer hole at the corner of West Seventh and McBoal streets, Albert Anderson, residing at Sixth and John streets, was seriously injured by being struck in the forehead by the handle of the windlass. The bucket caught in ascending and the handle slipped, striking Anderson and knocking him unconscious. He was immediately removed to the city hospital. He recovered consciousness while in the ambulance under the care of Dr. Moore, police surgeon, and an examination at the hospital revealed that the skull was not fractured. Warehouse Commission Investigates. A trip to St. James, will be made today by the state railroad and warehouse commission. It will hold a hearing on the establishment of a "Y" between the Minneapolis and St. Louis and the Omaha tracks, which is greatly desired by some of the residents. The commission will be at Davoy on Wednesday to investigate the application for an order to require the Omaha to put in a side track.
