HE SPEAKS WHERE LINCOLN SPOKE

President Roosevelt Takes Part in the Memorial Services at Gettysburg.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., May 30.—On historic Cemetery hill, overlooking ground hallowed by the blood of half a hundred thousand brave men and in the presence of a concourse of thousands President Roosevelt today delivered an address.

On nearly the same spot, on Nov. 19, 1863, President Lincoln delivered his immortal address. President Roosevelt was escorted to the cemetery on the battlefield by a body of several hundred veterans of the Civil war. They were preceded by several organizations, including a squadron of United States cavalry, the Third United States artillery and the Marine band of Washington.

As President Roosevelt rose to speak a downpour of rain began and continued throughout the time he addressed the great assemblage. Referring in the beginning of his speech to the inclusion of Gov. Pennypacker to the death of Senator Quay, the president said:

Gov. Pennypacker alluded to the fact that today Pennsylvania mourns its senator. The regimen, which Senator Quay was instrumental in raising took part in this battle of Gettysburg—the battle in which Gov. Pennypacker shared. Senator Quay was not with it. He had gone with another regiment and it is appropriate at this time to recall the fact that, when the term of service of that regiment expired, just before Frederickburg, Senator Quay declined to accept the discharge and continued as a volunteer with the army that fought at Frederickburg and won the medal of honor on that bloody day.

In his speech President Roosevelt said: He is but a poor American who, looking at this field, does not feel within himself a deeper reverence for the nation's past and a higher purpose to make the nation's future rise level to her past.

They stood for the life of effort, not the life of ease. They had that love of country, that love of justice, that love of their fellow men, without which power and resources are but a man's plaything.

Exactly as in time of war, courage is the cardinal virtue of the soldier, in time of peace, honesty, using the word in its deepest and broadest significance, is the essential basic virtue, without which all else avails nothing.

Would Not Ask Mediation.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 30.—Kogoro Takahira, Japanese minister to the United States, arrived in St. Louis today accompanied by a single secretary. It was suggested to him that there already has been many friendly proposals for mediation by friendly powers, and especially by this government.

"War," he said, "is like trying a case before the supreme court. Japan and Russia are now in the midst of this contest. In trying to make a settlement, the best case must be left to the new God. I have heard much talk about arbitration and mediation in the newspapers, but I have heard nothing of it officially, either from the American government or any other. It does not believe Japan would at this time be willing to make any overtures. As this war is one for peace, Japan would not doubt welcome that outcome, but the initiative, I judge, would have to come from the other side. If Russia would agree to withdraw from Manchuria and would consent to the things that we asked before the outbreak, we would undoubtedly listen. But I do not think that anything of that kind is likely to occur just now. It is too late for that."

Three I-Legs.

of winning. So we, the people, can preserve liberty and our greatness in time of peace by exercising exercises in the virtues of honesty, of self-reliance and of fair dealing between man and man.

It was because you men of the Civil war both knew how to use liberty temperately and how to defend it at need that we and our children and our children's children shall hold you in honor forever. Above all we meet here to pay homage to the officers and enlisted men who served and fought and died without having as their chiefs had, the right to write their names on the tablets of fame to the nation who were buried and fought in the trenches of the field of battle, who were killed in camps, who were killed in the hospitals. Today, all over this land our people may do but reverence homage to the dead who died that the nation might live; and we pay homage also to the living who are still with us.

All are at one now, the sons of those who were the blue and the sons of those who were the gray, and all are united in paying respect to the memory of those who fell, each of them giving his life for his country. It is the duty of every citizen to hold ourselves ready to die nobly, to hold ourselves ready to demand of her sons the ultimate proof of it.

It was expected that Eugene P. Ware, commissioner of education, would follow with an address, but as the rain continued to fall it was deemed advisable that the commissioner Ware not to speak. Instead, the address was pronounced by Rev. Dr. Clutz.

The president and party left for Washington at 4 o'clock.

GEN. KUROPATKIN MARCHES SOUTH

LONDON, May 31.—According to reports from Japanese headquarters at Tokyo, Gen. Kuropatkin is largely engaged in building roads and bridges.

The Standard's correspondent says that Gen. Kuropatkin is preparing to celebrate the victory on the Yalu, while almost simultaneously the Japanese first army was informed of the Kin-chow victory. The same correspondent indicates the reason for delay in the operations is that the force that is being landed at the Kin-chow is to have struck the fringe of the rainy season. The downpour has been very heavy.

Gen. Kuropatkin, the Telegraph's St. Petersburg correspondent says, is the other two enemies, one at home and one abroad. The general's military reputation is undergoing a terrible ordeal; he is also accused of improper conduct as minister of war, to make proper arrangements for the emperor is alleged to be so dissatisfied that he would dismiss both Alexieff and Kuropatkin were it not for public opinion. The general's impression among the highest classes is that the fall of Port Arthur ought to constitute a serious blow to the prestige of Japan succeeds in this aim, and that if best interest would be to make peace; but nobody has the moral courage to suggest such a suggestion to the emperor.

RUSSO-GERMAN AGREEMENTS.

The correspondent asserts that an agreement is drawn whereby Germany promises armed support to Russia if necessary to prevent England and the United States from attempting to subvert the far Eastern situation. The international congress, and declares that the recent relaxation of anti-Jewish laws by Russia is the outcome of the desire of the British and the interior to conciliate American opinion.
