

BISHOP SPALDING DISCUSSES CAPITAL AND SOCIALISM

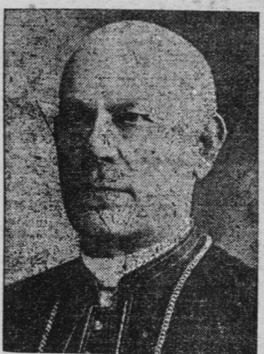

Peoria Prelate Who Is a Member of the Civic Federation Declares That Capital Dominates Everything, That Labor Has Important Lessons to Learn and Socialistic Agitation Has Done Good.

CHICAGO, Feb. 9.—The Municipal Lecture association, organized to provide public addresses on pending issues of municipal life and government, began its work at the Auditorium to-night with an address by Bishop John L. Spalding, of Peoria, Ill. A large audience listened to his discussion of "Democracy, Socialism and Labor." He said among other things:

"Despite our marvelous success and achievement, we have failed to secure equal opportunities to all, which is the radical aim and master passion of democracy. More than 70 per cent of the wealth of the United States, it is reckoned, is owned by 2 per cent of the families; while 23 per cent of the wealth is all that is left for 91 per cent of the population; and the tendency toward progress under the competitive system is to increase inequality of possession. If the present methods continue a few individuals and trusts will soon control the means of production and distribution, and this in an era when money is the mightiest form of social influence and domination. To these few individuals and corporations will belong an authority and power greater than any history man knows—an authority and power which are incompatible with political liberty and popular institutions.

"Capital dictates even now, in a large measure, the politics of our national, state and municipal legislative bodies. It enables the multi-millionaires and the trusts to make or evade the laws. It controls most potent organs of public opinion, and is able to give to the interests of industrialism priority over the rights of man. Much of the evil is due to the competitive system which involves enormous wastes, over-capitalization, excessive production, stagnation, panic, strikes, and all the wastes which thence flow to the whole social body. Where material goods are the first and paramount and human values become secondary or are lost sight of altogether.

"But the evils from which we suffer are not wholly due to the competitive system. They are largely the result of the greed of individual capitalists and of their selfishness and the result of workmanship, many of whom, whether their wages be high or low, their hours of toil long or short, live on the verge of poverty. The money they spend in saloons would make them and their families comfortable. Their weaknesses and their vices are almost inevitable in the environment in which multitudes of them are compelled to pass their lives. The socialistic agitation will not soon cease. It has done good, and will do good by its clamorous proclamation of the wrongs which the toiling masses have suffered and continue to suffer. But the realistic state will remain a theory, a visionary entity, and could it become a reality the cataclysm which would accompany its speedy overthrow would swallow the priceless treasures which are the gain of thousands of years of heroic struggles and sacrifices.

"The worshipers of mammon, Bacchus and Venus may gather in increasing numbers, but it lacks principle, it lacks the power to remake itself, and while they who are controlled and held together by moral and religious convictions obey abiding impulses and become a permanent force. They have the strength of reason and conscience which overcomes the lawless impulses and become a permanent force. They have the strength of reason and conscience which overcomes the lawless impulses and become a permanent force. They have the strength of reason and conscience which overcomes the lawless impulses and become a permanent force.

FIND A TRAIL OF BLOOD IN HARLEM

Detectives Unearth a Thrilling Mystery in the Bronx District.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—The strange case of Conrad Maurer will deeply interest psychologists. Very early yesterday morning an overcoat, a sack coat, a hat, a collar and a necktie were found at One Hundred and Thirty-eighth street and Willis avenue, the Bronx.

Detectives Tierney and Kelly, of the Alexander Avenue station, hurried to the scene. The clothes were ensanguined. On a wall near them were blotches of the vital fluid. A trail like a red thread in the snow ran for a block and a half. It is important to note that the trail was zigzag.

"Ah, hah! Murder has been done," hissed Tierney.

The detectives found in the coat pocket letters addressed to Conrad Maurer, No. 325 West One Hundred and Thirty-third street. The letters dwelt on painting, but said nothing of painting in red.

"At last we have a faint clue," suggested Kelly, "plainly the victim's name was Maurer. He lived at this address and he was murdered and robbed."

Then the detectives found in the waistcoat pockets a gold watch and $17.95.

"The mystery deepens," cried Tierney. "He was not murdered for money. He had an enemy, perhaps a rival, who killed him for revenge."

Several more Alexander Avenue Viaducts hurried out, the central office was asked to dispatch two of its best men on the case. Then it occurred to Tierney and Kelly to go to No. 325 West One Hundred and Thirty-third street.

