

Leap Year Banquet

AN IDEA FOR A CHURCH OR CLUB ENTERTAINMENT

Women Are Now As Competent to Speak in Public as Men—They Owe Their Ability to the Training Received in Women's Clubs.

Here is an idea for an entertainment which this department will present free of charge to any one who wants it. It is for a leap year banquet which might be given for the benefit of a church, or by a woman's club, and would surely be productive of much pleasure and fun. Let the affair be gotten up entirely by women, who may ask their husbands, brothers or sweethearts to be their guests. If it was given for the benefit of a church, tickets could be sold at a dollar or two dollars a plate and a considerable sum netted for the parish. Have a woman in the chair as toastmaster, and a programme of speeches by women after the dinner. Brothers and men might be permitted to voice their gratitude for the entertainment before it was over. For a programme the women could take Shakespeare's "Seven Ages of Man," and in that way some very witty speeches might be prepared. Or there are many ways a good programme could be made, the speeches to be made in the aspect of son, brother, husband or father. One church in St. Paul had a leap-year entertainment, but it was not in the form of a banquet, and there were no speeches. But a leap-year banquet would surely make a hit and result in a good time.

Another suggestion for a programme might relate to the conditions of this particular leap year, as it is the first one in eight years. Much might be made out of the leap year idea. In these days of clubs and feminine organizations of various kinds, it is no longer difficult for women to make speeches, that is younger women. The older and more conservative women who were educated before the days of public utterances by their sex are not as able to appear in public as they are in middle life or indeed college girls. The latter are now fitted by appearance in debating clubs and college societies to speak before an audience so that when they go into society later on and join a woman's club it is not as hard for them as it would be for their mothers, for whom public speaking is out of the question.

Some may doubt whether this ability to speak before an audience is a desirable accomplishment for a woman, but this department has made up its mind that it is an excellent thing for a woman when not carried to an extreme. Many a woman would say, if asked, that he would not care to have his wife accomplish in that way, and yet surely he must admire more the woman who can rise, if called upon, and make a graceful little speech, than the one who gets upon her feet with difficulty, becomes red in the face, and is too frightened to make an intelligible remark. There are, however, few of the latter left now, thanks to the training that women have had in clubs.

It would certainly astonish many a man if he attended club meetings to hear women make extemporaneous speeches as well as they do. The writer has often been astonished at women, and surprised at the lack of this ability in many of them. In some way we expect almost any man to be able to say a few words in called upon, but it is the impression of the writer that nowadays the bulk of women do this sort of thing better than the bulk of men. No offense, brothers.

FASHIONS FROM VOGUE

Prepared Specially for THE GLOBE.

The dinner gown shown in the illustration is of black chenille fringe, flecked with jet beads, over white tulle. The tulle skirt is cut in seven gores, is tight fitting to well below the hips and is finished with a graduated plaited flounce. This skirt is veiled with white chiffon and over it is arranged a deep hip yoke of black chiffon laced with tiny jet beads with large maltese sewed at the intersection of the lines. Below are three overlapping flounces of the jetted chenille fringe of graduated widths, the upper one being the narrowest.

The bodice is made with a long narrow V opening in front and a short V at the back and has a yoke of white Maltese lace edged with bands of jet passementerie and bordered with chenille fringe which entirely covers the lower part of the bodice. The tiny sleeves are of lace and jet passementerie matching the yoke and are edged with the chenille fringe over ruffles of white chiffon spangled on the edge with jet beads.

The belt is a folded girde of hyacinth blue chiffon velvet, fastened by a small buckle in front and a slide of gold studded with brilliants and amethysts at the back.

A model somewhat similar to this is made of white chenille fringe with gold threads. The lines is of iron satin and the hip yoke, which is deeper than the one on the gown illustrated, is embroidered with gold. Below this are arranged the three flounces of white chenille fringe, the widest being a ruche-edged plaited ruffle of white chiffon. The bodice is low, being cut well off the shoulders and is covered with the chenille fringe head by a three-inch band of gold embroidery. This embroidery does duty for a sleeve and to it is sewed a flounce of the white chenille fringe.

Besides these deep chenille fringes, which are a decided novelty, silk fringes, both knotted and plain and varying in width from one to twelve inches are being much used on spring costumes.

was pavilion. The procession then started to the tomb, eight miles outside the city, the bands playing funeral dirges. The procession was two miles long and full of Oriental color. It was headed by a dragon, followed by lantern bearers and spearmen in fantastic attire, carrying banners and huge paper horses. Then came two tiers, gorgeous in color and surmounted by dragon heads. They were borne on the shoulders of a hundred men. The first tier was empty, being intended to cheat the devil. After the start of the procession the emperor received the foreign diplomats, and the Japanese minister, being the senior member, presented the condolence of the corps.

