TWENTY-EIGHTH INFANTRY STATES REGIMENT ARRIVES AT SNELLING

Ten Companies of Regiment That Saw Arduous Service in the Philippines Reach St. Paul, Under Command of Lieut. Col. William L. Pitcher

At the Fort the Soldiers Are Greeted by Their Commander, Col. Owen J. Sweet, Whom They Cheer Lustily

The Twenty-eighth infantry, consisting of seasoned veterans of the Philippine war, arrived at Fort Snelling yesterday afternoon and evening, and immediately started to make itself at home. Men have camped in the muddy grounds of Luzon, and other points in the Philippines, found the comfortable quarters at the fort to their liking, and welcomed the change from campaigning to the quiet life in a garrison.

Old army mules, hardened to the continual strain of good natured abuse from the drivers, pulled and tugged at the straps which connected the loads of trunks and knapsacks. Drivers who had piloted teams through muddy roads, extending between tangled jungles, or over lava flows, welcomed the change which gave them a hard, well paved American pathway for their labors.

With the stolid indifference with which a soldier regards hardship, however, the men have enjoyed themselves on the way. Officers who have seen many long trips, and had an opportunity to judge of the various characters of our enterprising soldiers of the Twenty-eighth was as near perfect as possible to reach, and that the idea of selling the apples at auction made the most of the journey, spending the time with the innocent amusements which are introduced in such a trip.

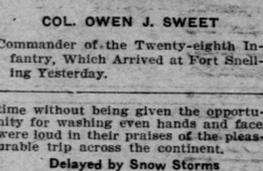

A mock court-martial while en route was one of the features of the trip. One private, charged with stealing a pair of shoes, was placed on trial before a tribunal in which company members were appointed to defend him and a jury drawn. Everything was run with a minimum of army justice, and the defendant threw a scare into the camp of the prosecution when he declared that it was no offense for him to steal a pair of shoes, for it was doubtful if a genuine bean could be found in the can.

After the jury had been locked in a room for over half an hour and sent back to the barracks with a verdict of "Not guilty, but don't do it again." Greeted All Along the Line. It took twelve passenger coaches to carry the first real section of the regiment, consisting of fourteen officers and 214 privates, and they were well greeted all along the line. People realized that the past record of the men more than entitled them to consideration and tendered a hearty manner to welcome the soldiers who had risked life and limb in the performance of their duty.

Regular traveling rations were served to the men at various points while en route. Three times a day hot coffee was dispensed by caterers, with whom the men were ideal travelers. The coffee always had to pass the officers' inspection, and nothing was allowed to get by with the marks of a soldier's hand.

FIVE COMPANIES IN FIRST SECTION

Five companies, A, B, C, D and E, were in the section which first came to the new regiment. Companies I, J and K were dropped off at Fort Lincoln, Neb., where they will be in garrison until further orders. The men of the last two companies were somewhat annoyed by the fact that they were to be separated from the rest of the regiment, for soldiers of the Twenty-eighth take particular pride in the regimental drills and ceremonies, and thought they would like to be together in a place where the entire regiment could turn out.

COL. OWEN J. SWEET, Commander of the Twenty-eighth Infantry, Which Arrived at Fort Snelling Yesterday.

A delay of twelve hours was encountered in Nebraska, due to snow storms which have swept the plains during the past few days. During the storm, and the intense cold which accompanied them, the soldiers suffered no discomforts, aside from the delays, as the cars were adequately heated.

Col. Sweet's Career. Col. Sweet was born in Connecticut fifty-eight years ago, and at an early age, after attending Union college, enlisted in the One Hundred and Thirty-seventh New York infantry, being soon commissioned as a second lieutenant. He was immediately sent to the front, and by good judgment and conspicuous gallantry, earned his spurs as a soldier and an officer.

He was in Sherman's march to the sea. It is of this fact that the veteran soldier is most proud, and which has been a part of his record. The historic march during which time the men were forced in a great part to live on the surplus of the army, and which had itself been devastated by four years of constant struggle, forms a vivid chapter in the life of its sole surviving officer in actual service.

Rejoins the Army. He was immediately returned to army life, this time starting again at the bottom of the regular army service, as a private in the Twenty-eighth infantry. He started up the line, being promoted for gallantry and good judgment year after year, and seeing the Mexican border, in Texas, and far West against roving bands of Indians and as far north as the Canadian border. He fought the Indians in every campaign, and they are fought, and time and time again campaigned in long forced marches against red men.

Here Twice Before. This makes the third time that he has been in St. Paul. In 1888 Col. Sweet was here on detached service, and again in 1891, as lieutenant colonel of the Twenty-first.

John J. Jacoby, who was defeated in the race for the legislature from the Thirty-seventh district, yesterday filed his list of expenses with the county auditor. He declares that the campaign cost him $67.75. Going to balls and parties, meeting new friends and purchasing cigars and other refreshments cost Mr. Jacoby almost $30.

CONFIRMS TITLE IN THE OCCUPANT

Supreme Court Says 15 Years' Adverse Possession of Private Land is Enough

In deciding the case of Theodore Maas and L. L. Mathews, appellants, vs. Andrew Burdette, respondent, the state supreme court yesterday handed down an important ruling. In effect the court holds that a man who goes on private land in the belief that it is a portion of the public domain and open to homestead entry may obtain title to the land by fifteen years' continuous adverse possession, in conformity to the rights of the real owner of the property.

Other Decisions

Other syllabi filed by the court yesterday were: Almira Cochran, respondent, vs. James E. Cochran, appellant. An action by the wife for a divorce held: 1. Confined cruelty will be revived by subsequent acts.