"Does Conrad Maurer live here?" whispered Kelly to the young woman who opened the door.

"Yes," said she. "He's asleep in his room now."

"I went to a party on One Hundred and Sixty-second street last night," said Maurer drowsily. "When I started early this morning I was very tired. I had danced a great deal. I got on a car, and I remember getting off at One Hundred and Thirty-eighth street. I thought I was home, and began to undress. I slipped on the snow and bumped my nose against a wall. I can't tell for the life of me what happened after that or how I got home."

Maurer went to the station and steadily reclaimed his clothes and money. The detectives lost interest in the case. But it remains for psychologists and alienists to answer the question:

"Does the man who thinks he has two homes possess a double consciousness or does he lack conscience?"

MINNEAPOLIS NEWS

BIGAMIST HAZZARD IS FOUND GUILTY

Now Faces a Term of From One to Five Years in State's Prison.

Samuel C. Hazzard, alias Samuel C. Hargrave, has been convicted of bigamy. The jury returned a verdict last night at 9 o'clock, after being out five hours.

The defendant and his latest wife, Dr. Linda Burfield Hazzard, were in the court room when the verdict was read, but neither showed uneasiness. Hazzard sat as motionless and indifferent as usual and his wife shook her head slightly in disapproval. The convicted man was then escorted back to the jail accompanied by his wife, who broke down and sobbed bitterly when she reached the jail office.

Viva Fitzpatrick said last night that she felt that she had been vindicated by the verdict, but that she was sorry for Hazzard. She said he was not half as guilty of wrong as somebody else.

"Oh, I feel for my poor boy," she said with tender feeling. "I go wish I could serve the time for him. How much will they give him? Isn't there some way they can let him off?"

"Don't you honestly think that woman a knew I was married to Hargrave when she married him? I don't roughly believe that she knew it all the time and I think she is the more guilty. She has threatened that she would take him right from under my nose."

"If Hargrave had been acquitted, I would still have recognized him, but, of course, I should never have had any conversation with him. All I wanted was that the world should know that we had been married."

"You know I am ashamed to say what I wished tonight when the case went to the jury. I felt as though I wanted it to disagree and then I would be gone before another trial would come off."

Several times did Mrs. Hargrave express her sympathy for the convicted man as she spoke of the various incidents that have taken place since her husband was married to Dr. Burfield.

"I hope that the jury will find that he will get one-half off for good behavior," she said, as she discussed the many features which were not brought out in the trial.

Viva Fitzpatrick and her mother will return to Nevada, Iowa, Thursday.

Takes Verdict Stochastically. Hazzard took the verdict of the jury stoically. It was apparent that he expected nothing else after the judge had delivered the charge to the jury. The law on the point of what constituted sufficient marriage was so plain that he could see the outcome.

"I was not surprised," he said. "I am not surprised at anything nowadays. I have nothing to say. I have kept my mouth shut before and during the trial and I might as well keep it her physical culture teacher approves of her plan.

One stormy night John J. Jansen, her uncle, came in covered with snow and insisted that Miss Dwyer should give up her open-air cot for that night. Since that time Jansen has caught a severe cold. Since that time Jansen has caught a severe cold. Since that time Jansen has caught a severe cold.

TOPPING ACHIEVES SUCCESS IN TIPPING

Mulcts Obliging Friend Out of $4,100 to "Play Sure Things."

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—John J. Topping, an agreeable conversationalist, of 210 West Twenty-fourth street, and with a "good thing" ready to hand for his quondam friend, met Eugene F. Wilson, of 129 East Fortieth street, and while they had a nip of something at the Hotel Cadillac, on Broadway, talked him into handing over $4,100 which was due to net him a handsome return. Topping never, he assured Wilson, had such a straight tip on a winner. But the tip failed. Topping, however, a past master in the art of convincing doubters of their errors, made Wilson believe that "something unforeseen" had happened, and he had accepted a ball in $5,000 for another "good thing."

This was on Saturday last, according to Inspector McCluskey, and yesterday afternoon Detective Sergeants Collins and Harvey Ware picked up Topping at Fifty-fifth street and Broadway and locked him up in police headquarters. He was not long there, however, until a bondsman arrived and a $1,000 bond was accepted for his appearance today in court.

Inspector McCluskey says that Topping is well known to the police as a "good thing" man and a wire tapper, and that his picture is in the rogues' gallery. He also says that such men as Topping have bondsman always ready to get the best legal advice, and that it is very difficult to secure a conviction. McCluskey, however, will push the case as far as possible, and called in the services of Acting District Attorney Rand.

