GILFILLAN MEN TO INFLATE BOOM

Minneapolis Man Expected to Declare Himself Senatorial Candidate This Week

Reports are general that J. B. Gillilan, of Minneapolis, will this week open an active campaign for the place in the United States senate now held by Senator Moses E. Clapp, of St. Paul. Mr. Gillilan some months ago announced that he was a candidate for the senatorship, but following the Republican state convention, which declared for Senator Clapp's return, he has been inactive.

With the defeat of R. C. Dunn for governor and the upheaval that naturally followed, with its consequent new political alignments, strong pressure is being brought to bear on the enemies of Clapp to bring Gillilan into the fight as a determined and aggressive candidate.

Senator Clapp's friends declare their faith in his re-election, but there is no disguising the fact that they are very much frightened at the condition of affairs.

Interest in the situation was revived last night by the presence in St. Paul of Carl L. Wallace, a Hennepin county member of the house, and L. C. Stephenson, a former Hennepin county member. They mingled with the politicians at the St. Paul hotels, and it was not disputed that they were acting as advance scouts for the Gillilan boom, which is to be launched early in the week in Minneapolis. Members were buttonholed and interviewed as to their senatorial preferences, and while both men said they were simply looking in on the speakership fight there was every evidence that they were sounding sentiment on the senatorial situation.

Clapp in Danger

"I have learned enough to know that Clapp is walking on a basket of eggs," a Minneapolis man said last night. "He will fall of re-election, and the night will be led by Mr. Gillilan."

It is reported at Minneapolis that the Gillilan campaign in the senate branch of the legislature is to be intrusted to the management of Senators E. E. Smith and J. F. Calhoun. The Hennepin county steering committee is to select the active managers in the fight.

The Minneapolis newspapers, it is claimed by Gillilan's friends, will come out for him in a few days, and the big business interests in the Flour City are expected to take off their coats for him.

Thomas Lowry, of Minneapolis, has returned from a visit to St. Louis, and declines to discuss the senatorial situation with the public. By several members of the Hennepin delegation he is regarded as a receptive candidate, but is regarded as a move in Mr. Lowry's interest.

Joel P. Heatwole, of Northfield, is bitterly anti-Clapp, but has denied that he has claims on the place for himself. While Mr. Heatwole declared some months ago that he was a candidate for the senatorship, it is said by his friends that he will now be content to help elect the next senator.

Kellogg and Tawney

Talk of the candidacy of Frank B. Kellogg, of St. Paul, for the senatorial term has grown within the past few days. Mr. Kellogg's denials are not taken seriously, and at least two Ramsey county members claim to have assurances from sources close to the national committee that he will become a candidate before the session begins.

Congressman James A. Tawney, of Winona, is also credited with having an eye on the seat in the upper house reserved for a Minnesota member, and there is talk of a deal between Kellogg and Tawney, with Tawney breaking the ice by preceding Kellogg in the fight.

Senator Clapp visited Minneapolis yesterday and met a number of the Hennepin county members. His friends profess to believe that the odds of opposition to the senator is mere talk.

"We have pledges from enough members to guarantee Senator Clapp's re-election," said W. W. Rich, one of his closest friends, last night. "He is the candidate of the Republican party and will receive the support of the men who have pledged themselves to him, with votes from others who refused to pledge themselves, but were for Senator Clapp all the time."

Friends of Senator Clapp assign much of the unfriendly sentiment against him to the Twin City newspapers.

"Not a Republican daily newspaper of either St. Paul or Minneapolis is for him," one of his close friends said yesterday. "The newspapers simply publish everything unfriendly to Clapp and nothing in his interest appears in any of the dailies."

Senator Clapp's attitude in the recent state campaign has apparently satisfied neither faction of the Republican party in the state. This is shown by the hostilities that are said to exist against him. Among the politicians who are counted on to do nothing in his interest, if not to openly oppose Clapp, are R. C. Dunn, Gov. S. R. Van Sant, Judge L. W. Collins and Joel P. Heatwole.

BATTLE FLAG TO HONOR FUNERAL OF VETERAN

Historic Banner Will Head Orcutt Funeral Procession

The blood-stained and tattered old flag of the famous First Minnesota regiment was yesterday removed from its place in the rotunda of the state capitol and will today appear at the head of the funeral procession for Freeman M. Orcutt, a veteran of the First regiment, who died Friday at Minneapolis.

This is the second time that the colors of the First regiment have been taken from the capitol to honor a dead veteran of the regiment. Col. C. T. Trowbridge, custodian of the capitol, was given permission to remove the flag by Gov. Van Sant. Mr. Orcutt was a pioneer of Benton county, Minnesota, and enlisted there at the outbreak of the war.

MORE FACTORY HELP

State Employs More Men and Fewer Children

Comparative figures, just compiled by John O'Donnell, state labor commissioner, show a healthy increase in the number of factory employes in Minnesota in the past three years, but while there is a large increase in the total number of employes there is a decrease in an inverse ratio in the number of children employed in the factories.

In 1904 the number of factory inspections had increased to 4,570 from 3,657 in 1901, or an increase of 33 per cent. The field of inspection was somewhat extended and a closer espionage was given the factories of the state.

During the same period the number of employes in the factories had increased from 85,393 in 1901 to 115,085 in 1904, a gain of 34 per cent. In contrast to the increase in the number of employes was the decrease in child labor. With 863 children found in the factories of the state in 1901, the inspectors in the fiscal year just closed found only 770, a decrease of 34 per cent.

"It is one of the healthiest signs of the times," Mr. O'Donnell said, in commenting on the condition. "It shows a higher conception of the duty of the parent to the child in giving him the opportunity to secure an education in his youth. But from a material side it shows an improved business condition, where the parent is able to provide for his family without invoking the aid of his children. Minnesota is one of the leading states in the Union in its freedom from the curse of child labor."

M'DERMOTT HOT AFTER OIL INSPECTOR'S JOB

Canby Man Denies Story That He Has Withdrawn From Race

J. A. McDermott, of Canby, Yellow Medicine county, is in St. Paul looking after the fences in his campaign for state oil inspector under the incoming state administration.

"Reports that I have withdrawn from the contest for the place are unfounded," he said yesterday. "and I have the support of the traveling men of the state, who did so much for Mr. Johnson's election." Mr. McDermott is himself a knight of the grip.
