CLEAR THE ATTIC

BUT DO NOT GIVE THE RUBBISH TO THE NEEDY

In This Housecleaning Time Housewives Should Send to Relief Organizations Only Such Articles as They Can Use.

Women are apt to feel very charitably disposed during housecleaning time. The work of putting a house in order for the summer is not, of course, responsible for the philanthropic frame of mind, but housecleaning brings to light much buried treasure, and the thought is apt to occur to the housewife that one of the various charitable organizations will feel grateful in order that she will feel relieved if her attic is cleared for the benefit of the poor. The Relief society, the Salvation Army people and the Bethel are always glad to receive garments that can be made over, and the officers of the army are especially thankful to receive magazines at their barracks. It is an easy matter, too, to dispose of furniture that is no longer in use, for if the housewife has not her private pensioners, she has merely to telephone to one of the numerous "homes" or asylums in the city and a wagon will call for what she desires to dispose of. Some women are more anxious to have their attics cleared than they are to supply the needs of the poor and they send away garments that are utterly worthless, and furniture too battered and broken to be of use to anybody. The truck is carted away free of charge and the housekeepers who are guilty of the impertinence enjoy the glow of self-satisfaction which is inspired by what they consider their kindly action so they are gainers by the transaction. Moreover, the people who receive these worthless donations make no criticism and the donors never suspect that their contributions are promptly consigned to the refuse heap. But those people think things. It would be well for the woman who is benevolently disposed to ask herself whether her object is to get rid of rubbish free of cost or to aid the needy before she telephones to any one of the various organizations who state that they are glad to receive contributions. Worn out finery or even half-worn finery is not a valuable donation, and neither is discarded bric-a-brac, or furniture absolutely beyond repair. But half-worn woollen garments, shoes that have been discarded because they did not fit the wearer, iron beds that have been relegated to the attic because brass ones have taken their place, and clothes which children have outgrown are always thankfully received by those who work among the needy. They will find some means of distributing them without paperizing the recipients. It is delightful to read of old articles filled with all kinds of relics of other days, but the modern woman is beginning to realize that such a place is unsanitary and she no longer permits even sentiment to stand in the way of a yearly or semi-yearly clearance.

Mainly About People

The Brecky club, composed of high school students, will entertain the members of the Central high school debating team Friday evening at Woodruff hall, Merriam Park. Heretofore it has been customary for the school to entertain the members of any team which had won a state championship, but last year the school board forbade the use of the funds of any of the school organizations for this purpose, so the students got together and formed the Brecky club which could give receptions as it has no official connection with the school. Miss Minor and Miss McPetridge will act as chaperons.

The Bon Ton Dramatic club will present the three-act farce, "The Doctor, or Tell Your Wife," at Paul Martin's hall this evening. The entertainment is given under the auspices of Harmony Camp No. 244, R. N. A. The cast will be as follows: Dr. Joyce, Cecil E. M. Sapsford; Morton Ellwood, Walle Hoffman; Puffer, Julius Morin; Fanny Joyce, Hattie Rice; Edith Harrington, Marie Hessler; Hannah Ellis, Maude Williams; Alice Ogden, Hannah Tubbsing. Between the acts there will be specialties by Miss Pearl Buel.

Children of Revolution Meet.
WASHINGTON, D. C., April 20.—Mrs. Daniel Lothrop, the founder of the organization, today called to order the National Society of the Children of the American Revolution, in the absence of Mrs. Julius C. Burrows, the president, who is out of the city. The reports of officers showed the society to be in excellent shape. There has been a large increase in membership, the total being more than 6,000. The society has contributed to the Continental hall fund $1,130. Finds Where Curtius Leaped.
ROME, April 20.—Sig. Giacomo Boni, the famous archeologist, who is directing the excavations of the Roman Forum, made today what is considered the greatest discovery of many years.

He came upon a place where there was an altar dedicated to Marcus Curtius, a patriotic Roman youth, who, in 362 B. C., to placate the gods jumped, completely armed, on horseback, into a chasm which had opened in the Forum and which the soothsayers declared could not be filled except by the sacrifice of the chief wealth or strength of the Roman people. After Curtius' sacrifice, tradition says, the chasm immediately closed up.

The orifice of the chasm found by Sig. Boni is formed by twelve large stones roughly sculptured. The archeologist also found a hole which contained the remains of sacrifices made in later years to young Curtius on the altar.

FASHIONS FROM VOGUE

Prepared Specially for THE GLOBE.

Gun-metal chiffon broadcloth is the material used for the smart visiting costume shown by the accompanying illustration.

The taffeta foundation of the same shade of gray, is finished with several full ruffles with a fine wire running in the hems to give support to the outer skirt, which is cut in eleven gorges and is trimmed with three overlapping shaped flounces.

Heading the upper flounce are round medallions of rich cream colored chiffon velvet embroidered in black and burnt orange silk and tiny jet beads. The bodice opens in front and is made with a yoke and stock of cream-colored Cluny bordered by two shaped capes of the broadcloth applied with the embroidered velvet medallions. The sleeves are particularly pretty, are finished with mousseline ruffles edged with Cluny lace and the hat is of black straw trimmed with trumpet flowers and a gracefully draped black lace veil.

This season's hats are unusually pretty and the shapes are so varied that there is no difficulty in selecting a becoming model.

Flowers and foliage are being more used than ever and lovely indeed are some of the flower hats for mid-summer wear.

One of these hats, which is a good example of many others, has a slightly rolling brim forming blunt points in front and on the sides, made of small rose leaves in dark tones of green and this is edged with twisted stems of the palest shades of green with small clusters of tiny pink rosebuds fastened at the front and right side points, and a larger cluster at the left side.

The crown is flat and is entirely covered by small crushed pink roses. With such a hat a white lace veil may be worn in similar manner to the one illustrated or a long delicately tinted pink chiffon or mousseline veil may be fastened around the crown, the front turned back and the ends hanging loose at the back.

LILY WHITES MERELY KEEP ORGANIZATION

Louisiana Democrats Carry the State With Little Opposition.

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 20.—In the general election the Democrats swept the state, electing their ticket headed by former Justice N. C. Blanchard for governor and practically a solid representation in both houses of the legislature. The regular Republicans put no ticket in the field and practically no negro votes were cast. The Lily Whites control the federal offices here and made their contest simply to maintain their organization.

At Gonzales, in Ascension parish, Capt. Sam Moore, a prominent merchant and planter and leader of the Republicans, was instantly killed by Deputy Sheriff Ed Smith. Moore attempted to post dodgers containing pictures of two negroes holding minor positions under the Democratic administration. Smith interfered and shot the latter dead when the latter attempted to draw a weapon.

The legislature just elected will choose a United States senator. Senator Murphy J. Foster having been nominated in the primaries, will receive practically the solid vote of both houses.