BACK PORCH HER BEDROOM. Albany Girl Sleeps One Night in House and Catches Cold.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 9.—Miss Margaret Dwyer, of this city, sleeps out of doors even in bad weather. Her bed is on a cot on the back porch of her home in Tenbroeck street. Her bedding consists of a pair of fleeced sheets, a rose blanket, a comfortable and a pillow.

shut now. All I can do is to take it as it comes. Dr. Linda Burfield-Hazzard, who has at all times been exceedingly talkative, was prostrated with grief and had nothing to say. She talked to her husband in the jail office, muttering between the sobs words about "injustice" and the woman who had caused her all the trouble.

Hazzard will be sentenced as soon as the attorneys in the case have had opportunity to take or make any further motions that they may decide.

The law provided that punishment for bigamy shall be from one to five years.

Government Was After Him. In the event Hazzard had been acquitted he would immediately have been placed under arrest by an officer of the government, who has been in the city for several days, awaiting the outcome of the trial. As soon as Hargrave became known as Hazzard the government officers located him, and it is claimed they have been looking for him for some time, and that he was arrested on the charge of forging and cashing government checks.

The case has attracted a great deal of notice on account of the prominence of Hazzard as an officer in the United States army. He is a graduate of the military academy at West Point, where he finished with honors in his class. As a recognition of his ability, he was sent to Europe by the government to study military affairs, and was later returned to the military academy, where he was instructor in mathematics for some time. After leaving West Point he was sent to Tampa, Fla., with the rank of first lieutenant of artillery.

From there, it is claimed, he left in 1900 to go to British Columbia, and later to Oregon, where he was under the name of Hargrave. It was not known until one of his old schoolmates met him in Minneapolis that he was Hazzard. At first he did not wish to acknowledge that he was Hazzard, but when things began to get complicated Hazzard admitted it and asked his old friend not to disclose his identity.

Viva Becomes an Heiress. Word has just been received by Viva Hargrave, nee Fitzpatrick, the complaining wife in the Hazzard bigamy case, that an uncle with whom she had been a great favorite has died in California, leaving her a fortune.

It appears that N. D. Pearce, Viva's uncle on her mother's side, died in San Francisco last month, but his will was not opened until Monday, and upon its being read it was discovered that Miss Fitzpatrick is the only one of the Hazzard family mentioned.

"Oh, don't say anything about it," was the prosecuting witness' first exclamation yesterday morning, when asked about her good fortune. "We wanted to keep the matter quiet."

LOG CUT WILL BE LIGHT. Will Show But 75 Per Cent of That of Last Year.

Lumbermen say that although conditions in the woods are better than they have been for several years, the size of the cut of logs is expected to be anywhere from 15 to 30 per cent less than last year. The reason for this reduction seems to be that the lumbermen are out with the intention of cutting fewer logs than usual, and that they have held to their original purpose, in spite of the fact that labor has been better and cheaper than for many years and the conditions for logging hardly to be improved upon.

At the surveyor general's office it was learned yesterday that the cut of logs this year is expected to be about 15 per cent less than last year, and the quality is not likely to be any better than usual.

FOURTEEN ARE SLAIN

Disastrous Collision on the Canadian Pacific.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 9.—Fourteen persons were killed and more than a score injured in a collision between two passenger trains on the Canadian Pacific near Sand Point today. The trains in collision were the east-bound and west-bound Soo special, both to improve upon.

Both trains were under orders to stop at Sand Point and pass there. Conductor Nidd, of the west-bound train, this evening got into a collision with the east-bound train at Sand Point, but failed to obey them. Ten of the killed were passengers.

STILLWATER

A special term of the district court was conducted here yesterday by Judge Williston, of Red Wing. A motion was argued in the case of Ed St. John against the Boettcher Lumber company, of Red Wing, and one or two other motions were argued and submitted.

A wooden obstruction was found yesterday in the Stillwater Water company's conduit leading across lot 8, which has long been in controversy, and an effort will be made to ascertain how the obstruction got in. The obstruction will be removed so that the water that has been running to waste will run into the water company's reservoir.

Rev. F. L. Palmer, pastor of the Ascension church, yesterday afternoon conducted the funeral of E. D. Farmer. Services were held at the family residence. The interment occurred in Fairview cemetery.

Edward Dupuis, of Stillwater, and Miss Julia Ollinger, of Minneapolis, will be married this morning at the French Catholic church. A wedding breakfast will follow the ceremony at the home of the groom's parents.

Reports received from the pinneries are encouraging to local loggers, who are doing splendid work in their camps. The roads are in perfect condition for hauling and many logs have already been banked. The city has a large force of men at work making repairs on the pontoon bridge, and the bridge will be in good condition by the time it is needed. All teams now cross Lake St. Croix on the ice.