Patriotism Extraordinary.
TOKYO, March 14.—A Japanese woman at Takasaki, on learning that her only son had been exempted from active service on the ground that she was dependent upon his earnings, has committed suicide. In a letter she stated that she was about to kill herself in order that her son might be free to fight for his fatherland. She had pledged a dagger into her heart. Withdrawing the weapon, she handed it to her son who immediately volunteered for active service.

King Edward Holds Levee.
LONDON, March 14.—King Edward held the second levee of the season in the throne room of St. James palace at noon today. Large numbers of the king drove to the palace in state from Buckingham palace. The diplomatic corps was strongly represented, including Ambassador Choate and other members of the United States embassy. The attendance of cabinet ministers, naval and military officers, peers and members of the house of commons was also larger than usual.

Mrs. McCormick Dodges Bad Weather.
ST. PETERSBURG, March 14.—On account of the miserable weather in St. Petersburg, Mrs. McCormick, wife of the United States ambassador, has gone to Paris. She may extend her visit to the Mediterranean, but expects to return here within a month.

Inherited Traits.
As a result of investigations made in England, Prof. Karl Pearson thinks that, as a rule, ability, proclivity and the routine characteristics are inherited from parents, just as truly as physical characteristics are. He concludes, therefore, that intelligence may be trained, but not by education, but that schooling cannot create it. It is a product of breeding, and no nation that finds itself falling behind in the intellectual race can save itself through educational machinery. It must go back of the schools and look out for the quality of its human stock.—Philadelphia Record.

GOSSIP FROM GOTHAM.
Mrs. Jack Gallatin, the charming Pauline Cory, wealthy as she is and was in her own right, never got quite inside the magic circle, the center and circumference of which is Mrs. Astor. As Mrs. Ulman she will be welcomed with open arms—not because she is Mrs. Ulman, but because Elizabeth Dyer Jr. has placed upon her the stamp of his approval by appearing as best man at her wedding. Mr. Dyer's tact and judgment are his strong cards with the Astor set. He is as tactful as a society diplomat as he is popular as a cotton leader. The fact that Mrs. Ulman divorced her first husband is no bar at all—indeed, it were, drawing rooms in the inner set would have a sparse attendance. Then when it is taken into consideration that the bride of Mr. Dyer's business associate was the plaintiff and not the defendant in the action for divorce, she could not be regarded as blameworthy, if society possessed any moral code by which to determine the eligibility of its members.

Queen Dowager's Funeral Weid.
SEOUL, March 14.—The funeral of the queen dowager, who died in January, was held here today. The bier was placed on a catafalque at the west gate of the city, where Minister Allen and other diplomats gathered. It was a weird scene. Thousands of lantern bearers, soldiers and the populace in white dresses gathered around a bonfire until daylight. The emperor, attired in straw-colored robes and headress, performed his devotion over the body within a can-beautiful girls in the city to have luncheon with her on St. Patrick's day, and has made her own selection with fixed rules as her basis of comparison. Eyes must have a certain expression; the mouth must conform to a certain standard in size, curve and lip color; complexion must be measured by a standard of Mrs. Payne's selection, but there is nothing required in the way of noses. They may be aquiline, retroussé, Roman, flat, African or Grecian, so that this ignoring of the principal features of the human face has set the Art club by the ears, and those members who regard themselves as judges of feminine beauty are criticizing Mrs. Payne's idea as a month's work. The consequence is that the girls who have been selected are in trepidation lest their noses should not be of the proper artistic pattern and that their newspaper caricaturists will portray them with annoying exaggerations. So the luncheon may be confined to young women whose noses are as perfect as the cupid and month's work in Chicago is poverty stricken when it comes to that.

Flounces are shown in a multitude of styles: long waists, skirts, even outside wraps, this season. Where they are not pronounced the flounce effect is gained through some trimming or in the cutting. But the flounce is highly popular not alone on reception and evening gowns, but for house and afternoon wear and for simple morning dresses. Three-piece sets of cuffs and collars for spring wear are in vogue of all kinds and of heavy embroidery or linen richly finished with elaborate Persian designs. These take the place of the three-piece linen mull sets so popular last year.