CHARGE OF WATER BLOWS HIS HEAD OFF

Weber Loaded His Gun With Liquid, and Pulled Trigger With His Toes.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Feb. 9.—Rudolph Weber, a saloonkeeper of No. 111 Stagg street, Williamsburg, played a game of pinocle yesterday afternoon with three friends. It was the first time he had been out of his room for several weeks. He has been suffering from a severe cold. At the end of the game he excused himself.

"I can't stand this any longer," he told them. "I'm going upstairs to cure my grip. I know a remedy that can't fail."

He went to his bedroom above the saloon. His wife was in the kitchen adjoining. Through the door she saw him take off his right shoe and sock and pick up his shotgun. He carefully loaded both barrels and then filled them with water. Weber was so surprised at his strange actions that she stood as if paralyzed. She had no idea what he meant to do.

Having completed his arrangements, Weber placed the muzzle of the gun in his mouth and pulled both triggers with his bare toes. The heavy charges of shot, reinforced by the water, nearly tore his head from his shoulders.

When the friends with whom he had been playing cards reached the room they found Weber lifeless on the floor and his wife beside him in a faint.

SCHOOLBOYS SAID TO BE ADEPT GAMBLERS

Roulette Apparatus Operated by 4th Form Class in Jersey School.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 9.—The Lawrenceville preparatory school is in a flurry over the confessed operation of a roulette wheel and other forms of gambling in the fourth form class which is to graduate in June. About sixty students are involved in the disclosure. The faculty has confiscated the apparatus and forbidden the players leaving the campus.

President Henry W. Green, of the board of trustees, and Head Master McPherson say the wheel was only a small pasteboard affair, such as may be bought at almost any department store as a toy, and that no boy lost more than $1.50. The other stories about say that occasionally gambling was kept up all night, and that some of the boys won and lost relatively large amounts of money.

It is known that a number of the students had to write home for money. The discovery was made by Prof. Beaumont, who happened suddenly upon the paraphernalia. The faculty has not as yet decided what punishment will be visited upon those involved.

BURNS TO DEATH IN FATHER'S ARMS

Miss Eva O'Brien's Dress Ignited When She Started Kitchen Fire.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Burned from head to foot by flames that enveloped her when her dress came in contact with the fire in the kitchen stove, Eva O'Brien, twenty-three years old, died yesterday in her home at No. 321 Hudson avenue, Brooklyn, before the arrival of an ambulance which had been summoned.

The young woman had just started the fire and was about to perform some household duties when, in some way, her dress touched the blaze. Unable to extinguish the flaming garment she screamed for help and attracted the attention of her parents, who were in the front of the apartment.

Mr. O'Brien rushed into the kitchen to find his daughter's clothing a mass of flame. He tried to beat out the blaze with his hands, but could not do so.

He then took the young woman to the sink and turned on the water, thinking he could put out the flames in that way. His wife came to his assistance, but despite their efforts the daughter's clothing continued to blaze. By this time the young woman, who had suffered intense agony, was unconscious and fell to the floor.

Mr. O'Brien rushed into the street and found Policeman McLaughlin, of the Adams street station. He immediately telephoned to the Brooklyn hospital for an ambulance. When Dr. Smith arrived he found the young woman dead.

VOLSTEAD REVISES HIS TARIFF SPEECH

He Says Cheaper Land in Canada Enables Cheaper Wheat Raising.

Globe Special Washington Service, 1417 G Street. WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 9.—In today's Congressional Record appears the speech of Representative Volstead which he has been holding out for the purpose of revision and amplification. As it appears in the official record Volstead's speech is devoted largely to an argument to show that the price of wheat is not fixed in Liverpool, and that the tariff on wheat makes the price relatively higher in Minnesota on that commodity. Volstead contends that Chicago and other large centers absorb the bulk of nearby wheat and therefore there is scarcity and competition at the Twin Cities resulting in higher prices than prevail elsewhere and higher than would prevail if the duty were taken off and wheat were permitted to come freely from Canadian fields. Volstead claims that cheaper land in Canada enables the farmer to raise wheat cheaper.

Mr. Lind interrupted and asked: "It being a fact that the price of wheat is higher in Minneapolis and it should continue to maintain the price does my friend believe that it would be good policy to follow a course which tends to cripple and eventually destroy those milling interests?"

Volstead replied that there was an abundance of wheat to the south and he would prefer this to Canadian wheat.

Mr. Gary's position is that the agreement is made by which the proprietors of the schools agree to furnish or procure positions for graduates of the schools, and the employment agency should pay a license to the state.
